PATRICK AT HOME FOR THANKSGIVING

Pardon Went Astray in the Mail, but Was Forwarded to Sing Sing in the Afterncon.

SPED IN AUTO TO WIFE HERE

Friend, ex-Cellmate, and Governor's Messenger Accompanied Him to This City.

MILLIKEN WILL FIGHT ON

Brother-in-Law Says He Will Spend $150,000 More for Patrick's Vindication.

HE WILL GO TO ST. LOUIS

If Proved Innocent of Rice Murder, Released Man May Become Sole Trustee of Dead Man's Millions.

Albert T. Patrick departed from Sing Sing Prison at 4:25 o'clock yesterday afternoon. His release was delayed many hours because the pardon from Gov. Dix, which was to have been delivered at the prison by a special messenger, was put in the mail by mistake and went astray. Patrick as he quit the prison in which he had spent eleven years following his conviction of the murder of William Marsh Rice, the Texas millionaire, in this city, seemed to be in good health. His face had a ruddy glow, and showed no traces of his long confinement.

His eyes were clear, and he wore the steel-rimmed spectacles which he adopted soon after he went to the death cell. He was said to be fifteen pounds heavier than when he was convicted, and, though his baldness had increased, there were no gray hairs in his head. He wore the black suit and black shoes provided by the State for released prisoners, a low, turned-down collar and a fur-lined overcoat belonging to his friend, A. R. Barker of Peekskill, who waited in his automobile outside the prison to take Patrick to his home in Harlem.

As the iron gate of the prison closed behind Patrick, he came slowly up the steps to freedom, his face showing no emotion. At the head of the steps he paused to shake hands with the newspaper reporters who awaited him there. Below him the prison keepers gathered to watch his departure.

Will Fight for Vindication.

"I don't think I care to make a statement," he said. "I have spent more than eleven years in prison, and I realize that in my long incarceration I must have lost my perspective as to what has been going on in the world. Judgment dictates that I regain that perspective before I decide upon my future plans. I expect always to continue to fight for my vindication, and to fight to clear my name of the unjust stigma which has rested upon it. I don't feel animosity toward any one. My philosophy prevents that. All I can say now is that I am going back to my wife, who is ill."

As Patrick mentioned his wife, who has worked unceasingly for his release, his voice trembled and the muscles of his face twitched. It was the first time he displayed any emotion. He was asked if he would attempt to practice law, and he said that he did not know; that it was too soon to think of future plans. He declared his health was good.

"I always feel well," he said with a smile.

He shook hands three times with Warden Kennedy in bidding him farewell.

"Good by, Patrick," Head Keeper James P. Connaughton called to him, "I wish you good luck. Your Thanksgiving dinner is waiting for you."

As Patrick stepped outside the prison into the crisp air he found himself facing a battery of cameras. He at first protested at being photographed, but when he saw the photographers were determined to take his picture, he removed his hat to assist them. He then climbed into Mr. Barker's auto, which had been waiting in front of the prison for him since 4 o'clock in the morning.

Starts for New York.

With Mr. Barker was his brother-in-law, Thomas Maher, who served a term in Sing Sing for forgery. He was for three years a cell mate of Patrick. Maher was pardoned a year ago for services he gave the State in an investigation of graft conditions in the prison. He became much attached to Patrick, and was employed after his release by John T. Milliken of St. Louis, Patrick's brother-in-law, to help in the fight for the lawyer's freedom. W. J. Mothersall, the Governor's special messenger, was also a passenger in the auto.

Patrick, it was learned yesterday, knew on Wednesday afternoon that he was to be pardoned. The news was carried to him by his wife. Gov. Dix instructed Mothersall to bring the pardon to the prison on Wednesday night. It was the Governor's plan to have it delivered to Patrick in time to enable him to leave the prison at 5.30 o'clock yesterday morning. There was another pardon to be sent to the prison and eleven commuted sentences. It was intended to send these and several other papers by mail. By some mistake Patrick's pardon was put in the mail pouch

Pardon Went Astray.

Messenger Mothersall went to the Albany Post Office and endeavored to get the pardon out of the mail, but was unable to do so. He then departed for

STEINHEIL SUIT SETTLED.

Auth r and Publisher Expunge Libelous Matter and Pay $5,000 Damages.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Mme. Steinheil's libel suit was settled in the High Court of Justice to-day. The defendants, Hargrave L. Adam, the author, and Thomas Werner Laurie, the publisher, of the book "Woman and Crime," in which the libels were contained, withdrew all imputations and charges. A certain sum was agreed upon and paid Mme. Steinheil as compensation, and all reference to the Steinheil case was ordered to be expunged from the book. On this understanding the tragic widow withdrew her action for $50,000 damages. No suggestion of the amount paid in settlement was offered in court, but it is understood that the sum agreed upon was $5,000, to include the costs.

Mme. Steinheil, who now lives in a London suburb, was not called upon to make a personal public denial of the charges made against her in the book. Prior to the hearing, a consultation took place between Mr. Justice Darling and F. E. Smith, Mme. Steinheil's counsel. It was then agreed that, considering the full apology and the withdrawal of all imputations by the defendants, the plaintiff's presence in the box was not necessary. She attended court, accompanied by several French friends.

There was no mistaking her identity. She cast her large, lustrous black eyes around the benches, surveying Judge, counsel and spectators with sad interest. She was magnificently dressed in a perfectly fitting velvet costume of peacock blue, with a large black picture hat, trimmed with pink roses and squirrel tails. Over her face a huge blue spotted veil was drawn.

SUBWAY EXPRESS TIE-UP.

Thanksgiving Crowds Delayed Half an Hour at 145th Street.

Thousands of persons were delayed half an hour on the Broadway branch of the Subway last night because something happened to a south-bound express above 168th Street.

The train "went dead" at the 168th Street station. No passenger was permitted to leave the train, but just before it finally began making progress once more the guards let hundreds of persons get on. This increased the load so much that the express refused to budge with its burden beyond 145th Street.

There everybody was ordered out of the train. As the motorman had run beyond his stopping point it took ten minutes to empty the cars. Another big crowd had massed on the station platform in consequence of the suspension of schedule.

At last the damaged express was dragged to 137th Street and side-tracked and downtown traffic moved once more. But the passengers in the 145th Street station cooled their heels while train after train passed without stopping. The passengers were taken on in half an hour.

RAID ON WARSHIP STEWARD.

$4,800 Government Money Taken from Mother-In-Law's House.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 28.—When United States Judge Reilstab issued an order to-day to have George P. Davis, steward of the United States battleship Louisiana, show cause on Dec. 5 next why $4,800, found by Government officers at his wife's mother home in Jersey City, should not be turned over to the United States Government, it became known for the first time that the Jersey City house was raided last night and the $4,800 taken. This money is now in the possession of Deputy United States Marshal George D. Bower of this city.

Deputy Marshal Bower said to-night that the family of the steward did not interfere with him in his search for the money.

The raid was made following information obtained from a witness in the Davis court-martial at Norfolk, Va., yesterday. This witness said he had reason to believe that Davis had the money at his Jersey City home.

Bower appeared before United States Judge Reilstab to-day, and obtained an order calling upon Davis to show cause why this money should not be turned over to the United States Government. The order is returnable Dec. 5 in the United States court here.

FEDERALS KILL FEDERALS.

In Ousting Mexican Rebels They Fire on Each Other at Night.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 28.—The Government troops have dislodged a number of rebels from their positions near Chalco, about thirty miles from the capital, but credit for the exploit is somewhat lessened by the fact that two Federal detachments, the Twenty-ninth and Sixteenth Infantry, had been fighting each other during the latter part of the engagement.

The sortie against the insurrectos was at night, the Federal commander dividing his force and marching against the rebels from two sides. The fighting was spirited, regardless of the Federals' inability to see the enemy in the darkness.

An officer of one detachment recognized the bugle calls of the other, and on investigation disclosed the fact that the rebels had disappeared and that bullets were being exchanged between the two sections of the Government forces. At least ten Federals were killed in that part of the encounter.

Reports of travelers and mail advices indicate that conditions in various parts of the republic are worse than is generally known in the capital, and more widespread. At least ten encounters have taken place the past three days, the Federals reporting victories.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 28.—Thanksgiving, usually unobserved in Mexico, was celebrated to-day in Juarez on reports of a rebel defeat at Guzman, and on the arrival of two pieces of artillery and 100 troops from Chihuahua.

Among the twenty-five rebels killed in the Guzman attack was Major O. Cano, a rebel leader of some prominence. The Federal loss was eight killed.

FEDERAL INQUIRY IN GLEN LOCH WRECK

Inter-State Commission Hurries Men to Investigate the Disaster That Killed 4 and Injured 40.

STRONGER RAILS ARE NEEDED

State Railroad Official Lays Disaster to Sagging Bridge Girder—Steel Cars Averted Large Mortality.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Stirred by the wreck of the Pennsylvania express at Glen Loch, Penn., last night, when four persons were killed and more than two score persons were injured, Charles C. McChord, Inter-State Commerce Commissioner, who has charge of the commission's accident bureau, at once ordered Chief Inspector H. K. Belnap to the scene to investigate the accident. James E. Howard, engineering physicist of the Government bureau of standards, was asked to accompany Mr. Belnap to do the technical work of examination.

Members of the commission have viewed with growing concern the increasing frequency of wrecks of express trains, and the two men sent to Glen Loch are charged particularly to learn if possible whether last night's wreck was due to excessive pressure which caused a rail to break. The commission has a strong impression that many of the recent derailments have been the result of the high speed of the increasingly heavy trains bringing pressure upon the rails which they were unable to withstand.

Ever since the investigation by the commission of the Lehigh Valley wreck at Manchester, N. Y., last year, wherein twenty-nine persons lost their lives, members of the board and experts who have studied the question have been coming to the conclusion that it will be necessary to change the methods of steel rail manufacture to overcome the structural defects, the presence of which cannot now be determined at the mills.

Defect Developed by Fast Trains.

In the official report on the Lehigh Valley wreck, which was investigated by Messrs. Belnap, Howard and three assistants, these statements were made concerning the rail which was thought to have caused the disaster:

In the head of this rail there were transverse fissures, and from the report of Mr. Howard it appears that defects of this character cannot be determined except by chance. It further appears that they are of a more dangerous character than piping, since they are developed after the rail is laid. Mr. Howard further states that the rolling of the head of the rail by heavy wheel pressures introduces internal strain in the steel. This strain reaches its greatest intensity on the gauge side of the head of the rail, where the flow of the steel takes place in a lateral direction.

It is further shown that no foreign substance in the steel is needed to account for the presence of these fissures, and that they invariably occur on the gauge side of the rail. From these and other facts set forth it seems that these fissures are not defects of mill practice, and that they do not exist in a new rail before it is laid.

The report of Mr. Howard further states that the development of these transverse fissures suggests that the limit of wheel pressures has been reached and probably surpassed on rails of the usual width and shape of head, and that the increasing occurrence of accidents of this character is a warning of this fact.

Great Increase in Derailments.

The same report called attention to the fact that the commission's records showed that the number of derailments due to broken rails increased from 78 in 1902 to 240 in 1911, while in the decade the 2,059 derailments caused by broken rails resulted in 106 killed and 4,112 injured. The report then went on:

From the report of Mr. Howard it would appear that the danger zone on the use of steel rails, as at present manufactured, has been reached. And, since it is supposed that transverse fissures are the direct result of high wheel pressure acting on hard steel, a complete investigation should be made for the purpose of scientifically determining the matter and ascertaining a remedy. Until such an investigation has been made the danger of similar accidents will exist.

The report declares that "it seems apparent that the remedy lies in the diminishing of the wheel pressures and the lowering of the direct compressive and bending stresses."

The Interstate Commerce Commission is now consulting railroad officials on the subject of the recent wrecks of fast trains and an effort will be made to find some means to decrease the number of such accidents.

BRIDGE OR RAIL CAUSED WRECK.

Some Think Heavy Train Displaced One of the Girders.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—Four persons, including two Pullman conductors and two passengers, were killed and at least forty-three injured in the wreck of the Cleveland and Cincinnati express on the Pennsylvania Railroad, which was derailed at Glen Loch, about twenty-five miles west of this city, early this morning. Eight cars, filled with sleeping passengers, plunged down a thirty-foot embankment, one coach turning over in the descent.

The victims of the accident were:

DEAD.

BALDWIN, J. A., Brooklyn; Pullman car conductor.
COLLINS, JAMES, Pittsburgh.
JONES, F. R., New York; Pullman car conductor.
PINKEY, L. D., Pittsburgh.

INJURED.

ANDERSON, H. C., Hagerstown, Md.; lacerated scalp and left hand.
BROWNING, J. H., New York; fractured ribs.
BUSH, BERTRAND, Harrisburg; badly bruised.
CALDWELL, G. H., Nashville; back strained and head cut.
CAVALLONA, D. G., Germantown; cut about face.
DIETRICH, WILLIAM, Cleveland; feet slightly injured.
DIETRICH, Mrs. WILLIAM, Cleveland; bruised about body.
FENENCE, STEPHEN, East Brownsville, Penn.; concussion of the brain.
GOLDBERG, CHARLES, New York; arm sprained.
GRAY, C. L., Hagerstown; scalp cut.
GRIGGS, WILLIAM H., Trenton; badly bruised.
GRIGGS, Mrs. CARRIE, Trenton; cuts and bruises.
HICKEY, Mrs. JOHN, Altoona; cut about face and bruised.
HOKE, H. F., Harrisburg; bruised jaw and back.
HOSKO, Mrs. B., Cleveland; fractured leg.

MAIL DESTROYED BY SUFFRAGETTES

Militant Seekers for Votes Pour Acid in Some Letter Boxes, Set Fire to Others.

ORGANIZED RAID IN LONDON

Provincial Towns Are Scenes of Similar Outrages in Which Ingenious Devices Are Used.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The ingenuity of the militant suffragette party has taken a new phase, which will cause inconvenience and loss to thousands of persons.

An organized raid was made to-night on the pillar letter boxes throughout the city of London in the West End and many of the suburbs, and also in several provincial towns, including Birmingham and Nottingham.

When the postmen went on their evening rounds to collect the letters they discovered in the boxes acids and black, sticky fluids of various kinds, in some cases inflammable materials, such as rags soaked in paraffin.

As a result of this the addresses on the letters in a large number of cases were partly or wholly obliterated.

The outrages were carefully organized. The method generally employed was to thrust into the box a long unsealed envelope containing an open bottle of fluid. Another method was to pour acids and varnishes into the boxes by means of indiarubber tubing. In a few cases the contents of the pillar boxes were set on fire.

No arrests had been made up to a late hour to-night, but the police have been detailed to watch all the boxes.

NEW GOLD RUSH IN ALASKA.

Thousands Race to Innoko Creeks—Many Pay Streaks Found.

Special to The New York Times.

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 28.—Pay streaks have been found on many creeks tributary to the Innoko River, in Southwestern Alaska. Thousands of miners from Fairbanks and all the lower Yukon camps have been rushing to the Innoko creeks for three months. Cripple City already rivals Fairbanks in population and in ambition to become the metropolis of Alaska. The late season enabled hundreds to rush to the Innoko creeks with boilers and other machinery before navigation closed. The richest creeks to date are Colorado, Eldorado, Cripple, and Fox Gulch, where a forty-foot pay streak has been uncovered for a thousand feet. The bedrock is eighteen to twenty feet deep, covered with six feet of gravel yielding 5 cents a pan in coarse gold. Ten cents a pan is common on Cripple and Colorado Creeks.

E. D. Officer, just out from the mines, says the best pay on most Innoko creeks is found back on a bench of rim rock. Further back in the hills are excellent free milling quartz properties. William Wilson and two partners struck pay early in October on Deadwood Creek, a tributary of the Dishna River, which empties into the Innoko twenty-five miles above Dishkakat. Their first day's work yielded $32.

Cripple City is eighteen miles from Fox Gulch, forty miles from Ophir, and less than a hundred miles from Ruby City. Scores of buildings are going up. Idatarod cables say the Guggenheims last week bought four more Flat Creek claims for $106,000. They will dig a four-mile ditch to Otter Creek, build a hydro-electric plant, and install two more dredges in two months. One Guggenheim dredge extracted more than a million in gold dust. Idatarod produces this year $3,500,000.

JESUIT ACTIVITIES CURBED.

German Federal Council Denies Legality of Bavaria's Action.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—The Bundesrat has reached a decision regarding the administration of the anti-Jesuit law, which in effect holds that Bavaria's recent course was illegal.

One of the first acts of the new Bavarian Ministry, coming into power in consequence of the victory of the Clerical Centre party, was the issuing of a decree modifying the severity of the enforcement of the long-standing imperial legislation against the Jesuit order in Germany, and in the resulting controversy it was brought out that an interpretation of the imperial law, not at all unfavorable to the Jesuit order, had been issued in Prussia.

By the Bundesrat's ruling the Jesuits will be permitted to hold family masses in homes, adminster extreme unction, and deliver scientific addresses, which, however, must not touch upon religion; but no further activities are permitted them.

A secret order issued last Spring by the President of the Bavarian council of ministers permitted the holding of "conferences" in the churches, at which, sacraments might be administered.

KNEE BONE AT HIS HEART.

Baseball Player, Hurt Playing, Killed in Strange Fashion.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—A particle of bone from a fractured knee cap received while playing baseball worked its way through his system to the heart of George Hayes, 15 years old, and caused his death in a hospital here to-day.

The boy's death was believed to have been caused by heart disease until an autopsy revealed the portion of bone.

MYSTERY IN DEATH OF RICH SPINSTER

Octavia Fredericks, a Brooklyn Recluse, Suffocated in Her Squalid Quarters.

MISTAKEN FOR HEAP OF RAGS

$500 Missing, but a Copy of Will Leaving All to a Barber Is Found.

In one of a cluster of six shabby little frame houses at Hoyt and Livingston Streets, Brooklyn, stubbornly holding their own there against the huge overshadowing business buildings reared all about them, there lived until yesterday a hermit spinster, Miss Octovia Fredericks. The neighborhood was full of stories of her, many of them purely legendary and most of them second-hand, for the neighbors did not see her. A cripple, she clung to the two rooms about the barber's shop at 26 Hoyt Street, never once leaving them during the past three years, and never allowing any one to enter them except the twelve cats which were her familiars—the cats and the barber.

She held communication with no one except the barber, who acted as her agent and collected her rents. She would see none of the agents of big companies who tried to offer several hundred thousand dollars at one time or another for her little row of frame houses. She clung to two rooms that were unspeakably dirty and squalid beyond description.

For three years they had not been cleaned; for three years the dust had not been brushed from the window panes; for three years the food brought to her from the different stores was simply left at her door and drawn in when no one was looking.

Yet she was rich. Besides her real estate holdings there in the heart of Brooklyn's shopping district—in the very shadow of Abraham & Straus, she is reported to have had more than a quarter of a million dollars in cash and securities stowed away in Brooklyn banks and safety deposits, wealth which she would not use, nor allow to be used.

Died Under Strange Conditions.

And last evening she died. The loveless old woman died alone in her squalid rooms. Strange circumstances attended her death, and as the police turned the case over and over last evening, some of these circumstances seemed stranger than ever, and to some it looked as though foul play might possibly have been done when Octavia Fredericks died.

It was at 6 o'clock last evening that smoke was seen filtering out through the closed windows of the second floor of 26 Hoyt Street. The word was spread up the street, and some one turned in an alarm. For some reason or other the firemen were long in coming, and one man, who saw the smoke squeezing from the windows, counted thirteen minutes by his watch before the firemen arrived at the house.

Finally they broke into the house and worked their way into the upper hall. There packing boxes blocked their path to the door of the kitchen bedroom, and it was the door to the front room which they had to break down. The two rooms were black with smoke. They fought their way through it, and in the twilight extinguished the flames, which had just begun to get headway in the narrow quarters. It seemed at first glance that the fire had started from the scattering of coals from a charcoal burner and spread to various heaps of rubbish and to the rag bag of a bed that was fashioned from a tattered mattress stretched across two boxes.

Finally the firemen returned satisfied to the street and there were met by two women from the restaurant at the corner, women who cried out hysterically:

"Did you find the body? Did you find old Miss Fredericks?"

Firemen Had Not Seen Her.

The firemen explained that no one was in the rooms. They had seen nothing. Besides the few bits of furniture, there had been nothing but a heap of rags and dirt. They had soon put the fire out.

"But she must have been there. She could not have left. She never left. Go back."

The firemen went back. There, lost in that heap of rags and dirt, they found the body of the old recluse. She was dead. They carried her down, rags and all, to the barber shop below and stretched the body on the floor. The clothing had been charred as though the burning coals had fallen in its tattered clothing, but Ambulance Surgeon Buckley from the Brooklyn Hospital was inclined to believe that death had been caused by suffocation.

"Suffocation," then, was written down on the police blotter at the Adams Street Station, and it seemed a simple explanation that the helpless old woman had been sitting down in front of the fire that was the only form of Thanksgiving cheer she had or wanted; that the stove had been upset, possibly by one of the cats, and that she had been choked in the smoke which filled her little rooms when the flames spread among the accumulated rubbish of years.

With this simple explanation, the Coroner's office did not hesitate to release the body, and it was immediately transferred to the possession of Russell Walker of 210 Berkeley Place, Brooklyn, who introduced himself as a representative of the family, acting in behalf of his sister, Mrs. Alphonse Fredericks, a sister-in-law of the recluse.

Police Lieutenant Suspicious.

But two things bobbed up to upset the perfect serenity of this explanation. Lieut. James Kennedy, on desk duty at the time at the Adams Street Station, was reported to have said that the half-burned clothing of Octavia Fredericks smelled as though they had been saturated with kerosene.

This disturbance in the original explanation of what had happened in the hermit quarters led to an investigation at a late

AIR FLEET FOR GERMANY.

Twenty Zeppelins Able to Remain in the Air Four Days to be Built.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—In the lobbies of the Reichstag to-day discussion centred on what is now regarded as the certain appearance of Germany's first aerial navy bill.

It can be stated on reliable authority that the recommendations of the War Office and Admiralty include the building, as the beginning, of a fleet of twenty Zeppelin airships, each of about 920,000 cubic feet capacity, capable of traveling fifty-one miles an hour, and remaining aloft four days and four nights without an intermediate landing, and capable of carrying and discharging a ton of explosives.

From the same authority it is learned that Gen. von Moltke, Chief of the General Staff, a few months ago unsuccessfully sought to induce the Government to bring in estimates for a fleet of twenty-five Zeppelins.

NEW YORK BIGGEST IN 1914.

We Will Pass London in Population, Dr. Laidlaw Predicts.

The Rev. Dr. Walter Laidlaw of the Federation of Churches, speaking yesterday at Calvary Methodist Church in Harlem, predicted that with the passing of the next eighteen months New York would find herself the largest city in the world.

According to the statistics which he had studied, in May, 1914, London would step down to second place. He was inclined to think that this was something for which New York should be thankful.

WEALTHY GIRL MISSING.

Niece of Jacob Doll, Piano Manufacufacturer, Gone Since Nov. 26.

A confidential alarm was sent out last night through the Alexander Avenue Police Station for 15-year-old Marion Ege of 601 East 131st Street, a niece of the late Jacob Doll, the wealthy piano manufacturer, who has been missing from her home since the afternoon of Tuesday, Nov. 26. She was last seen at 3 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon walking in front of her home.

When Miss Ege's absence was reported to the police, Detective August Wilkman was assigned to the case. Anton Herman, a brother-in-law of the missing girl, gave the detective to understand that Miss Ege had recently met at a dance at a boathouse in the lower end of the Bronx, a man about 29 years old, who had become greatly infatuated with her, and who had been seen frequently in her company. In fact, Herman told the detective that the girl's new acquaintance was seen in the neighborhood of her home the same afternoon she disappeared.

Miss Ege's family know where he lived, but so far they have been unable to find him.

Miss Ege is described as 4 feet 9 inches, light complexion, dark hair, and blue eyes. She was last seen wearing a dark cloth skirt, brown polo coat, dark hat with pink flowers, black shoes, and black silk stockings.

THREE NEGROES LYNCHED.

Taken from Deputies Who Were Escorting Them to Jail—Had Wounded Sheriff.

SHREVEPORT, La., Nov. 28.—Wood Burke, Jim Heard and Silas Jimmerson, three negroes who attacked and seriously wounded Deputy Sheriff Edwards of Bossier Parish, several leeks ago, were taken from three deputies who were removing them from the Caddo Parish jail to Benton, the parish seat of Bossier Parish, to-night, and lynched at Vanceville, a short distance from Benton.

COLONEL TO BACK PERKINS.

Will Go to Chicago Conference, It Is Said, to Support Him.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Senator Joseph M. Dixon, Chairman of the Progressive Party's National Committee, who spent yesterday at Oyster Bay, brought word to Washington to-night that Col. Roosevelt would attend the conference of Progressive leaders at Chicago on Dec. 10.

Why Col. Roosevelt has decided to be present at the conference was not disclosed, but it is supposed here that the fight which is to be made there to oust George W. Perkins from his conspicuous place in the party councils, is responsible.

The movement against Mr. Perkins is attributed to Gifford Pinchot and James R. Garfield, who were officials of the Roosevelt Administration. Col. Roosevelt is said to be opposed to dropping Perkins.

FIRE FRIGHTENS DANCERS.

They Were In No Such Peril as Williamsburg Tenement Dwellers.

A fire in the tenement house at 81 Harrison Avenue, Williamsburg, early yesterday morning endangered the lives of a score of tenants, and excited several hundred dancers in the Forty-seventh Regiment Armory, across the street.

The fire started in the cigar store of Aaron Saforn on the ground floor. Patrolman Bartholomew discovered it. He rushed into the building and found Saforn, his wife, and two children overcome by smoke in their beds on the second floor. He carried them to the street, and before the fire apparatus arrived had brought out all the tenants. In the armory the smoke drifted in the windows, and caused many to believe the armory was on fire. The damage was about $4,000.

To Erase Dr. Barber's Name.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Proceedings were taken yesterday before the General Medical Council to erase the name of Dr. Richard Henry Barber from the medical register on the ground that it should never have been inserted. Any one practicing under his name since 1904, it is stated, can only have done so by impersonation, the real Dr. Richard Henry Barber having died in Oregon in 1904.

Enthusiastic Over Warlike Speech—Britain Proposes Conference of Ambassadors.

DURAZZO, Albania, Nov. 28.—The Servian troops occupied this town to-day. No resistance was offered.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 29.—"We have now occupied Durazzo for perpetuity," is a telegram which Gen. Jankovitch, the Servian Commander, has sent to his Government.

The fact that the Belgrade Government has made public this telegram, says the Vienna correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, is regarded as proving Servia's irreconcilable attitude.

Budapest papers assert that Servia is mobilizing against Austria and intends to form a new army, armed with the weapons captured from the Turks.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 29.—Great Britain has taken an important step for the pacific adjustment of some of the problems arising out of the Balkan upheaval.

It appears that Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary, has suggested to the great powers that their views shall be exchanged by means of a meeting of their Ambassadors in one of the European capitals, with the object of saving time and preventing the reference of every point backward and forward by telegraph between six different foreign offices.

No formal proposal of a conference has, it is believed, yet been made, and in Paris it is stated that none has yet reached the French Government.

The attitude of Austria and Germany appears to be as follows: They are willing to enter a conference only provided that the powers agree before the conference meets as to the points which will be raised.

Yesterday saw a sudden increase in anxiety over the European situation, especially in Austria and Germany. The Fremdenblatt, the organ of the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Office, speaks of 'growing impatience' under Servian provocation and demands that the Balkan States reciprocate the friendliness shown to them by Austria-Hungary.

The Austrian Premier has announced the speedy introduction of three bills providing for mobilization requirements, and similar measures will be introduced in Hungary. They may possibly be taken as part of a general army reform scheme, but the announcement has caused some perturbation, although official and diplomatic opinion is reported to be calm.

At the opening of the new Duma in St. Petersburg yesterday the President announced that large sums would be required for national defense and went on to refer to the Balkan crisis, saying, amid cheers, that the Russians would not grudge money or effort, and, if needs be, blood in defense of interests so near to their hearts.

Alarming reports are current in Germany of Russian military preparations. Austro-Hungarian subjects living in Germany are being recalled.

The Imperial Chancellor took the unusual course Wednesday night of giving out for publication a telegram to the Governor of East Prussia, instructing him to counteract the excitement "which nothing justifies," and declaring that no special military measures had been taken by Germany and no news had been received of any Russian measures which would occasion counter measures by Germany.

The Berlin correspondent of The Times says:

"There is no manner of doubt about the sincerity of the German Government and the desire of both Government and people for peace."

From Belgrade comes news that Servian troops have occupied the Albanian port of Durazzo. This is a fresh defiance of the Austrian veto upon the acquisition by Servia of an Adriatic port and the occupation by her of Albanian territory. It will not, in all probability, lead to any violent, sudden move by the Austrian Government, but further complicates a situation which is already dangerously involved.

Peace negotiations between the allies and Turkey are proceeding, but without any result. The chief stumbling block is Adrianople. The allies demand its surrender. The Turks, whose army behind the Tchatalja lines is daily growing stronger, refuse to treat for peace on any such basis.

The Daily Mail's Vienna correspondent says: "It is believed in military circles that Austria will take no steps to drive the Servians out of Durazzo, at least until her war preparations are completed, because such a step would almost certainly bring her into conflict with Russia.

"The war feeling in Vienna is very strong. Patriotic songs are sung in the music halls and there are military concerts nightly."

BELGRADE, Nov. 28.—The Servian War Office is continuing its military preparations on the Austrian frontier in readiness for possible eventualities.

It is officially announced that the Servians have captured the town of Dibra, Albania, forty-five miles southwest of Prisrend.

VIENNA, Nov. 28.—Much excitement has been occasioned by the action of the Government in arranging for the mobilization of the Austrian army, which proves the Ministers' determination to be fully prepared for any development in the Balkan crisis.

The Parliamentary leaders met to-night and decided to allow three bills introduced by the Premier dealing with matters connected with the mobilization to go to committee without the customary first reading.

According to The Neue Freie Presse, the Premier in announcing the bills to the Procedure Committee told the Parliamentary leaders that there was no change in the international situation. The Neue Freie Preese regards this as an admission that the situation is still critical.

Another incident commented upon as being of equal importance to that of the recent visit to Berlin of Gen. Schemua, Austrian Chief of Staff, is the visit of Field Marshal Baron von Hoetzendorf, Inspector General of the Austrian Army, to Bucharest, where he arrived yesterday as the guest of King Charles. He bears an autograph letter from the Austrian Emperor and will confer with the Roumanian Chief of Staff.

An extraordinary meeting of the Municipal Council to-night engaged in a demonstration of loyalty and adopted a manifesto declaring that "the maintenance of peace is worth great sacrifices, but economic prosperity of nations and the full blessings of industry are only vouchsafed to States which maintain peace, not by dishonorable means, but forcefully, supported by the consciousness of a just cause."

After the meeting thousands of persons formed in procession, and, singing the national and other patriotic hymns, marched to the Deutschmeister monument, where the Burgomaster delivered a patriotic address.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 28.—M. Rodzianko, who was to-day re-elected President of the Duma, in his address spoke of the public interest in the Balkans and the necessity for sacrifices in money, and, if necessary, in men on the part of Russia.

The whole House cheered enthusiastically. Thus the legend that the Russian press did not reflect public opinion in championing the cause of the Slavs was discredited.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 29.—The action of the Servians, ignoring the proclamation of Albanian independence, in occupying the Port of Durazzo raises the Austrian-Servian question in acute form, and it remains to be seen whether the Austrian Government will take any direct action or will be content to leave the question for the after-the-war settlement.

The Servian action, coupled with the eminently warlike feeling prevailing at Vienna, is likely to keep Europe in a continued state of anxiety. On the other hand, the facts that the Turkish negotiations with the allies are progressing, and that there is no sign of the resumption of operations on the Tchatalja lines, while the great powers are exchanging proposals for the assembling of a European conference, all make for a peaceful settlement.

Should the proposed conference materialize—for apparently Austria has not yet consented to participate—it would be considered as preparatory to a later full conference, which would include the Balkan States and Turkey, for a final settlement of all questions.

Sir Edward Grey's proposal that the Ambassadors of the six great powers—Great Britain, France, Germany, Russia, Austria-Hungary, and Italy—should assemble in one of the capitals with a view to emphasizing the points arising out of the Balkan war on which the nations are already in agreement, is understood to have the support of Germany, France, and Russia.

The idea is to endeavor to avert the disposition to drift into an alignment of the two groups of powers forming the Triple Alliance and the Triple Entente in opposite camps over isolated questions such as caused the tension which existed early this week.

It is anticipated that, without attempting to reach a detailed settlement of all the problems which will come up for arrangement at the end of the war, the Ambassadors will be able to register an agreement in principle on such matters as the future of Albania, the disposition of the islands in the Aegean Sea, and the opening or closing of the Dardanelles.

For instance, the powers apparently are all ready to recognize Albanian independence and to pledge themselves not to seek territorial acquisitions in the Aegean Sea.

Some revision of the standing of the Dardanelles seems bound to follow the changes in the map arising from the war, and there is a disposition to believe that the straits will be opened on a basis of equality for all nations.

Problems like the Austro-Servian difficulty will be left for settlement after peace has been concluded.

The main object of the proposed conference is to bring the powers into closer contact and to have in existence an authoritative body which will be in a position to elimnate causes of friction whenever they arise.

It is reported from Rome that a provisional Albanian Government has been constituted at Valona (Avlona) by eighty Albanian delegates.

American Flag in the Balkan War

This photograph, which was taken at Pireus, shows the volunteer corps of American Greeks, who have been dubbed "Oieros Lohos," or "Sacred Company," about to leave there for the front. The corps consists of several hundred men smartly uniformed and well equipped with their own ammunition. They carry two standards—the Stars and Stripes and a flag bearing the Greek Cross and a representation of St. George, surmounted by a holy ikon.

HUNGER AT ADRIANOPLE.

City Must Soon Fall, It Is Stated—Sorties Every Day.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 29.—A Belgrade dispatch to The Daily Telegraph says:

"The first Servian wounded have arrived here from Adrianople. Among them is an officer who tells interesting details of the siege. He says that during the three weeks since the arrival of the Servians before Adrianople not a single day has passed without the Turks attempting sorties, but always retreating with great losses.

"The meaning of the sorties is incomprehensible, as without the protection of the forts the Turkish army would be annihilated in two days. The fortifications consist of many trenches, which are connected with the forts by a circular railway. The trenches are full of water.

"In time of peace the forts mount thirty batteries, and these are now being attacked by 500 guns, which are pouring an infernal fire into the works. Eighty thousand soldiers are shut up in Adrianople, and the provisions cannot last much longer.

"Many of the trenches are protected by wire and some of them are only 250 yards from the besiegers, who are pressing the city on three sides. The Serbs of the Danube division, between the Arda and Maritza Rivers, are exposed to the heaviest Turkish fire. Fighting is in progress every day and night, except on nights when thick fog prevails. The roaring of Turkish guns is incessant, but ineffective.

"Adrianople, according to the officer, must fall soon, as Christian fugitives report that hunger is already telling on the troops and population."

RUN ON GERMAN BANKS.

Alarm in East Prussia Causes Chancellor to Send Reassuring Message.

KOENIGSBERG, Nov. 28.—Telegraphic instructions to the Governor to make efforts to allay the alarm prevailing in the Province of East Prussia were received to-day from the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg.

In his dispatch the Chancellor declares that the alarming reports about war preparations on the German and Russian sides of the frontier are wholly groundless. No special military measures, he says, have been taken on the German side, and no news has been received about Russian military measures which would require Germany to take counter steps.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—A run on the savings banks at Königsberg, which had been in progress for several days, caused the sending of the dispatch by the Imperial Chancellor to the Provincial Governor, instructing him to endeavor to allay the alarm.

The run was due to rumor that Germany was mobilizing two army corps, and the fears thus created were increased by the fact that Russians reaching Königsberg spread wild rumors on their arrival as to what was taking place in Russia.

Runs of a less violent character began yesterday on several savings banks in the town of Opsen, Westphalia.

ONLY ONE LEGAL RED CROSS.

Other Organizations Have No Right to Use the Name Here.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The discovery of Red Cross rivalry in the raising of funds for relief work in the Balkan States caused the American Red Cross to-day to issue a formal statement that all organizations or persons except those belonging to the Red Cross of the United States who solicit or receive funds in the name of the Red Cross are acting in violation of the law.

The Federal statute makes the National Red Cross organization the only officially recognized Red Cross in the United States.

"The American Red Cross operations," says the statement, "have been very much embarrassed and their efficiency in raising funds for Balsan war relief very much impaired by the coming into existence of committees claiming to act in the name of the national societies of foreign countries."

TURKS AND BULGARS HOPEFUL OF PEACE

Report in Constantinople That the Bulgars Have Withdrawn Their Claim to Adrianople.

MANY ARRESTS IN SALONIKA

Five Hundred Turkish Officers Deported to Greece Owing to Intrigues and Breaking of Paroles.

SOFIA, Nov. 28.—Two meetings of the peace delegates were held at Bagehakeui to-day, and, according to Premier Guechoff, the pourparlers are progressing satisfactorily.

In Government circles it is believed that unless unforeseen difficulties arise an armistice will be concluded in two days.

Yesterday's session was a very prolonged one, the delegates sitting until late at night.

A letter received to-day from the front says that there has not yet been any real assault by the Bulgarian besiegers on the fortress of Adrianople. The forts, it says, have been shelled and some of them have been captured by the allied Servians and Bulgarians, who suffered heavy loss.

On one occasion a Turkish fort was captured, but shortly afterward the allies were compelled to evacuate it owing to the heavy fire concentrated on it by the Turkish guns.

On another occasion an entire Bulgarian battalion was destroyed by the explosion of a land mine, which was fired by the Ottoman defenders.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 28.—It is stated in official circles that no result has been reached by the delegates at the peace conference. The discussion will continue to-morrow, when Osman Nizami Pasha, the Turkish Ambassador to Germany, will join the plenipotentiaries.

A persistent report is current here that the Bulgarians have abandoned their claim to Adrianople. Should this prove true, it is thought that the prospects of an understanding will be greatly improved and that an agreement is virtually assured.

The foreign Consuls at Adrianople report that in spite of the bombardment of the town by the Bulgarians no casualties have occurred thus far among the foreign residents. The report came by wireless telegraphy. It is thought that it was sent at the request of the local authorities.

The foreign naval contingents recently landed for the protection of foreign residents and Embassies in the Pera district of Constantinople are being gradually reembarked on the warships. The commanders of the foreign war vessels are of the opinion that the danger to their nationals is diminishing.

VIENNA, Nov. 28.—Noradunghian Effendi, the Turkish Foreign Minister, is quoted by the Constantinople correspondent of the Neue Presse as having declared that it would be impossible for Turkey to surrender Adrianople, because the loss of Adrianople would seal her fate in Europe. The cession of Dedeagatch would be equally impossible, because that would mean that the Dardanelles would be constantly threatened.

But Turkey would not object, the Foreign Minister is further quoted as saying, to ceding Kavala to Bulgaria.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—A Constantinople dispatch says that the Bulgarian delegates have proposed that Turkey should enter the customs union with the Balkan League.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 29.—The Turkish fleet, with the exception of the cruiser Hamidieh, is reported by correspondents in Constantinople to be ready to go out and fight. It is still doubtful, however, whether the Ottoman military authorities will agree to allow its use against the Greek fleet, in spite of the reported intention of the Greeks to transport large forces to Xeres Bay, behind the Dardanelles. This move would seem to give the Turkish destroyers the chance for which Turkish naval officers profess to long.

Torgut Shefket Pasha is now in command of the garrison guarding the forts of the Dardanelles. The troops under his command have been strongly reinforced and are said to number at least four divisions.

A Sofia dispatch to The Times says:

"With the divisions of Gens. Theodoroff and Kovatcheff, totaling about 50,000 men, the recruits of 1912, the reservists, and the volunteers from America, the army before Tchatalja will soon be augmented by 90,000 men.

"'When these forces are assembled,' says a Bulgarian statesman, 'if our terms are refused, we shall march with the allied armies into Constantinople at all costs.'"

News of the arrest of 500 Turkish officers and a number of civilians, including Dr. Mazim Bey, the chief organizer of the Committee of Union and Progress, (Young Turks,) by the Greeks in Salonika is telegraphed here by a special correspondent. The arrested men have been deported to Greece. The correspondent says this step was justified, because the Turks violated the terms of capitulation, broke their paroles, and got away in some cases by using fraudulently obtained passports.

The correspondent adds that the importance of this development will be understood when it is realized that the character of the war in Macedonia has changed, and that the Greek Army is now seriously harrassed by numerous guerrilla bands, largely composed of liberated soldiers.

Moreover, the Bulgarian commanders have complained that Turkish officers have left Salonika by steamer to proceed to Constantinople for the purpose of joining their comrades fighting at Tchatalja.

It was discovered that Nazim Bey was organizing meetings and leading numerous intrigues against the authorities.

YIMIN, S. T., Pittsburgh; strained back.

The cause of the accident is involved in doubt. Some think a sagging of the bridge which crosses the tracks of the Trenton cut-off near the scene of the accident was to blame.

The bridge is a half-through girder bridge, supported by eight iron and steel uprights and a stone pier in the centre. As the train approached the bridge, it was rounding a wide curve. The girder between the first upright support and the abuttment is believed by some to have been thrown out of place by the impact of the heavy train. At the point over the first support, where two beams on which ties are laid join, the rail joint was sprung an inch and a half. Those who think the bridge caused the wreck, believe the locomotives leaped upward at this point, and after running on the rail for several feet, slipped over on the ties.

Marshal John P. Doheney of Harrisburg, who has investigated the wreck on behalf of the State Railroad Commission, holds this opinion about the wreck. He said tonight:

"The wreck appears to have been caused by the sagging of a girder on the bridge which depressed the track. This probably caused couplings to break and the cars to leave the tracks beyond the bridge."

The railroad officials deny that the bridge was in any way the cause of the accident, and lay the disaster to a broken rail. There were no switches or frogs near that place, and the officials say that in view of the fact that the express was running at its usual speed, the slight curve at the point of derailment was surely not a factor in the wreck.

A committee, appointed by the Pennsylvania Railroad, went to Harrisburg to-night and will convene to-morrow in an effort to decide the cause of the accident. The company declares that the bridge was inspected and found to be in good physical condition only two days ago.

In addition to the railroad investigation and that of the State Railroad Commission, county officials are busy in preparation for the Coroner's inquest to-morrow, and representatives of the Inter-State Commerce Commission are on the ground.

Saved by Steel Cars.

About 250 passengers were on the train which consisted of two locomotives, a postal car, a combination baggage and smoking car, a modern day coach and nine Pullmans, mostly sleepers. But for the fact that most of the cars were steel, the death roll would probably have been very heavy.

After passing the bridge, the couplings gave way, and the locomotives with the mail car and the combination car went on. The day coach, filled with passengers, bound homeward for Thanksgiving, went down the embankment and rolled over. Seven of the nine sleepers followed, one, the Glen Rock, being badly damaged by striking a coal car at the foot of the slope. It was in the day coach and the Glen Rock that most of the victims were found.

CHAUFFEUR AND GIRL MISSING

Employer-Father Hears of an Elopement from Her Friends.

Alexander E. Pastre, owner of an automobile garage at 470 Fifteenth Street, Brooklyn, has asked the police to try to find his daughter, Mable Pastre, 17 years old, who until yesterday was employed as bookkeeper and cashier in his garage. He has also asked the police to look out for Joseph Kemp, 20 years old, who as one of his chauffeurs had frequently to account to Miss Mable at the cashier's desk.

The last he heard of them they were going to a dance at Prospect Hall on Wednesday evening. Girl friends of Miss Pastre confided to her father yesterday afternoon that they heard her saying something about a parson in Jersey City and a honeymoon trip to Washington, where Kemp has relatives. One girl admitted to detectives who started on the trail of the missing pair that she had been asked to go along as far as Hoboken and act as maid of honor, but had found it necessary to decline.

NO CLUE TO POLICE MURDER.

Cleveland Thieves' Chauffeur Can't Identify Suspects as Slayers.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 28.—The police have so far failed to discover the murderers of a patrolman, Leroy E. Bouker, who was shot and killed by four robbers whom he attempted to arrest after they had robbed a butcher's store here late last night. Two suspects were taken before Joseph Korbitz, driver of the automobile, which the robbers used to carry out the crime, but he could not identify them. Korbitz said the four men were not masked. He thought the last man to enter the car after the robbery fired the three shots which killed the policeman.

When ordered, with a revolver held against his neck, to drive from the scene of the robbery, Vorbitz said the highwaymen told him to go to a locality in the southwestern part of the city.

The police are investigating among chauffeurs who have recently been forced to drive motor cars for robbers and who have kept silent because of threats.

LOST BOY MAY BE ALIVE.

Supposed to be Dead on Mount Washington, Possibly in Montreal Hospital.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—John M. Keenan, the Charlestown boy who was lost in the clouds on Mount Washington two months ago, may still be alive and an inmate of an insane hospital at Montreal, according to a letter received by the boy's parents. Dr. George Villeneuve, Medical Superintendent of the St. Jean de Dieu Hospital in that city, has written saying that a boy answering to Keenan's description has been in the hospital since Sept. 18.

Keenan disappeared while engaged in surveying work on Mount Washington on Sept. 15. For ten days big parties searched the mountains for him without avail. The boy's mother has refused to believe him dead, and has written to scores of hospitals and institutions in the United States and Canada in an effort to trace him.

ARREST NEGRO FOR HOLD-UP.

Second of West Virginia Farmer's Assailants Caught on Street Car.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Nov. 28.—"Angie" Hardy, one of the two negro brothers who attempted to hold up Lee Inskeep on his farm near Romney, West Va., last Saturday morning, was arrested on a street car here to-day. He made no resistance.

His brother, French Hardy, was shot and killed by Inskeep in the running fight which ensued between the farmer and his assailants, and "Angie" Hardy was wounded in the hand.

"Your nerves are tired out and exhausted—I want you to take Sanatogen regularly."

HOW many thousands of men and women have cause to look back with gratitude to the urgent advice of their physicians to take Sanatogen regularly—at a time when their nerves had reached the breaking point and they were facing complete nerve exhaustion.

And how thankful they are today that they followed this advice and so found a way back from the despondency of nerve exhaustion to cheerful health.

If YOUR nerves have reached the point where your daily diet no longer furnishes the necessary vitality—if your physical and mental tones are lowered—if the ravages of overwork, worry or illness have left you irritable, weak and nervous—if your sleep is disturbed, your digestion upset—you may do well to consider whether the remarkable food-tonic elements of Sanatogen will show you the way back to healthful activity.

Sanatogen feeds the nerves with their own needed foods. Its combination of purest protein and organic phosphorus reaches the nerve cells, instilling them with vigor and vitality. It is readily and easily assimilated, causing no harmful stimulation and by reason of its rebuilding and energizing powers, acts favorably upon digestion, toning up the entire system by helping other food to feed and nourish.

You have the written word of over 16,000 physicians that Sanatogen helps the weak and nervous—that it does revitalize and strengthen them. In the light of this experience is Sanatogen worthy of consideration as a help for you to regain the good health that is everyman's right?

Write for a Free Copy of "Nerve Health Regained"

The work of a physician author, beautifully illustrated, which tells you some really interesting things about your nervous system, facts which vitally affect your well-being and which therefore you ought to know. This book also tells the story of Sanatogen convincingly, from the point of view of a physician, but so that any layman can understand it.

Sanatogen is sold in three sizes, $1.00, $1.90, $3.60

THE BAUER CHEMICAL CO. 2F Irving Place, New York

Prof. Thomas B. Stillman, M. S., Ph.D.
The well-known research chemist of Stevens Institute, writes:
"The chemical union of the constituents of Sanatogen is a true one, representative of the highest skill in the formation of a product containing phosphorus in the organic phosphate condition, and so combined that digestion and assimilation of Sanatogen are rendered complete with greatest ease."

John Burroughs
The distinguished naturalist and author, writes:
"I am sure I have been greatly benefited by Sanatogen. My sleep is fifty per cent. better than it was one year ago, and my mind and strength are much improved."

His Grace the Most Reverend, The Archbishop of Bombay, writes:
"I use Sanatogen every now and then, under my doctor's advice, and always derive great benefit."

C. H. Stockton
Rear Admiral U. S. Navy and President George Washington University, writes:
"Some time ago my physician recommended Sanatogen to be used in my family. After giving it a fair trial, I am thoroughly convinced it is most excellent for the nerves and an invigorating food tonic."

To Drape or Not to Drape

¶ Once somebody said that the shoulders were the only thing that mattered in an overcoat, and that after that it was simply a question of draping—then the contagion spread.

¶ Lo and behold, a thousand tailors, assuming a speculative pose, fell to draping their garments and their arguments both.

¶ Now, it is true that the shoulders are the main thing and that the hang of the garment depends upon the manner in which the shoulders and the fronts are tailored.

¶ But it is high time to halt this drivel of the drape, and amend it to read, that the coat which is basically right in design and cut and tailoring will drape correctly of its own accord.

¶ The draping of a garment has come to be an argument as hackneyed and empty as the drivel of the demagogue who rants about the rights of the people simply because it makes a good party cry.

¶ We do not seek to beguile you into wearing a Saks overcoat because it drapes right—that is the least that any self-respecting overcoat should do.

¶ But we do seek to convert you to the merits of a Saks overcoat on the ground that it is the most perfect example of ready-for-service tailoring that brains can make or money can buy.

PATRICK AT HOME FOR THANKSGIVING

Ossining intending to get it from the Post Office there and take it to the prison early yesterday morning. The fact that it was a holiday and the Post Office closed at 10 o'clock in the morning tended to still further complicate matters. When the pardon failed to arrive in the early morning Postmaster McNally reopened the office and met each mail train on its arrival. The prison mail is frequently dropped off at Peekskill by mistake, and Postmaster McNally believed that some such thing had happened to delay the pardon.

Postmaster Mable of Peekskill picked out the Sing Sing mail at 10 o'clock and sent it to Ossining, but overlooked the package containing the Patrick pardon. Postmaster McNally called Postmaster Mable on the telephone and asked him to make another search for the pardon. Then the document was found and sent to Ossining. Postmaster McNally on receiving it took it at once to the prison, where it was opened by Warden Kennedy. Head Keeper Connaughton delivered it to Patrick at 3:12 o'clock.

Patrick for the last year had been attached to the prison hospital under Dr. Charles W. Farr, Superintendent of the hospital and an eye specialist. Patrick had charge of the optical instruments and kept the clinical records. He made a study of the eyes, and was able to treat patients with minor disorders, so proficient had he become as an occulist. Patrick slept in a dormitory of the hospital in which there were several other cots. He arose at 6:30 o'clock yesterday morning and packed up his belongings. A small paper box a foot square was sufficient to contain them. They consisted for the most part of pictures of his family and papers. His books will be removed from the prison later.

The news that he had been pardoned soon spread about the prison, where Patrick was most popular.

In the hospital he met many of the prisoners, who rejoiced at the news which the "prison wireless" brought to them. If he was disappointed not to find the expected pardon awaiting him when he awoke, he did not show it. He went to work in the hospital as usual, and when the day wore on and no pardon arrived, and the chances of his eating his Thanksgiving dinner at home seemed remote, he cheerfully partook of the dinner provided for the prisoners This consisted of fricassee of chicken, vegetables, oranges, and seedcakes. He did not attend the moving-picture and vaudeville show provided for the prisoners.

When Head Keeper Connaughton arrived with the delayed pardon and said, "Here it is, Patrick," the released man displayed no emotion. He sat down and read it, and then said, "All right, I'll get into my clothes."

He then began to exchange the gray prison clothes he had worn for so many years for the black suit provided by Warden Kennedy. In the prison, Patrick was convict 53,448. On his release he received $10.67 in cash. The $10 represented the sum given to released prisoners, and the 67 cents his carfare to New York. Beside Patrick, an Italian, Pasquale Doti, who was convicted in this city of murder in the second degree on Jan. 14, 1895, and sentenced to life imprisonment, was pardoned yesterday.

REUNION WITH HIS WIFE.

Tender Welcome and Thanksgiving Dinner Upon His Return Home.

Greeted by photographers' flashlights, Albert T. Patrick jumped lightly from the automobile in which he had made the journey from Ossining, and, with coat collar turned up about his chin, darted into the vestibule of the Springfield apartments, at 180 Claremont Avenue, just after dusk last evening. The run of 40 miles from the State prison was made in 1 hour and 12 minutes.

In front of the house was a crowd of curious neighbors, each one eager for a glimpse of the man who had made such a desperate battle for life and liberty. Few if any of the other tenants of the Springfield apartments were aware that the black-gowned, heavily veiled woman who for the past few months had been seen entering and emerging from the rear apartment on the ground floor was the wife of Albert T. Patrick, and it was not until the presence of the coterie of waiting newspaper reporters, who had been standing in front of the house since early in the forenoon, had excited comment and inquiry that it became generally known that the pardoned lawyer was expected to come there directly from prison.

The tidings caused an assemblage of three score persons, including more than a dozen fantastically clad Thanksgiving "ragamuffins," about the entrance, and finally necessitated the detail of two policemen from the 125th Street Precinct in front of the house.

Mrs. Patrick remained in seclusion in her apartments, and told the negro hallboy and elevator operator that she was not to be disturbed. Shortly before noon a man and woman, both stylishly clad, arrived, and were immediately admitted to Apartment 5, which is the one occupied by Mrs. Patrick. The identity of the visitors could not be ascertained, but they remained with the anxiously waiting wife until several hours after her husband had arrived. Then they came out of the basement exit on the side and were whisked away in a taxicab.

An Early Disappointment.

Mrs. Patrick had confidently expected to greet her husband by noon, and was disappointed when informed by telegraph that a delay in the delivery of the official pardon to Warden Kennedy had detained the prisoner. She immediately directed the maid servant to desist in the preparation of the elaborate holiday spread, and postponed the reunion dinner until evening.

When the news arrived that Patrick had started from Ossining by automobile the preparation of the dinner was renewed, and it was waiting him upon his arrival.

Driving the automobile in which the pardoned lawyer made his home-coming journey was James A. Barker, proprietor of a five and ten-cent store in Peekskill, an old friend of Patrick, who had shown him much kindness during his long imprisonment. Seated beside Barker was W. J. Mothersall, the special messenger from the Secretary of State's office, to whom, according to the original programme, was to have been intrusted the duty of bearing the official pardon to Sing Sing Prison.

Patrick rode in the rear seat of the car, with Thomas Maher, whose ten years' sentence for forgery was commuted a year ago, after he had served four years in prison, during three of which he was the lawyer's cellmate. Ever since his release Maher has worked unceasingly to assist his former "bunkie" in his fight for liberty, and he it was who first greeted the liberated man in the Warden's office at Ossining yesterday.

The moment that the automobile slowed up in front of the apartment house, Patrick's hand was on the handle of the side door, and he vaulted lightly from his seat to the sidewalk. He was clad in a heavy fur-lined overcoat with a Persian lamb collar, which was upturned so as to partly obscure his face. As he gained the corridor just within the vestibule of the house he threw down his coat collar and wheeled to confront the newspaper reporters who had surged in behind him.

Repaid for Long, Lost Years.

He was grinning like a schoolboy home on a vacation, but he waved his inquisitors back imperatively.

"Not a word," he announced. "Please, boys, not a word. Anything which is to be said must come from my counsel, Judge Olcott."

"How does it feel to be home?" some one demanded.

"Great," was the reply. "This minute almost repays me for those long, lost years."

At this moment the door of Apartment 5 creaked on its hinges and an open crack appeared through which a white, nervous face peered for a brief instant. In that instant, however, Maher had seized Patrick by the arm and thrust him forcibly forward. The door yawned to receive him.

"Oh, Al!" gasped a woman's voice The rest of the loving welcome was lost as the door closed upon the reunion. The tremor of the words and the tenderness in them told the whole story of the twelve years of weary waiting which the faithful wife had endured.

Maher, Barker, and Mothersall waited in the corridor for several minutes. Then Maher tapped gently, the door opened, and the three were immediately admitted. Without further delay the Thanksgiving dinner which had been waiting was served and with his wife and friends Patrick enjoyed the first meal in twelve years to which he sat down a free man.

While the dinner was in progress a second automobile drove up to the door and George Francis O'Neill, who was engaged as Patrick's attorney last Winter, alighted. Mr. O'Neill was accompanied by another man who declined to make known his identity. Both were immediately admitted to the house and were ushered into the Patrick apartments. Upon his departure, more than an hour later, Mr. O'Neill declared that he had no comment to make upon the case except to reiterate his opinion that his client was an innocent man and that the clemency of Gov. Dix was justified.

Rice Institute in Texas Fears Loss and Trusteeship to Patrick.

Special to The New York Times.

HOUSTON, Texas, Nov. 28.—Officials of the Rice Institute, in this city, fear that Albert T. Patrick, as the result of the unconditional pardon which he has received, may seek to establish his claim to a portion of the estate of William Marsh Rice, of whose murder he was convicted. Should the liberated lawyer take any legal action in this direction he might seriously involve the endowment of the institute founded by the wealthy Texan. According to officials of the Rice Institute, the $10,000,000 fund bequeathed by its founder would be reduced $1,000,000 and Patrick would become the absolute Trustee of the fund with which the college was established if his claim was upheld.

When the news that Gov. Dix had pardoned Patrick was received in this city persons who knew Charles Jones, the valet, upon whose confession the lawyer was convicted, recalled that after the trial Jones used to declare that he was obliged to involve Patrick in order to get immunity for himself. They further assert that Jones was emphatic in declaring that Rice had died a natural death.

After making the confession which obtained his release, Jones came to Chambers County, Texas, and became the teacher of a Sunday school. He died a few years later.

In his confession, Jones alleged that he had first conspired with Patrick to furnish him with Mr. Rice's blank personal checks which were later forged by the lawyer, indorsed by him and cashed. This led later, according to Jones, to a plot to forge a new will. Jones declared that he had discovered the will made by Rice leaving $10,000,000 toward the foundation of Rice Institute and cutting off his relatives with small bequests. He declared that he showed this will to Patrick, and that Patrick prepared a false instrument making himself residuary legatee. Later the murder of Rice was decided upon, the valet alleged, and at the direction of Patrick, he said, he administered chloroform to the aged millionaire. In a previous confession, Jones said that the chloroform had been administered by Patrick, but this confession he afterward retracted.

$150,000 FOR HIS VINDICATION.

Patrick's Brother-in-Law, Milliken, Also Has New Evidence for Him.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 28.—John T. Milliken, brother-in-law of Albert T. Patrick, who spent a great deal of money in the effort to win a pardon for Patrick, announced to-night at his country home near Crescent that he was willing to spend $150,000 more to help Patrick vindicate himself.

"I have facts and information that have never reached Mr. Patrick during his incarceration," said Mr. Milliken. "These facts I will lay before him when he comes here with his wife in a few days. We expect the medical profession in New York to espouse his cause, and 3,500 doctors signed his petition for a pardon. Immediately after Mr. Patrick has had a chance to go over this new material I expect him to set about the task of vindicating himself. He will devote himself to that task to the exclusion of all other affairs until it is accomplished, and I will see that he has plenty of funds."

Mr. Milliken has made all arrangements to receive Patrick and his wife, who married him in the Tombs, and to keep them as his guests during the period of Patrick's preparation for the fight for self rehabilitation. They will have an apartment in the Milliken residence at 1150 Belt Avenue, St. Louis.

Since the release of Patrick Dr. William Smith, Professor of Anatomy and Medical Jurisprudence at the American School of Osteopathy at Kirkville, Mo., has been the recipient of many congratulations for his service as a medical expert. Prof. Smith was enlisted in the campaign to win Patrick's pardon soon after Mr. Milliken took charge of it. He set about to prove that the expert medical testimony which went so far to convict Patrick was erroneous. In the testimony given at the trial it was held that embalming fluid injected into the right bronchial artery could not penetrate the lungs, and on this supposition rested the contention of the prosecution that chloroform must have caused the congestion found in the lungs of the dead man, and not embalming fluid as asserted by the defense.

SURE PATRICK IS INNOCENT.

Careful Study of the Case Convinced Him of It, Ex-Judge Olcott Says.

Upon his arrival in this city yesterday evening, Albert T. Patrick declared that any statement concerning his case must emanate from ex-Judge William M. K. Olcott, who is now his chief counsel. Judge Olcott was found at the Studio Club, 939 Sixth Avenue, and consented to discuss the case informally, but was careful to explain that a statement in greater detail would probably be issued sometime to-day after a consultation with his client.

"I had a very brief conversation with Mr. Patrick at his home by telephone less than a hour ago," Judge Olcott said, "and arranged with him for a conference to-morrow morning. Until that conference has been held I will only say that I am greatly delighted by the action of Gov. Dix in granting an unconditional pardon to Mr. Patrick. I say this because Albert Patrick was and is still my friend. But there is a still stronger and more impersonal reason for my satisfaction, and that is that I am convinced that he is an innocent man and that his conviction was a miscarriage of justice.

"I had occasion when I appeared before Gov. Higgins to argue Mr. Patrick's reprieve to make a most exhaustive study of the entire case, and I was convinced then that a murder had not been committed. I spent months in studying the evidence and reviewing the testimony, and I consulted with medico-legal authorities. Their opinion in every instance coincided with mine. I do not believe that there is a single lawyer or medical authority—even those not connected with the case—who at any time gave careful consideration to the facts adduced both at the trial and later without arriving at the decision that a grave injustice had been done, and that it would have been a lasting disgrace to the State had Mr. Patrick been put to death for a crime which was not committed."

Judge Olcott was asked whether or not his client would take any steps toward obtaining reinstatement at the bar.

"I have not as yet consulted with Mr. Patrick on that point," he said. "It is one of the things which I am going to take up with him to-morrow. I am willing that you should quote me as saying that personally I have no doubt that he will make application before the Appellate Division for reinstatement. So far as I can see, there is no reason why he should not do so as the first step toward winning for himself a complete vindication. An unconditional pardon carries with it restoration to full rights and privileges of citizenship, and if Mr. Patrick decides to again take up the practice of his former profession I do not see what there is to prevent him from obtaining the reversal of the disbarment decision at the hands of the Appellate Division or the Court of Appeals."

Former Fifth Avenue Policeman Gone.

Thomas Barrett, 43 years old, who was one of the "Beau Brummel" special policemen put on Fifth Avenue a few weeks ago, is being sought by his wife and children. Mrs. Barrett, who lives at 11 West Sixty-fifth Street, went to the police of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station last night and asked that a general alarm be sent out. She said he had recently lost his place through the order of Commissioner Waldo.

Reported Lost, Vessel Makes Port.

CALAIS, Me., Nov. 28.—The schooner J. Kennedy, which had been reported abandoned at sea, brought a real Thanksgiving to this port to-day, when she arrived with all hands safe. The Kennedy came through the recent rough weather with only her cross trees carried away and some minor damage to her rigging.

Men's $75 & $85 Fur-lined Coats today $59.50 the man who wears one of these fur-lined coats is next to a soft thing!

¶ For wear on bitter days a fur-lined coat is a godsend, and there is nothing more appropriate for evening wear, nothing so handsome, so comfortable, or so necessary. You positively must have a fur-lined garment to put over your Tuxedo or full dress coat these biting winter evenings. Renders you impervious to cold and criticism, laughs at snow and sleet as love laughs at locksmiths, and gives you a limousine rating in the shivering world about you.

¶ Be good enough to cast your eye upon that price again—and then read this: The shells of these fur-lined coats are made of a superior quality black cloth, especially selected by us for its serviceability and lustre. Lined with such fashionable and practical furs as natural muskrat, marmot and nearseal, and finished with collars of Persian Lamb, nearseal, and natural otter. The tailoring is perfect. They are designed, cut and finished like a smart cloth coat, which is a big consideration when you reflect that the chief objection to most fur-lined garments is that they are too bulky to be smart. In brief, these fur-lined coats are as attractive in appearance as they are in price—and the price is a bargain.

GOV. WILSON TABOOS ALL POLITICAL TALK

"I'll Break Billy Hughes's Neck," He Says, if Coming Senator Mentions Subject.

WILL CONSULT BRYAN LATER

Hasn't Communicated with Any One About Cabinet Appointments, and Will Not While in Bermuda.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 28.—Regarding the continued activities of unofficial Cabinet makers in filling portfolios for Gov. Wilson's Administration, it can be said that whatever Cabinet negotiations are going on are being conducted by intermediaries. Gov. Wilson has not communicated directly with a soul, and says he will not until he returns to the United States. He is still considering names, he says, but will not decide on the final selections while in Bermuda. He emphatically declared that Mr. Bryan "is absolutely not coming," and knew of no politician who was. But it is said he will confer with Bryan when he returns to the United States.

Reminded that Senator-elect Hughes was coming, the President-elect remarked:

"If Billy Hughes talks politics to me I will break his neck. I know him well enough to do it. It reminds me of an Irishman, on seeing Dublin cathedral, saying: 'That beats the divvil.' 'Yes,' said his friend, 'that's the intention.' If anybody comes here to talk politics and finds his labor vain for his pains, he will dicover 'that's the intention.'"

Gov. Wilson spent part of Thanksgiving Day driving and resting. The family attended to-night the amateur theatrical performance of "Our Mutual Friend" as he guests of the Governor General. The players were society folk, including Gerald Gray, son of the Attorney General, and Annette Hughes, daughter of the late Canon Hughes. Miss Kitsie Frith, a society girl, organized the show, which was for the benefit of the Girls' High School. The Wilsons and the Bullocks occupied orchestra seats, the Wilson party numbering twenty.

Gov. Wilson spent the afternoon on his bed reading Kipling's "Fairy Stories."

Under-Stamped Letters Costly.

Special Correspondence THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 28.—The next President of the United States will enter the White House bankrupt if his correspondents don't stop sending him letters with 2 cent stamps on them. It costs 5 cents to send a letter from New York to Bermuda, but several thousand persons who wish to correspond with Gov. Wilson don't know that, and are sending him letters with domestic postage affixed. The last mail came in on Friday, and since then the Governor has been paying much "postage due." In addition to the postage on his own letters many careless folks have been sending mail to the eighteen or twenty persons in the Governor's party, addressed "care of Gov. Woodrow Wilson." The Governor has been paying overdue postage on all these letters, because his assistants naturally assumed that the charge was on him and reported the under postage to him in bulk instead of in detail.

"It's an expensive business for a poor man," said the Governor to-day.

The Bermudian authorities are extremely punctilious about collecting due postage, and not nearly so punctilious about other postal matters that usually engross American Postmasters. There is a joyful, devil-may-care, laissez-faire, dolce farniente sort of atmsophere surrounding them. For instance, when the Oruba arrived last Friday, Richard N. Taylor, the Secret Service agent, who is accompanying the President-elect, knew there was a letter coming addressed to him in care of general delivery, Hamilton. So he went to the Hamilton Post Office and found it closed.

Taylor called the next day and was told that although his letter was addressed "General Delivery, Hamilton," it had been forwarded to Paget West. To Paget West Taylor accordingly traveled, and after many adventures found the Post Office located in a grocery store kept by J. S. Lightbourn. When Taylor unfolded his tale, Lightbourn beamed.

"Very likely your letter arrived here," said Lightbourn with pride, "but we never keep a letter in this Post Office. We always distribute them."

"Where to?" asked Taylor.

"Oh, various places," explained Lightbourn, affably.

"Well, where was mine distributed to?" asked Taylor.

"Lord bless you, I can't tell you now," answered the Postmaster. "But it was distributed. We pride ourselves on never keeping any mail here; we always distribute it."

"Somewhere?" said the American.

"Somewhere," said the Bermudian. "By the way," he added, as an after thought, "how long are you going to stay in Bermuda?"

"Until Dec. 14," said Taylor.

"Oh, that's all right then," said the Postmaster of Paget West, comfortably. "You are sure to get your letter before then."

"It's a lotus land," said Gov. Wilson in speaking of Bermuda, "and it is. They say there is no crime here and no use for a police force, but if ever crime shows its head here its first and most heinous manifestation will be in the form of hurry, which to a Bermudian would rank at the head of the Penal Code."

The Governor is achieving the finest job of long-distance sleeping ever known even in this lotus land. His intention of recovering from the strain of the campaign is being fulfilled to the utmost, and he could not have found a better place than this to fulfill it—a place where an overpowering drowsiness overcomes the unacclimated alike in the morning, afternoon, and night.

Mrs. Wilson, too, who is on her first visit to Bermuda, is learning to enjoy the place in the somnolent fashion which, after all, is the only way one really can enjoy it. The other day, however, the Governor prevailed on her to take a sail around the harbor. Mrs. Wilson was much interested in the pretty coral cottages with their snowy roofs. She saw one in the distance that struck her especially.

"There!" she exclaimed, clapping her hands; "that is the prettiest cottage I've seen since we came to Bermuda. Oh, why didn't we take that one?"

The Governor grinned, but said nothing. The boat sailed closer inshore, while Mrs. Wilson kept her eyes fixed on the cottage. Suddenly she gave an exclamation.

"Why," she cried, "it's the Glencove!"

These things look different from the sea to what they do on land.

Mrs. Wilson went visiting a day or two ago and discovered some unsuspected relatives. She went to visit a family named Hunter, and learned that they were descended from an Eleanor Hunter, who was her own grandmother, and after whom she was named, and her daughter Eleanor named in turn.

The Governor, meanwhile, goes carriage riding when he thinks the omnipresent American tourist may be out of range, and when he thinks the roads are reasonably clear of everybody but Bermudians—who respect his privacy—he goes bicycling. Even then he chooses unfrequented roads. On these trips he wears an old suit that doesn't look any too good, and wears a gray golf cap. A few days ago he went marketing on his bicycle in this costume, with his market basket slung over the handlebar. A Bermudian acquaintance, trudging along the road, waved him a friendly greeting.

"Does carrying that market basket," he inquired, "mean that you are not at home on your wheel?"

Hanging out a basket on the door, as already explained in these dispatches, means, in Bermuda, that one is not at home.

The English coins here are a source of disturbance to most of the Governor's party. Mostly they are obliged to rely on the honesty of the tradesmen when they produce a bill and get a profusion of pence and ha'pennies and silver pieces of confusing denominations.

"What is the plural of tuppence?" asked Mrs. Swem, the bride of the party, examining her hoard of coins with apprehension.

"Fourpence," replied Mr. Swem promptly.

The Colonial Parliament was disappointed when the Governor failed to keep his engagement to visit it on Monday. The Governor was under the impression that it was going to talk tariff, but instead it discussed the question of purchasing a new steam dredger for the harbor. This, however, was not what kept the Governor away; it was trouble in his department of the interior—indigestion the wise it call. He started, and his faithful entourage of American reporters rushed to the Parliament House, when the Governor found he had to return to Glencove.

The British and American flags still fly in the breeze in front of Glencove. The duty of raising and lowering them is entrusted to a retired English sea captain, named Young. Every morning the old British tar raises the British flag first and the American flag second; and at sunset he hauls down the American flag first and the British flag second. Because, you see, as a true patriot, he could not bear to see the British flag down and the American flag up. The skipper takes great satisfaction in this manoeuvre, and the Governor has not yet observed it.

To Confer with Bryan Later.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 28.—Gov. Wilson has written a letter to William Jennings Bryan, inviting him to a conference after Mr. Wilson's return from Bermuda. The President-elect wishes to consult with Mr. Bryan, as one of the leaders of the Democratic Party, but he will also take counsel with a number of the other Democratic leaders as to his future programme.

Being President-elect of the United States, or merely Woodrow Wilson, an American citizen in search of rest in a British colony in midocean, does not differ in the slightest degree. Gov. Wilson was recalling to-day his previous vacations in the Bermudas, when, as President of Princeton University, he sought repose after taxing his strength in the closing days of his academic career.

"It's not a bit different," he said, as he stood on the veranda of his home overlooking a green inlet, dazzling with color. "Everything is the same as before. Many more people have called, to be sure, but I am having just the kind of vacation I wanted withplenty of rest and exercise.

Mr. Wilson did not have his family here on previous visits, and he was not so prominent a personage, but the people of Bermuda took him at his word when he said he came only for rest, and they have not bothered him.

GREY WON'T APPEAL TO RUSSIA FOR JEWS

British Foreign Minister Refuses Request of Committee, Urging Justice.

NEW TALE ABOUT OUR TREATY

London Post's Correspondent in Odessa Asserts that It Will Be Renewed on Present Basis.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 29.—Russia's treatment of British Jews has been made the subject of important representations to Sir Edward Grey, who, unlike President Taft last year when a similar complaint was made concerning American Jews, has declined to take action in the matter.

The issue turns on the commercial treaty between Russia and Great Britain, drawn up in 1859, which contained the usual clause about the equal treatment of nationals of either country visiting the other.

The point of view of Russia is that a Russian Jew (and incidentally his descendants) who emigrates and takes up naturalization papers does not thereby throw off his Russian nationality.

The complaint is now made that even the drastic local restrictions are exceeded, that the right of entry into Russia is refused to British Jews except under conditions which are available only for a very small minority, and that the right to freedom of residence and trade is withheld.

Correspondence has passed between the Joint Committee of Deputies of British Jews and the Anglo-Jewish Association and Sir Edward Grey concerning the restrictions imposed on British Jews in Russia. The committee suggested that the Government should make friendly representations to the Russian Government with a view to obtaining amendment to the treaty of 1859 or a more equitable interpretation of the treaty.

In reply Sir Edward informed the committee that the matter was carefully considered by the British Government in 1862 and again in 1881, and he was unable to approach the Russian Government in the manner suggested.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 29.—The Morning Post's correspondent in Odessa telegraphs:

"I learn from an unquestionably trustworthy source that the Russo-American treaty of commerce, in a largely and essentially amended form, will in all probability be renewed on Jan. 1.

"According to my information the Washington Government will consent to waive the Jewish passport question on the broad principle that Russia, like other nations, has the indisputable right to make such laws and regulations for its own internal governance as it may deem fit and just.

"The success of the negotiations between St. Petersburg and Washington is chiefly due on the Russian side to Premier Kokovtzoff and the Minister of Commerce, M. Timascheff, and on the American side to Curtis Guild, American Ambassador to St. Petersburg, and the American Secretary of State."

This prophecy by the Odessa correspondent is entirely contrary to all recent advices from Washington, where the determination to insist on equal treatment of all American citizens visiting Russia is as firm as ever.

CZAREVITCH AN INVALID.

Has One Skin Too Few—Belief That He Will Not Live to be Czar.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 29.—A correspondent of The Daily News says:

"From an excellent authority I have been able to learn the facts regarding the health of the Czarevitch. He has one covering of skin too few, such as was the case with the late Duke of Albany. This skin deficiency is aggravated by the difficulty of confining the extravasation of blood in the groin region, which caused superficial inflammation extending to the top of the abdomen. This condition and the extreme slowness of diminution in the swelling points to much constitutional debility.

"As regards the hip bone, it is not known yet whether the trouble is due to defective ossification or whether it threatens to be tubercular. It is declared that nothing points to danger to the boy's life and that the years of boyhood may bring better symptoms, but he has the extreme nervous activity often seen in children who are not destined to live long.

"Any notion of thanksgiving, as some fervent loyalists desired, for his recovery has been severely suppressed. He is to be regarded as an invalid child, and in a vague way people have come to believe that the boy is not to be Czar, as inevitably follows the stories circulating of predictions of religious mystics and suchlike that Michael, the Czar's only brother, will reign. Michael is morganatically allied to the divorced wife of a Russian cavalry officer and has two children by her. He takes no part in political, military, or court activities."

BIG PRICES FOR PORCELAIN.

A Vienna Group Is Sold at Christie's for $4,050.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Unusually high prices for old porcelain were paid at Christie's to-day.

A Dresden group, lovers seated beneath a tree, with a lamb and a dog, 10¼ inches high, brought $3,400.

A Dresden group of a girl and a harlequin, with a birdcage and a pug dog, 7¾ inches high, realized $3,300.

A Vienna group of a lady, gentlemen, and three children, 12½ inches high, was sold for $4,050.

HOTEL SWINDLER JAILED.

Calls Himself "Mason"—Believed to be of Wealthy American Family.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

GENEVA, Nov. 28.—William Mason, aged about 32, who says he is from New York, was arrested at Lausanne this morning, charged with defrauding Swiss hotels during the last few months. He was arrested on a similar charge in London in 1906. At that time his heavy debts were promptly paid by relatives.

It is believed that the prisoner, who has been spending money lavishly, is a member of a wealthy family, and that he is using an assumed name, although American consuls cannot learn who he is. He says he will soon be released.

NEW DUMA ASSEMBLES.

Is Progressive, but Is Not Likely to Settle the Passport Question.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 28.—The fourth Duma assembled to-day. Elections for it began in September. M. Rodzianko, Octobrist Deputy for Ekaterinoslaff, who was President of the third Duma, was re-elected President by a vote of 251 to 156.

The fourth Duma has declared itself a Progressist body, but it cannot be inferred, because of that, that a majority will be found to favor the American contention in the passport controversy. There are only three Jews in the new House, the member for Lodz being the only one of these elected by Jewish votes.

The Extreme Nationalists are evidently in the minority, but the bulk of the members, it is said, are not prepared to give American Jews or American goods preferential treatment. The policy of the Government will be to render the Russian market independent of American cotton and American agricultural machinery, and in this it is fairly certain to be supported by the Duma.

CHINESE WANT MORE WAR.

Trying to Collect $5,000,000 and Enlist 2,000 Volunteers.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 28. — Several meetings have been held in Che-Foo, China, to organize a boycott of Russian goods, according to a dispatch from that city.

The Chinese are endeavoring to collect a war fund amounting to $5,000,000, and to enlist 2,000 volunteers among the inhabitants.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Great Britain was in no way a party to the Russo-Mongolian agreement, by which Russia recognized the independence of Northern Mongolia, according to a statement made by Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister, in the House of Commons to-day.

The statement was called forth by an intimation in the form of a question put by Laurence Ginnell, an Irish Nationalist, that the mission of J. J. Korostovetz, former Russian Minister at Peking, to Urga, Mongolia, and the treaty with the Khan of Mongolia were the first fruits of the recent visit to London of Sergius Sazonoff, Russian Foreign Minister.

Congress Accepts Victoria's Resignation—Political Prisoners Freed.

SANTO DOMINGO, Nov. 28.—The resignation of Eladio Victoria, President of the Santo Domingan Republic, was tendered and formally accepted at to-day's session of Congress.

Many political prisoners were shortly afterward released from confinement.

Hostilities have been suspended throughout the republic.

Men's Winter Clothes
Garment the Embodiment of Style

STYLE includes beauty of fabric and perfection of fit. Yet ideal fabric and fit do not of necessity mean Style. So it's obvious that he who talks of fitting you well in handsome materials may not give you one iota of Style.

And it's equally true that he who asks you to choose among some sixty "styles" of ready-for-service garments, is not offering you "Style" but only "styles"—a word which means simply "ways" of cutting the garments.

When Paquin of Paris designs a gown for women it is Style itself. When a dozen modistes have copied this gown and it is sold in countless Shops then Style is no more. Popularity has taken its place and speedily degenerates to the Commonplace.

True Style has naught to do with that which is Common.

Here, at Smith Gray & Co., where we personally make our clothes for men, and only as we need them, and where the average time from the bolt of recently-selected fabric to your back is but a week, we have the opportunity seldom achieved elsewhere, to produce garments that are Style itself.

This a matter of artist's skill applied at almost the precise moment when Style declares itself.

Special price paid will be forgotten when supreme satisfaction in your purchase is still yours.

BOY WANTED

Bound to be a broker, bright Cambridge twelve-year-old sees a sign and captures job.

Boston, November 23d.

The drop in the market last week has brought to light a number of odd stories of sudden shifts of fortune. One of the queerest is that of a sixteen-year-old employe of a prominent firm of brokers.

Six months ago he organized a pool of brokers' clerks and ran up their pocket money to $60,000. Convinced that he could turn this $60,000 into $160,000, the young manipulator margined all the pool money on the bull side of the market. When the crash came last week he took account of stock. His pool of $60,000 had shrunk $59,841, leaving a balance of $159 to be divided among the dozen members. This wasn't enough to gamble with and they decided to eat it up. They bought the best dinner that Young's could serve to a dozen disappointed speculators for $159. Horace has been telling the patrons of the hotel the details of this dinner in installments. The sixteen-year-old leader of this fierce assault on the market is a seasoned banker of four years' experience. At the age of twelve he played hooky from his Cambridge school, trudged into Boston, and found his way to a broker's office at the head of State street, where two things caught his ey A sign "boy wanted"; and the entrancin vision of a clerk behind a wire-screened window shoveling five-dollar gold pieces into the scales. He presented himself before the broker and with rare presence of mind announced that he was the boy wanted, and would like a job shoveling gold, and——

He has been shoveling gold ever since

This was forty-three years ago. The boy was THOMAS W. LAWSON, who grew up in the banking and brokerage business; saw all its ins and outs until Stock Exchange methods became as familiar to him as the air he breathed; but always in the back part of his head he was turning matters over—weighing, considering, deducing, and slowly making up his mind, and hardening his resolution for the day when he would attack the gambling end of the Stock Exchange, and put the whole truth of its subtle and insidious dangers before the American people.

He is doing it now. It's an amazing story, an interesting story, and a necessary story. To neglect it or to sneer at it is to be blind to your own interests.

LAWRENCE PLEDGED TO LAW AND ORDER

City in Series of Mass Meetings Declares for Patriotism and Loyalty.

ETTOR HOLDS MASS MEETING

Released Labor Leader Denounces Capital from Tail of a Cart in Vacant Lot.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Nov. 28.—Uniting in a series of mass meetings in various sections of the city, thousands of citizens of Lawrence to-night renewed their vows of patriotism and loyalty to the Nation's flag. They also pledged themselves under any and all circumstances to support the City Government in enforcing the law for the protection of property and the preservation of law and order, to maintain and defend the honor of the city "against the slanders of her enemies," and to be ready at all times to promote through united efforts the general interest of the whole city.

Earlier in the day a crowd of 1,500 textile operatives gathered in a vacant field and listened for an hour and a half while Joseph J. Ettor, the Lawrence strike leader, acquitted Tuesday of responsibility for the murder of Anna Lopizzo during one of last Winter's strike riots, expound the doctrines of the Industrial Workers of the World. In the course of his address he touched upon the meetings planned for the evening.

The meetings to-night marked the end of a period of protest on the part of a large proportion of Lawrence citizens against the parade of the Industrial Workers of the World on Sept. 29, when hundreds of persons marched through the streets waving red flags and displaying the motto, "No God, No Master."

In response to a proclamation of Mayor Scanlon, Columbus Day, Oct. 12, was the occasion for a flag display and patriotic demonstration, beginning a period of protest against the display of the red banner of the Industrial Workers of the World, which was to be ended on Thanksgiving Day.

Seven mass meetings in connection with the flag celebration were held to-night. The principal gathering was at the City Hall, with simultaneous meetings at six public schools in various parts of the city. Each of the meetings was well attended; that at City Hall being before a crowd that packed the auditorium.

Although the programmes of the various meetings were not identical, all dwelt upon good citizenship and obedience to law, and every person attending the meetings carried an American flag.

The speakers at City Hall were Samuel J. Elder of Boston, a native son of Lawrence, who represented America at The Hague in the fisheries dispute, and Justice Charles E. De Courcey, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, a resident of the city. Mr. Elder said:

"There is in this meeting no plot, no prejudice, no class demonstration. Citizenship, not partisanship, is our theme. It is a meeting for renewed pledges of devotion and loyalty."

Letters were read from Cardinal William H. O'Connell, Bishop William T. Lawrence of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts, and the Mayors of five Massachusetts cities. Bishop Lawrence, who was for eight years a resident of the city, wrote:

"We who have been here several generations want to join with those who have been here half a generation in building up this Republic and our cities. Lawrence is now going at it in the right way, with malice towards none, and with the National flag, representing our National life, calling people to a loyalty to our American institutions, to liberty under the law."

Cardinal O'Connell said in his letter:

"I feel sure that the religious sentiments which will be manifested in the Thanksgiving Day celebration will eliminate the last vestiges of any suspicion that the motto, 'No God, no master,' finds any sympathy in the hearts of the citizens of Lawrence."

TO GREET ACQUITTED MEN.

Ettor and Giovannetti Will Speak Here at Socialist Reception.

Ettor and Giovannitti, the two leaders of the Lawrence strike recently acquitted there after a trial for murder, will be the guests of honor at a reception to be given here on Sunday afternoon by Branch 7 of the Socialist Party at Sulzer's Harlem River Casino, 127th Street and Second Avenue. Both of the men will speak.

Other speakers will be William D. Haywood, leader of their faction in the Industrial Workers of the World, and Frederick Moore of Seattle, Wash., chief counsel for the defense during the recent trial.

MYSTERY IN DEATH OF RICH SPINSTER

hour last night, under the direction of Lieut. William Roddy of the Adams Street station.

At midnight the police were not prepared to report to the Fire Marshall that the fire at 26 Hoyt Street appeared to have had an incendiary origin. There was no definite ground for talking of foul play.

The real stir came with the appearance of the barber, the man who rented the little shop on the ground floor of 26 Hoyt Street, the man who was her confidant in business matters as far as she was willing to have one at all. This man was Anthony Orenckinto. He paid a visit to the police last evening and introduced himself as the beneficiary of the old woman's will. To him, he said, her wealth would come unconditionally, and he said it was great wealth.

The barber was questioned hurriedly, and in response he told the authorities that they would find the copy of Octavia Frederick's will tucked away in a drawer in the table in her rooms. It would leave all the property to him, he explained. They looked and found it, a rough pencil document, which purported to be a will form and which, the barber explained, was just a copy of the original, safely deposited in the People's Trust Company.

In his capacity as her agent, the barber explained, it had been his custom to collect her rents, look out for her securities and make her deposits at the banks. These were the Peoples Trust Company and the Brooklyn Savings Bank. Besides, he said, she had securities in a safety deposit box. In all, he thought, they would find her to have accumulated about $250,000 aside from her real estate holdings to which she clung so jealously.

The barber answered all questions readily, and went into such detail as the police seemed to require. He told them that the last rentals he had collected amounted to $498, and that he had turned this amount in cash over to her on Tuesday evening of this week. He said they would find it in a wooden box in the kitchen back of the stove, but they did not find it. The suggestion was advanced that the box and the money had been burned to ashes and that no trace of either would be found.

The penciled will copy which was fished from the table drawer was the briefest of instruments. Beginning with the familiar "Know all men by these presents," it stated simply that Anthony Orenckinto was to inherit her property at Hoyt and Livingston Streets and her property at 323 Madison Street, in addition to her possessions entrusted to the People's Trust Company and the Brooklyn Savings Bank. In the will, her name appeared as Octavia Friederich.

When the story of the smell of kerosene was carried to Russell Walker he scoffed at it, and said there had been nothing to indicate foul play or an incendiary origin for the fire which killed Miss Fredericks.

He was not inclined to find much cause for concern in the will, either, for he explained in an authoritative manner, that Miss Fredericks was far less wealthy than neighborhood gossip and the barber's story had led people to believe.

In the first place, he explained, Miss Fredericks did not own the Hoyt and Livingston Street houses, but simply had a life interest in them. That promised to throw some light on the fact that they had never been sold. He said they had passed to her from her mother, and that she did not have the power of bequeathing them.

Furthermore, Mr. Walker said, Miss Fredericks had little money in the banks. But the story of the money in the banks came from the barber, who appeared to be in a position to know, for he said it was part of his business to make the deposits for Miss Fredericks.

It was learned last night that in 1905, houses on the two lots adjoining hers at 16 and 18 Hoyt Street were sold to one of Brooklyn's department stores for about $100,000. These two lots had been owned by C. Fredericks, a relative of Octavia Fredericks and after the transfer of the property, he was said to have gone West. The police understand that Miss Fredericks had a brother and a sister living in San Diego, Cal.

The agitation which was stirred among the police late last night by some of the peculiar features of the case started a fresh investigation. The theory of possible incendiarism received sufficient credence for the police to ask Fire Marshal Brophy to make an immediate investigation without waiting for morning. The Fire Marshal went over the ground, talked with the Adams Street Station men, sounded the different firemen, and even took a statement from the undertaker. At the conclusion of these preliminaries he gave it as his opinion that the probabilities were strongly against the incendiary explanation of the fire. This was by no means final, and the investigation will be continued this morning.

The odor of kerosene was the hitch in the story of a fire which the police originally reported as having been started by the overturning of a charcoal burner. It was supported by the men at the Adams Street Station, who did not, however, back up the earlier theory of Lieut. Kennedy. They were willing to say they had smelled kerosene in the room where the old recluse was burned. The presence of kerosene was also attested by Acting Battalion Chief Fuery, who was one of the first firemen to reach the second floor of 26 Hoyt Street.

Fuery said he thought he saw the broken bowl of a kerosene lamp among the débris in the dark, flame-swept room. He was inclined to believe that as old Miss Fredericks was lighting the lamp, which served as the only illumination in the frame house, it exploded and started the fire. Unless something new turns up this morning it is probable the Fire Marshal will be content with this explanation.

The police, in the light of Mrs. Walker's statements, were not inclined to give great weight to the barber's estimates of Miss Fredericks's wealth, but these matters cannot be cleared up with any certainty until to-day.

The barber explained his appearance as the sole legatee of the recluse by saying she had deeply appreciated his constant courtesies and attentions to her in the loneliness of her declining years. He departed from headquarters soon after midnight.

Octavia Fredericks was 70 years old. She experienced a stroke of paralysis ten years ago, and during the past three years, she was quite helpless.

ABSCONDER MAY BE SUICIDE.

Family Believes That W. B. Cower of Binghamton Drowned Himself.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 28.—The mystery over the whereabouts of William B. Carver, the lawyer who left town Wednesday night after writing a suicide note to his wife, has not been cleared up. While belief is strong that he has killed himself, the police are sending cards and circulars all over the country, taking the chance that he may yet be alive and a fugitive from justice. If discovered alive he will have to answer for the alleged theft of $8,900 of funds belonging to trust estates to which he had access. His partners, Israel Deyo and Gen. Charles H. Hitchcock, to-day went through his papers and said that there was no doubt that the losses were heavy.

It is believed that Carver committed suicide in some remote place in an effort to prevent his body from being discovered, for the sake of protecting his family name, which is among the most prominent in this section. No effort will be made by the police to drag the river for the body, as the police say there is no clue to his having drowned himself. His family, however, will drag a certain part of the Susquehanna River, near which Carver was seen the day before he disappeared.

ITALIANS REJOICE IN PEACE.

Magistrate Freschi Says War Has Given Italy Balance of Power.

Representatives of eighty-seven Italian societies in this city had a dinner last night in Harlem River Park, to celebrate the end of the war between Turkey and Italy. The chief speaker was Magistrate John J. Freschi, who spoke on the war and the prospects of the 3,000,000 Italians in the United States.

"The war has accomplished two things," he said. "First, the reclamation to modern civilization of the last stretch of land in Northern Africa that was still subject to the rule of a fast disappearing race, and second, the restoration to Italy of a greater influence and control, in fact the balance of power, over the Mediterranean Sea, and has made it possible for Italy, now a world power, to dominate the great sea."

Other speakers were Luigi Vittorio Fugazzi, Giuseppe Gentile, the Italian Consul in New York; Giovanni Vicario, Agostino de Biasi, Eduardo D'Angelo, Prof. Antonio Galitri, Giuseppe Ponza de Leon, and Vincenzo Capparelli.

FINDS CITY BOYS STRONGER.

Physique Better Than Farm Lads', Says Minnesota University Instructor

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 28.—That city-bred boys at the University of Minnesota are physically superior to those reared on the farm was the declaration last night of Dr. L. J. Cooke, gymnasium director.

Dr. Cooke said that among the physical defects found in students from rural communities were flabby muscles, humped shoulders, curved spine, low right shoulder, muscular weakness of heart action, small chest expansion, and small lung capacity.

"In the boy from the farm," he said, "the muscles of the arms and shoulders usually are well developed, while nearly every other part of the physical organization falls below the general average. The city youth, who usually has had more or less physical training, possesses a much better physique."

MRS. LINCOLN SOUGHT GOVERNMENT PENSION

In Letter to House of Representatives President's Widow Asked for Yearly Income.

NEEDED MONEY FOR HEALTH

Second Missive Discovered Among Historical Documents Found in the Attic of the Capitol.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The agitation in favor of the granting of pensions to the ex-Presidents of the United States and their widows, and the publication in THE NEW YORK TIMES of a letter written by Mrs. Abraham Lincoln, to-day brought out the fact that another letter written by Mrs. Lincoln, was recently discovered and is now in the possession of the Library of Congress.

There is a serious disagreement among Democratic members of the House Appropriations Committee on the proposal of Representative Burleson.

A discussion of the possibilities of placing a provision for Presidential pensions in the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill now being prepared by a sub-committee of the appropriations committee culminated in the abandonment of that plan by Representative Burleson, and a general movement for special legislation on the subject probably will be organized as soon as the session of Congress opens next week.

Representative Johnson of South Carolina led the opposition to the scheme in the committee, and was vigorous in his denunciation of the plan, which he termed "toadyism and flunkeyism."

The second letter of Mrs. Lincoln which has been found was written from Frankfort, Germany, in 1869, four years after the assassination of her husband, and five years later than the letter of Mrs. Lincoln which Andrew Carnegie made public in THE TIMES yesterday.

That letter spoke of the meagre salary which President Lincoln was receiving in 1864, but the second letter is a direct appeal to Congress for a pension because Mrs. Lincoln's financial means did not enable her to follow the advice of physicians, or to live in a style becoming a widow of a Chief Magistrate of a Nation. In her first letter Mrs. Lincoln said:

> The President's salary is $10,000 a year in gold, taxed $900. With such an establishment to keep up you may imagine we have not enriched.

In the second letter which has been just discovered Mrs. Lincoln writes:

> To the Honorable Speaker of the House of Representatives:
>
> I herewith most respectfully present to the Honorable House of Representatives an application for a pension. I am a widow of a President of the United States whose life was sacrificed in his country's service. That sad calamity has very greatly impaired my health, and by the advice of my physician I have come over to Germany to try the mineral waters and during the Winter to go to Italy. But my financial means do not permit me to take advantage of the urgent advice given me, nor can I live in a style becoming a widow of a Chief Magistrate of a Nation, although I live as economically as I possibly can.
>
> In consideration of the great services my dearly beloved husband has rendered to the United States and of the fearful loss I have sustained by his untimely death—his martyrdom, I may say—I respectfully submit to your honorable body this petition, hoping that a yearly pension may be granted me, so that I may have less pecuniary care.
>
> I remain, most respectfully,
>
> MRS. A. LINCOLN.
> Frankfort, Germany, January, 1869.

This letter was discovered in March, 1910, among many valuable historical documents in the attic of the Capitol among the records of the House Committee on Accounts. As soon as the discovery of these letters, one of which was written by Martha Washington, was announced by Representative Joseph F. O'Connell of Massachusetts, a member of the Accounts Committee, the House of Representatives lost no time in adopting a resolution giving the Library of Congress possession of the letter from Mrs. Lincoln.

Mrs. Lincoln did not receive the grant of a pension from Congress until more than a year after this letter was written. Congress gave Mrs. Lincoln $3,000 a year by a special act on July 14, 1870. It was increased by an act passed on Feb. 2, 1882, and she received this amount until her death.

Morosco Here to Produce Plays.

Oliver Morosco, the Western theatrical manager, arrived in New York yesterday from Los Angeles. He will begin at once on the production of several plays, one of which will be "The Escape," by Paul Armstrong, to be presented in New York in January. Nat C. Goodwin, under Mr. Morosco's management, will appear in "Gauntlett's Pride," by J. Hartley Manners, in Los Angeles on Dec. 30, and later in New York. "The Money Moon" also will be produced by Mr. Morosco in the East, and he has several other plays to put on in Los Angeles.

YOUR UNITED STATES

By Arnold Bennett

No English writer since Thackeray has been welcomed to the United States with such spontaneous enthusiasm as Arnold Bennett. All doors were opened to him. He saw more in a comparatively brief visit than most of us see in a lifetime.

Gifted with unique powers of observation and a keen sense of humor, Mr. Bennett has written a book of impressions far more interesting than the ordinary novel. Although he has lived in nearly every European country, he finds the United States in many ways the most wonderful of all.

Mr. Bennett approaches his subject in a brilliantly unconventional way and with a full consciousness of the bigness of his undertaking. Our daily life, our society, our sports, our theatres, our schools and colleges, East and West, all come in for their share of his sane and graceful appreciation.

ARMAMENTS & ARBITRATION

By Rear Admiral A. T. Mahan, U. S. N., Retired

As a recognized authority on naval subjects, Admiral Mahan stands among the few who are absolutely frank and outspoken in their opinions regarding the naval policy of the United States. In this book he discusses exhaustively the several factors involved in the contrasted methods of Armament and Arbitration, with all that the two words imply—force on the one hand, law on the other. His conclusions are sane, logical and worthy of national attention.

HACKETT-CARHART CREDITORS' SETTLEMENT SALE

Trust the Evidence of Your Own Eyes

You don't have to take anything on faith from the Hackett-Carhart stores.

You are not asked to believe a single claim made for the merchandise or the values.

Your own eyes will tell you that here is the greatest clothes opportunity ever offered.

You will have to admit to yourself that you have never seen finer, wider assortments of suits and overcoats.

And you will know instinctively that the prices are about half what they should be.

If you are skeptical about the latter fact, you can go even further than the evidence of your own senses.

You can prove the rarity of Hackett-Carhart values, as follows:

Have the Hackett-Carhart suit or overcoat of your choice put aside for you.

Then go elsewhere and try to duplicate it at twice the Hackett-Carhart price.

Others have made this test, and always with the same result. Always have they returned to the Hackett-Carhart stores to claim their first selections.

SAYS PUBLICITY LAW LEAVES PRESS FREE

Solicitor General Argues It Merely Imposes Conditions for Use of Special Mail Rate.

QUESTION OF DISCRETION

Bullitt Insists Congress Has Plenary Power—Publications Have Right to Pay Full Postage for Privacy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The Government's brief in the cases involving the constitutionality of the law requiring newspapers to publish their circulation figures and the names of owners or stockholders, and requiring also that matter printed for a consideration shall be labeled "advertisement," will be filed in the Supreme Court to-morrow by William Marshall Bullitt, Solicitor-General. It is a joint answer to the appeals from the United States Court for the Southern District of New York in the cases of The New York Journal of Commerce against Postmaster General Hitchcock and Attorney General Wickersham, and the Lewis Publishing Company, publisher of The New York Morning Telegraph, against Edwin M. Morgan, Postmaster in New York.

Mr. Bullitt holds that a proper construction of the statute forbids newspapers to use the second-class mail privilege unless the terms of the law are obeyed fully. He contends the condition that paid editorials shall be indicated as advertisements is not intended as an abridgment of the freedom of the press, in violation of the first amendment of the Constitution, nor an invasion of the powers reserved to the States under the Eleventh Amendment. If, however, it should be held that this requirement as to paid editorials is unconstitutional, he urges that the advertisement clause is separable from the rest of the section in the law, and may be declared void without affecting the validity of the provision denying the use of the mails unless the statements described are filed.

The Solicitor General argues that the law applies only to newspapers that desire to use the second-class mail privileges and not to newspapers generally; that the present statute does not attempt to regulate the use of the mails generally, and that Congress undertook to deny the use of the mails only to such second-class publications as refused to comply with regulations it deemed wise to impose. The position is taken, supported by many decisions of the courts, that Congress has the absolute right to determine what matter may be carried in and what may be excluded from the mails, and may declare the conditions on which mail may be carried. That power is derived from the eighth section of the first article of the Constitution, which reads:

"The Congress shall have the power to establish Post Offices and post roads."

It is recited that the Government received a profit of $70,000,000 a year from first-class mail matter and carries second-class mail matter at a loss of a like amount annually—in other words, overcharges one class of the people for the benefit of another, which it does under the power the Constitution gives it. The argument is made that if Congress may do that, it equally well may make changes in the classification and may affix such conditions as it chooses to the right to be admitted to the second-class rate.

The aim of the act, Mr. Bullitt contends, is not to regulate or censor the press, but simply to add to existing conditions others which Congress regards as proper if the publications in question desire to make use of the very favorable rate fixed for sending their issues through the mail as second-class matter.

In discussing the decisions in the cases which involve the right to use the mails, and especially the lottery cases, Mr. Bullitt argues that the power of Congress is plenary. He says:

Congress has the unrestrained power to say what in its opinion is so hurtful to the public welfare that it shall not pass through the mails; and it may enforce that opinion without its correctness being subject to judicial review. But it must be always remembered that in the case at bar Congress has not undertaken to exclude the newspapers from the mails, but only to exclude them from the extraordinary privilege of cent-a-pound postage, unless they conform to Congress's ideas as to publicity.

As to the power to compel the press to disclose facts concerning its private business, Mr. Bullitt says:

Unquestionably, Congress, through the control over the mails, can as a price for using them compel a certain acquiescence in its views which the paper may prefer to pay rather than lose the use of the low postage rate; but, even so, that is no abridgement of the full and free right to print and circulate anything the paper pleases, for there are many ways of circulation other than the one-cent-a-pound second-class rate.

RECOUNT MAY SAVE WOMEN.

Suffrage, Apparently Defeated In Michigan, Still Has Chance.

DETROIT, Nov. 28.—The constitutional amendment providing woman suffrage in Michigan was defeated by 594 votes, according to figures compiled in the Secretary of State's office at Lansing from every county in Michigan.

Until the result is officially announced by the State Board of Canvassers on Dec. 10 it is said that no definite statement will be made by the advocates of the amendment as to what course of action they will next take. Plans are now being made in many districts, however, to petition the Legislature to resubmit the question in the Spring election.

The only recount definitely decided upon is in Saginaw County, where the figures showed a majority of 2,500 against the amendment. There is a possibility that the recount may swing the victory back to the woman suffrage advocates, who have been claiming it up to within the last two days.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 28.—Of the four constitutional amendments voted upon Nov. 5, three carried, the woman suffrage alone being defeated. The official vote on suffrage was 135,546 for and 227,024 against.

TOSSED BY BUCK DEER.

Enraged Animal Breaks Four Ribs and Arm of Colorado Park Keeper.

BOULDER, Col., Nov. 28.—For fifty minutes E. M. Smith, superintendent of Chautauqua Park, fought bare-handed with an enraged buck deer to-day until park attendants heard his cries for help.

Smith went to the inclosure in which the deer was confined on his morning feeding round. The buck dashed at him with lowered head. The superintendent saved himself for a time by hanging to the deer's antlers. The furious buck tossed him into the air and dashed him to the ground time and again, breaking four ribs and his left arm.

SHE CAN'T EVADE JURY DUTY.

Kansas Judge Wouldn't Excuse Woman on Account of Housework.

EL DORADO, Kan., Nov. 28.—Women who wish to escape jury duty in the District Court will be disappointed if they assign duties of the household as a reason. Mrs. Carl Selig of this city, when summoned on jury last night, told the court she was too busy with her housework to serve.

"You will not be excused," promptly replied Judge Aiken.

Another prospective juror then stood up and told the court that she was opposed to woman's suffrage, and that the jury box was no place for a woman. She was excused.

Boy Burned by Masquerade Dress.

Dressed up as a ragamuffin in his mother's old skirt, eight-year-old Thomas Quinlan of 246 East 142d Street went with three of his playmates to celebrate Thanksgiving Day yesterday afternoon in a vacant lot at 142d Street and Ryder Avenue. The skirt caught fire from live coals in a workshop on the lot, and he was encircled with flames in a moment. Thomas Clare of 250 East 142d Street, who was returning from a saloon with a pail of beer, dashed the beer on the boy and extinguished the fire. He then took the boy to a drug store from which he was removed to Lincoln Hospital. His entire body was covered with burns, and Dr. Chillian said there was little hope for his recovery.

BURNING FILM CAUSES SCARE.

Part of Moving-Picture Audience Needlessly Leaves Theatre.

Fire, which started in the operator's booth in Caines's Manhattan Theatre, a moving-picture playhouse, at 1,249 Broadway, yesterday afternoon, created some alarm, and a number of those in the audience left. The fire was caused by a film igniting in the asbestos booth and was confined to that inclosure, with little damage.

The theatre, which seated between 700 and 800 persons, was crowded, when a picture suddenly faded from view, and the shadow of a sheet of flame could be seen on the screen. William Strickler, the operator, jumped out of the booth and closed the door after him. The lights in the house were turned on, and from the stage the manager notified the audience that a slight accident had occurred, but asked the audience to remain seated as there was no cause for alarm. In the meantime ushers hurried to the various exits and stood ready to throw the doors open.

Somebody turned in an alarm from Thirty-first Street and Broadway. When the spectators heard the engines, they were alarmed and many left their seats and hurried to the entrance. Patrolman Bauer and Harry Hildebrandt, the ticket taker, tried to calm their fears, but they insisted upon going out. When the firemen arrived the fire had burned itself out. A majority of the audience remained seated and after a short delay, other pictures were shown.

ACTOR TEARLE REPORTED WED

Bride Said to be Mrs. Menges Corwin Hill, Twice Divorced.

It was rumored yesterday that Mrs. Roberta Menges Corwin Hill and Conway Tearle, the actor, were married yesterday in Jersey City by the Rev. Andrew J. Meyer of 305 York Avenue, pastor of the Wayne Street Reformed Church. When he was asked if he had officiated the clergyman refused to admit it, but said:

"I know something about it, but I will not say a word just now."

He said, however, that the certificate of the marriage would be filed by the minister who would perform the ceremony next Tuesday. He also suggested that Miss Dolly of the Casino Theatre, in this city, might know something of the wedding.

There are two Dolly Sisters who are appearing in "The Merry Countess" at the Casino. When they were asked about the matter last night they declared that neither of them knew Mrs. Roberta Hill, and, much less, anything about her marriage. However, they confessed themselves a little hazy as to where Jersey City might be.

Mrs. Roberta Hill was sued a few days ago by Mrs. Josephine Park Tearle for the alienation of the affections of her husband, Conway Tearle, whom she had just divorced. Conway Tearle is an English actor, and was playing last Summer in "The Belle of Sheepshead Bay." In her application for a marriage license, which was filed in Jersey City on Wednesday, Mrs. Hill stated that she had divorced Halsey Corwin in 1907 and Arthur Hill in 1909. She is 25 years old.

LESSON OF TITANIC LOST.

Seamen Complain That No Country Has Passed Needed Legislation.

Officers of the International Seamen's Union complained yesterday that while it was now seven months since the Titanic disaster, nothing of a definite nature had been done to prevent a similar disaster from taking place. One of them said:

"The present status of legislation in the different countries affords ground for fear that history will repeat itself.

"The lawmakers of the different nations should insist that ships be manned by crews of experienced men, who would see that every life-boat and other form of life saving apparatus should be utilized to the highest possible point of efficiency, thus obviating all loss of life that is humanly preventable."

YOUTHFUL HUNTER SHOT.

Killed by Twelve-Year-Old with Rifle Supposed to be Unloaded.

WOBURN, Mass., Nov. 28.—A youthful hunter was shot and killed accidentally here to-day by another boy, after a hunting expedition had ended. Joseph Gardey, the 14-year-old son of a hotel proprietor, was the victim.

Gardey and Arthur Boudreau, aged 15, had returned to the Boudreau home from a shooting trip, and while in the back yard Lawrence Boudreau, the 12-year-old brother of Arthur, picked up a rifle, which he supposed was not loaded. In a joking way Lawrence pointed the weapon at Gardey and pulled the trigger. Gardey was instantly killed. Lawrence Boudreau was taken into custody, but, as the medical examiner pronounced the case one of accidental shooting, no charge was preferred.

LENGTHENS OWN SENTENCE.

Burglar Takes Extra Seven Years Rather Than Betray Partner.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Nov. 28.—Rather than "peach on a pal," Frank Henry, "gentleman burglar," of 222 McDougall Street, Brooklyn, accepted yesterday a fourteen-year penitentiary sentence instead of one of seven years.

Henry robbed the house of Mrs. R. C. Corbin July 17, and on the same night he broke into the home of Thomas Walling of Metuchen. For each of these offenses he got a seven-year sentence to run consecutively. Had Henry "peached," he would have been allowed to serve the sentences concurrently. What the prosecutor wanted to find out from him was the name of the person who had freed Henry fro ma pair of handcuffs.

On the night of the robberies, when finishing his work at the Walling house, Fred C. Peck shot Henry in the leg. Later, Chief O'Flaherty, left alone with the prisoner, was outwitted by him, and Henry escaped. He still had handcuffs on, and Prosecutor Silzer wanted to know who took them off. Henry refused to tell, although he will have to stay seven years longer in prison because of his refusal.

Hunt Man and Young Girl.

The Jersey City police have been asked to look for Edward Hause, 25 years old, of 39 Orient Avenue and Mary Holmes of 37 Senate Place, who left their homes and got a marriage license yesterday. The girl gave her age as 18 years, but her parents say she is not quite 16 years old.

THANKSGIVING GIFT FOR TITANIC WIDOWS

The American Committee Sends Them News by Wire of $51,739 Awards.

WEEDED OUT THE IMPOSTORS

The Task of Investigating the Claims Long and Difficult—Authorities Everywhere Helped.

Announcement was made yesterday of the disposition of the Titanic relief fund which William R. Hearst started, and in connection with which the New York American raised a total of $62,020.47. The announcement was made by the committee in charge of the fund, through the manager of the fund, Victor A. Watson, as follows:

"Through the fund a great number of half orphans and widows will be assured of a good start in life. In some cases money is given outright, while in others, to insure the children against any bad business judgment on the part of their mothers, trust funds are being created.

"To make their Thanksgiving Day mean something to them, the managers of the fund yesterday telegraphed the good news to many of the widows who might now be without homes had it not been for the generosity of the public in providing for them through this and other funds.

"A request was made by the Woman's Relief Committee that the American Titanic Fund be held in reserve until the widows were settled in their minds as to what they would do. For some months back the work of investigations has been going along and information has been exchanged with the Red Cross Society and with the Lord Mayor's Fund committee and now the awards are made.

"The committee having charge of the American Titanic Fund consists of William B. Joyce, president of the National Surety Company; C. M. Zion, also of that company; Mrs. Nelson H. Henry, Mrs. E. B. Brunner and Mrs. William R. Hearst, all of whom served on the Woman's Relief Committee, and Victor A. Watson and G. W. Langdon, representing the Hearst newspapers. All the members of the committee, except Mrs. Henry, attended the meeting at which the final awards were made. She was out of the city, and the report will be submitted for her signature on Monday.

"At this time the American wishes to express its sincere thanks to the National Surety Company for a most valuable service. In connection with the work of investigation, it was found necessary to have attorneys in various parts of the United States consult with claimants, look up wills and other legal records and make recommendations. The National Surety Company at the first suggestion promptly volunteered the service of its department of bonded attorneys, and outside of all other methods of investigation that were followed, caused its attorneys in all cases that required legal research to handle the cases without fee or expense of any nature.

"The American is glad to report to the many persons who opened their hearts and purses at the time of the Titanic disaster that in connection with the work of administering a fund of over $60,000 the only expenses charged against the fund consist of a total of $281.10. The American has cheerfully borne the expense of salaries and other incidentals.

The Auditors' Report.

"The auditors' report on The American Titanic Fund shows as follows:

Total of Titanic Fund	$62,020.47
Cash paid to Capt. Arthur Rostron by express direction of the contributors for his heroism in saving the lives of over 700 persons	10,000.00
Balance	52,020.47
Expenses	281.10
Net balance for distribution	51,739.37
Awards made by committee	51,739.37

"The work of distributing the various Titanic relief funds has been a far greater undertaking than was at first supposed because there was practically nothing to predicate the work on.

"At the time of the arrival of the Carpathia in this city with the heroic Capt. Rostron on the bridge and the host of widowed women and fatherless children the Women's Relief Committee undertook the task of immediate relief. The New York Stock Exchange Fund was used in this way.

"Mothers took their children to all parts of the world and the money of the Lord Mayor's Fund, the Red Cross, and The New York American Fund were held for permanent relief work.

"At first nearly 500 claims were presented, and since the Red Cross was doing all that could be done in cases that were based on the loss of property, the American Titanic Fund Committee decided to eliminate such cases and deal only with cases based on the loss of life.

"As the investigations proceeded, these cases were separated into various classes. Some were transferred from the Lord Mayor's Fund to this city and some from this city to the Lord Mayor's Fund. Early an agreement was reached between the American, the Lord Mayor, and the Red Cross. The Red Cross and The American Fund were to care for all persons who remained on the two American continents, including British possessions, such as Canada. The Lord Mayor's Fund was to care for all other cases.

"All of the survivors were traced and were invited to file requests with the American Fund. They were divided into two classes finally. Class I was made up of widows and orphans, and Class 2 of sisters, mothers, and other relatives of lost persons. In some of the latter class of cases it was found that the relatives were wholly or partly dependent upon the persons who were drowned.

Where Main Problem Lay.

"The details of the awards in Class 2 were not given out last night, but will be given out to-day.

"It was soon seen that the main problem to be considered was making certain of the future of about forty-six widows and a number of children, and to this task The American Titanic Fund addressed itself in the main. Investigations were first made through correspondence with the claimants themselves, and then with persons in all parts of the world who would be able to give information that would make a perfectly just distribution possible.

"When the investigations were as complete as they could be through this method, Chiefs of Police, Postmasters, District Attorneys and others were asked to give a helping hand, and in all cases they did. It was found in some instances that widows who thought they were penniless had comfortable little fortunes coming to them.

"In a few cases bold impositions were tried, and in a few rare instances absolute deception was attempted, but such cases were quickly discovered.

"It was on top of these methods of investigation that the National Surety Company's lawyers were called into action and they brought to light much valuable information.

"It must be understood that in nearly all the cases the claimants have had relief from other sources or will have such relief, and in cases where the awards seem slight this is because the claimants have had good awards from the Red Cross Fund or received property or insurance or had money in the bank.

"The names of widows are withheld for the obvious reason that their publication might cause adventurers to annoy them. In a complete report, which will soon be got out in booklet form and sent to all persons who were subscribers to the fund, this information will be given. The books and records of the fund are open to all subscribers."

The committee then gives a list of cases disposed of, enumerating the amounts assigned, and telling briefly the chief circumstances of the allotment. The awards announced yesterday range from $108 to $3,697.

SNOW FOR THANKSGIVING.

Not Much, but Enough to Give Atmosphere for the Holiday Dinner.

The snowflakes weren't large enough to amount to much, but when a wind out of the northwest, with a real tinge of Winter in it, drove them against the corner lamp posts they stuck there, and so it passed for a snowstorm.

For a time there was a prospect that the near-storm would develop into a blizzard, as the temperature continued to fall and the wind to increase. But at nightfall the sky cleared and the wind died down. For to-day the forecast calls for warmer weather, with a fair sky, while there will be frost and snow to the west in Pennsylvania and to the north in New England.

The fact that the modest little flakes fluttered into town in time to give a notable holiday just the kind of a flavor most of the celebrators wished it to have made the storm especially welcome.

When the morning mists gave way to the snow at about 8 o'clock the weather man was receiving telegrams from Cape Hatteras declaring that there was a real storm thereabout, and that it was slipping off to sea, after blowing along the coast just in time to give all the towns and villages from Wilmington, N. C., up to Bridgeport, Conn., a touch of white Thanksgiving weather.

While the snow flurry was sufficient to make people on the Atlantic Coast enjoy their turkeys and cranberry sauce the more, with a feathery flutter outside the windows and a downy trimming on the window sills, it turned out that the folk of this coast were by no means the only ones favored. Another storm of very slight power and velocity sprinkled Thanksgiving flakes around and about the Great Lakes, while still another let the residents of Washington State know that Winter was at hand. The last came bristling down out of Canada, and was the banner snowstorm of the day.

SNOW NORTH AND SOUTH.

From Massachusetts to Georgia the Country Sees White Thanksgiving.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—Snow on the wings of a high northeasterly gale brought old-fashioned Thanksgiving weather to New England to-day. In Boston and other New England cities the charity organizations redoubled their efforts to make the day one of good cheer for thousands of the homeless and unfortunate. Crowds flocked to the churches in the morning.

NANTUCKET, Mass., Nov. 28.—Probably one of the roughest Thanksgiving Day celebrations on the New England coast was held on Nantucket Lightship, where a sixty-mile northeast snowstorm piled up a rough sea. There was but little celebration in many Nantuckot homes, owing to the anxiety felt for fishing smacks which were caught outside in the storm.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The first real snow of the season ushered in Thanksgiving Day early this morning, when a real Winter storm began shortly after midnight. The sudden advent of Winter surprised the capital, but the flakes melted almost as fast as they fell.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 28.—Eastern Virginia and the coast of North Carolina experienced their first real blasts of Winter to-day. A snowstorm, accompanied by high winds, visited Eastern Virginia, while a severe rainstorm raged on the coast of North Carolina. High seas prevailed on the coast, making it hazardous for shipping at sea. The wind reached a velocity of sixty-six miles an hour at Cape Hatteras and sixty miles an hour at Cape Henry. Norfolk suffered severely from the storm, being practically cut off from communication with the outside world during the early part of the day. The first Thanksgiving snow on record fell at Richmond early to-day.

ATLANTA, Nov. 28.—Residents of Atlanta and other sections of North Georgia awoke to-day to see a white Thanksgiving. The heavy snowfall of yesterday and last night was followed by a drop in temperature to 28 degrees, causing the snow to remain on the ground. It is the first time in the history of Atlanta that snow has remained long enough to whiten the ground at Thanksgiving.

"Let X Equal the Unknown Quantity."—Legendre's Algebra

Henry van Dyke's The Unknown Quantity

Throughout this volume the reader feels the play of that elusive, mysterious force in life—The Unknown Quantity. It is called by many names, but is here beautifully revealed as a moral quality founded on the spiritual ideal.

This, Henry van Dyke's first large volume of fiction in five years is his most important work of prose. That it has been so recognized by his great and ever growing audience is evinced by the splendid reception that has already been given it.

"These stories by van Dyke illustrate and embody the finest literary spirit that has been evoked as yet in new world life. One might read them again and again, finding fresh beauties and new and subtler overtures with each perusal."—Phila. No. American.

A Book of Romance and Some Half Told Tales

"There is a background of larger life behind all Dr. van Dyke's work; there is always a sky over his landscapes; there is always the play of spiritual laws and forces in his world."—Outlook.

NO FRENCH STUDENTS AT THEIR OWN BALL

Visitor Can't Understand Why Grisettes Are Also Absent and No One Knows French.

QUITE A FANCY AFFAIR

Everybody Knows Everybody Else—Dress Suits Rather Than Latin Quarter Clothes in the Boxes.

Those persons who were abroad in the neighborhood of Terrace Garden yesterday morning at the hour when ordinarily they would have been hurrying down to office jobs realized, from the profusion of gayly tinted costumes that braved the beginning of the snowstorm in an effort to make the next trolley car, that something had been happening in the way of festivity. Seekers for information were told that the "French Students' Ball" had been in progress since some time the evening before. Some description of this brilliant function was gathered considerably later in the day from several gentlemen seen at the hotels, who, it appeared, had "assisted," as the French say, at the function.

Perhaps the most detailed account was given by the man at the Imperial who kept insisting, all the way through his narrative, that his name should not be mentioned, for sufficient reasons, principally domestic.

"I asked the clerk if there was anything lively doing last night," said the visitor, "and he told me about the French Students' Ball, and said he guessed if I stayed long that might be lively enough, and so I got a friend, similarly detained in New York, to help me take it in. I found out where I could get some tickets, and was real pleased when I got hold of two marked 'complimentary.' Didn't feel so good a little later at the hall when we were told that it would cost us $1.50 apiece for a 'cloakroom' check to get in.

Money-Making Ticket Seller.

When we were paying for the checks my friend dropped a $2 bill on the floor by the ticket seller's window. He became a little worried, because he didn't know whether the bill had slipped from the roll he had taken from his pocket, or whether the ticket seller had given him too much money in change. We decided to make an experiment. So my friend asked the ticket seller:

"'Would you be able to tell me later on whether you have given me too little change?'

"The other glared at him in conscious rectitude.

"'Or, on the other hand,' went on my friend, 'whether you have given me too much?'

"'Sure,' cried the other, his look changing; 'I could tell you that right off. What size bill did you give me?'

"'Ten dollars,' said my friend.

"'I gave you change for a twenty,' said the ticket seller. We gave him the ha! ha! then, because this to us was proof positive that the two-dollar bill had dropped from my friend's original roll.

"Then we had to give up our overcoats and hats, and the man who took them rattled some silver coins suggestively in a saucer, but without effect. Then we passed along into a bar, where a lot of women wearing, most of them, abbreviated dresses or less were lined up alongside of the railing drinking with men.

"'Ah!' I said to myself, 'these must be some of those grisettes I have read about in those stories about the Latin Quarter in Paris.' But I was puzzled about the men. None seemed French. The language spoken appeared to be that of Bowery-after-Grand, or Broadway by Forty-second Street. It seemed we had got into the wrong room for seeing the French students. So we ducked back across the hall, and, going through what was said to be a ladies' dressing room, but which was filled mostly with men, got into a room where mixed parties were sitting at tables.

Champagne but No Students.

"'Nothing but champagne served here,' warned a waiter who looked like one of the four gunmen. I was then sure that the French students were not in this room. Back to the bar, and then into another big room we trailed. People were sitting about at tables drinking almost everything you could think of. The men might be the French students, but a second glance dispelled this idea. None wore pointed beards or the funny velvet caps which one invariably associates with young French artists, and while they were taking almost everything else, none was sipping absinthe. The women sitting about were dressed, or partly so, in a most wonderful variety of colorings. Everybody seemed to know everybody else, and exchanged greetings. I was sure nobody knew me, yet when we passed by a table at which was a festive party a woman in the latter looked directly at me and spoke and then beckoned to me. Naturally I went forward. It might be some friend of my wife's.

"'Good evening, Mr. Vanderbilt,' she said; 'why, I haven't seen you since Newport. Let me introduce you to my friends,' she continued. 'Mr. Vanderbilt, this is Senator Depew. This is Mr. Carnegie, and this is Mr. Rockefeller, of whom you may have heard. Mr. Vanderbilt, the Duchess of Westminster and the Countess of Warwick. Say,' she went on, 'introduce your friend.'

"It was no use explaining she had made a mistake in my identity. Of course the other names were as fictitious as the one she had given me.

"About us continually revolved pretty young women, becomingly if rather economically dressed, and I thought some of these might be grisettes. Not a French student had I seen yet, and I asked some questions of the gray-haired lady.

"'Say, you've got sawdust in your hair,' she told me. I reached up, to find nothing, and I became the target for the party's merriment. I withdrew as gracefully as I could.

Not One to Talk French.

"Then I sought the ballroom, to watch the dancing. About the big room slowly revolved a congested mass of humanity, doing what was said to be the turkey trot, but which amounted merely to a slow, glacial, wriggling progression around the room. Some of the costumes were wonderful, in their own particular way. About the most striking, and the one that later was awarded the chief prize, consisted mainly of black tights and about six inches of silvered fish net. Then there was a tall Amazon, of handsome figure, in green, set off by a tuft of peacock feathers in the head, who came in for much attention. Another prize winner was a Scotch lassie, whose costume left much to be admired. Few long dresses were to be seen during the early part of the night, and later there were none.

All sorts of Pierrettes and Pierrots flitted about, when the music ceased, tiny ladies with faces of twenty wore the rompers you put on six-year-olds, and four-year-old dresses adorned forty-year-old figures. To single out more costumes would be impossible now, because from that time I just saw a confused blending of green and pink and blue muslins, and black and blue and red and pink hosiery. But I did not easily give up my search for the French students. I looked up, and in boxes I saw numerous gentlemen in evening dress, feverishly giving orders to waiters, and keeping an eye on the other men in the boxes. On the tables were countless bottles. Could these be the French students?

"'No, you chump,' whispered my friend. 'They are wine agents.'

"I circulated about, for I was anxious to get off some of my French. Time after time I bowed to a lady, and said, in the language, 'Pardon me, madamoiselle, but will you have the goodness to tell me whether you speak French?' and all I received in reply was 'Pipe the dago,' or 'Beat it,' or something like that. At least, that was all until I came to a little girl in a short red skirt, who I was sure was Parisienne. I asked her if she spoke French. She answered me in the language.

"'Then you are Parisienne?' I asked, delighted.

"'No, mein Herr,' she replied, 'I am from Munich.'

"Then I gave it up. It was after four when I quit. The tall lady in green was just being assisted down the steps from the boxes, by two men, protesting merrily that she was thirsty. About me Bacchus was in full misrule. The turkey trot was still on. It was no place for a modest man. I fled. But I have not yet been able to find out why they called last night's festivity 'The French Students' Ball.'"

RAGPICKERS FORM UNION.

Washable Sailor Suit Makers Also New Additions to Organized Labor.

The ragpickers of this city have been organized into a union. Their entrance to the ranks of organized labor took place last week, together with the following new unions: Shoe Repairers' Union, Knitters' Union, Photographers' Union, Coal Drivers' Union of Brownsville, East Side Glaziers' Union, Hat Band and Trimming Makers' Union, Washable Sailor Suit Makers' Union, and Mattress Makers' Union.

These crafts have been organized by representatives of the United Hebrew Trades, who are now working to place several other occupations on a union basis.

Entertainment to Aid Settlement.

The method of teaching children inaugurated by Mme. Montessori is being used at the Union Settlement for the first time in New York settlement work. In order to raise funds for this and other work of this settlement, which is located on the upper east side, an entertainment will be given at the Plaza on Dec. 12. Tickets for the afternoon or evening performance at $3 each may be procured from the Union Settlement, 237 East 104th Street, or Mrs. Charles B. Foote, 535 Park Avenue.

GEESE BETRAY A BURGLARY.

Found Hanging from Door with Burglar Caught in Transom.

Patrolman Michael Murphy of the Tremont Avenue Police Station at 2:15 yesterday morning saw two men running away from a butcher's shop at 1,938 Wilkins Avenue, owned by Abram Adeland. The patrolman hastened to the place, where he found two picked geese hanging over the side of the door, and held fast in the grip of a man who was wedged in the transom.

At the station the man gave his name as Francis Donohue, a bookkeeper, of 999 Freeman Street, the Bronx. He was arraigned in the Morrisania Court later and held in $1,500 bail for burglary. About three weeks ago Adeland's place was burglarized, his safe blown open and $200 taken. The police hope to run down the men responsible for the first burglary with clues taken from the last robbery.

Burned Boys and Fathers Celebrate.

Three small boys, recovering from burns, all resulting from bonfires and their three fathers, who gave their skin for grafting on the youngsters, celebrated yesterday with a Thanksgiving dinner and reunion at Lebanon Hospital. They were Thomas Kyle, Jr., 5 years old, 856 Dawson Street, the Bronx, and his father, Thomas Kyle; John Sholer, 5 years old, 562 Hewill Place, the Bronx, and his father, Frank Sholer; August Schesenberg, 8 years old, 1570 Washington Avenue, the Bronx, and his father, Joseph Schesenberg.

ELEPHANT BOARDERS OBJECT

Create a Wide Disturbance When Supply of Hay Gives Out.

Three large elephants on their way to join a circus were placed in the livery stable of Henig & Hirsch at 88 Clinton Street yesterday. There were already twenty-five horses in stalls on the basement floor of the stable and three or four privileged old horses which were allowed to wander about the floor without halters. The elephants were turned over to the care of Feder Yokash, a hostler, who had worked in a menagerie in Poland and said he knew all about the entertainment of elephants.

He kept the big animals quiet for two hours with several bales of hay. But when the supply was exhausted one of the monsters lifted up his trunk in great indignation and made the stable quiver with his complaints. At the first sound the three loose horses bolted up the runway to the ground floor and dashed out of the stable, while the others reared up, jerking at their halters and snorting with fear. Yokash, the hostler, ran to the trumpeting animal and began to pat him on the flank. Pulling at the chain on his leg, the elephant swung around with his trunk and tried to get a grip on the hostler. Yokash dodged, however, and fled from the stable. Several minutes later the stablekeeper came back from Clinton Street with the runaway horses. Two of the stable hands were kept busy for the rest of the day silencing the elephants with hay and peanuts.

Men's Chinchilla Overcoats At $21

That Rightfully Should Bring $30 to $35

Two reasons contributed for this astonishingly low price:

FIRST, our purchase, during the Summer, of fine all-wool chinchilla, from the mill, when we saw that prices were bound to go up.

SECOND, having the materials made up at the end of the makers' Fall season, at a lowered cost to manufacture, yet in the high standards on which we always insist; and in the styles that have proved most fashionable.

Today part of the Overcoats are here—more than 300 of them fresh from the tailors, in these styles:

Single and double-breasted, with shawl collar; double-breasted, with regular lapels; in three-quarters and full length.

Some of the Overcoats are one-quarter silk-lined; others are fully lined with serge. Belted backs or belted all around.

Each Overcoat is superbly tailored, and hand-finished in the best manner. Colors are dark blue, Oxford gray, Oxford blue or gray, and black.

All sizes, for men and young men, from 33 to 46 inch chest.

At $21 we don't expect that this first consignment will stay here long.

Men's Suits at $17.50
Regularly $25 and $27.50

A fortunate purchase of handsome Suits from one of our finest tailors. Smart, soft-rolled lapels, or conservative styles, as you prefer. Plain blue, or in stylish pin stripes and mixtures.

Youths' Overcoats at $12
Usually $15 to $16.50

Very smart Overcoats of strictly all-wool fabrics, in handsome patterns, made in single or double-breasted styles, all sizes from 33 to 38 chest measure. Fourth Floor

THE EXPRESS STOP FOR TIMES SQUARE

Station on New Subway Needed Much More at 42d Than at 47th Street.

FAVORED BY THE CENTRAL

42d Street Stop Would Greatly Benefit Queens and South Brooklyn—The Concourse Opportunity.

The importance of placing an express station on the projected B. R. T. Broadway Subway at Forty-second Street rather than at Forty-seventh Street, it was pointed out yesterday, was particularly clear when the rapid transit lines to the outskirts of the city were considered. If the object of spending $300,000,000 on the new subway and elevated lines had been merely to develop the centre of the city and to facilitate traffic between the great uptown theatrical and shopping district and the great downtown financial district, there might be something to be said as to the value of so scattering the express stations as to broaden out the uptown section.

Of course, it was admitted that there were obvious objections to this course, even when the transit situation was considered from a narrow point of view, but it is believed that when the Forty-second Street problem is considered with the map of the entire new subway system in mind, it will be seen that it is of far more importance to the people who live in Queens or in South Brooklyn that the B. R. T. express station be placed at Forty-second Street than to the persons who actually have their business at Times Square.

After all, the principal object of rapid transit lines is to bring people where they wish to go, and an inspection of the figures of actual traffic on the present Subway and on the Sixth Avenue line shows how busy a centre is the section of Forty-second Street between Broadway and Sixth Avenue. On the Subway, in the twelve months ending June 30, 12,709,311 passengers bought tickets at Times Square, against only 5,151,207 at Fiftieth Street. The number of tickets sold at the Forty-second Street station of the Sixth Avenue elevated was 3,914,295, or 11,513 a day, as against 1,690,935 at the Fiftieth Street station, or only 4,973 a day.

These statistics make it evident that it would suit the convenience of a far larger number of persons to be carried to Forty-second Street and Broadway without a stop than to a station at Forty-seventh or Forty-eighth Street, and it is worth noticing what large tracts of the city by the adoption of Forty-seventh Street as a Brooklyn Rapid Transit express station would be penalized as compared with those sections which, being served by the new Interborough Seventh Avenue line, will have an express stop at Forty-second Street.

In the very heart of downtown Brooklyn near the Borough Hall there will be so many rapid transit lines that passengers will be able to take the choice between one system or another by walking a few steps. The Brooklyn Rapid Transit, when it comes to handling the theatre and shopping crowds, might find the absence of a Forty-second Street express stop a considerable handicap; but the public would not have much cause for complaint, but it would be very different in the newer and more residential sections. It will be a distinctly easier and pleasanter job for those who live along the Eastern Parkway, Nostrand and Livonia Avenues, Brooklyn, to go about their pleasure or their business in the Times Square region than for the thousands that live within reach of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Myrtle Avenue, Broadway, Lexington Avenue, Fulton Street, Cypress Hills, and city lines, and for the rapidly increasing population of the immense district served by the Brighton Beach, Culver, and Sea Beach trains, to say nothing of the Bay Ridge and New Utrecht Avenue lines.

In Queens the situation is somewhat different, as both the Brooklyn Rapid Transit and the Interborough are to run trains across the elevated lines from the Queensboro Bridge along Debevoise and Roosevelt Avenues, but if the two companies are to be placed on an equality in these sections it is important that the stations in the business and pleasure regions in Manhattan should be as nearly as possible identical. There seems no reason on the face of it why the inhabitants of Woodside and Corona, who wish to go to a Broadway show, should be forced to trust to a single company to arrive in comfort at Times Square when a little forethought on the part of the Public Service Commission would save them the roundabout route from the Queensboro Bridge Plaza by way of the Interborough to the Steinway tunnel and the trip under instead of over the river.

Those who have studied the express station problem also pointed out yesterday that there was one aspect of the layout which had been overlooked in the discussions before the commission. It is important for the sake of that always present but not very demonstrative portion of the public, those who seldom travel, that there should be as much uniformity as possible in the station arrangements. As things are, certain streets are identified in the public mind with express stops, and it will not be long before every one is accustomed to think of Thirty-third Street as an express station on both the Interborough and the B. R. T. west side lines, and of Times Square as an express station on the Seventh Avenue line and as a most important transfer point for the Grand Central Station and the Steinway tunnel route to Queens. It would, it is contended lead to endless confusion if strangers to the city and women and children, who do not make daily Subway trips, suddenly found themselves whizzed past the Times Square station because they had not made a transfer for which they never suspected the need.

It has also to be remembered that from the Forty-second and Broadway station many Brooklyn passengers will naturally approach the Grand Central Station. The New York Central authorities, though they are taking no active part in the discussion, are, it is understood, convinced that Forty-second Street is the legitimate point for an express stop on the B. R. T. line. It will be from that point that the Interborough will conduct its shuttle service to the great railroad terminal, and it will inevitably happen that thousands daily will wish to transfer to it from the B. R. T. Broadway line.

Even if the Forty-second Street station be only a local stop it will be necessary to construct, by means of the great concourse which is in the minds of the commission, an easy access to the Interborough crosstown station, and it would seem a most extraordinary mistake if this facility is not extended so as to take in a station where all B. R. T. trains will stop.

SEVEN CONSPIRATORS NAMED

Ross Says They Were Present at Discussion of Payment for "Jobs."

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 28.—District Attorney Charles W. Miller announced today that the Government would close its case in the dynamite trial to-morrow or Saturday. Then the defense will begin its presentation of the case in denial of the charges that the forty-five men on trial aided in the McNamara dynamite plots by illegally transporting explosives on passenger trains.

Mr. Miller also served notice that to-morrow he would insist upon a prompt enforcement of the court's ruling that the bonds of fourteen of the defendants were invalid because the bondsmen had been indemnified. Attorneys for the defendants said that they had been endeavoring to procure new bonds, and that if the court insisted upon their immediately producing new bonds, aggregating more than $100,000, the men would have to be confined in jail between sessions of the court. Mr. Miller said that some further question would be raised also as to the bonds of Frank M. Ryan and John T. Butler, President and Vice President, respectively, of the Ironworkers' Union.

Telling of an explosion at North Randall, Ohio, on March 25, 1911, when $50,000 damage was done to an ore conveyer by nitro-glycerine, Edward Cole to-day testified that he had heard the noise in his store a mile and a half away that night, and with a lantern and a revolver ran down the road. On the way, he said, he met a man running away from the explosion. Asked if the man was in the courtroom, Cole pointed at George ("Nipper") Anderson of Cleveland, saying: "He's the man."

Seven persons were named by Robert G. M. Ross as having known of a plot to blow up buildings under construction in Detroit in 1910. Ross, now employed by the United States Government as a mechanic in Hawaii, testified that Hiram Cline of the carpenters' union had confided to him that $100 had been paid to Charles Wachtmeister of the ironworkers' union, "as the carpenters' share of the expense of the explosions."

The witness said that no explosions occurred, "because Wachtmeister talked too much." Later, he said, Frank J. Murphy, Clarence E. Dowd, William K. Benson, and Spurgeon P. Meadows, all indicted union officials, were present when the payment of money to Wachtmeister was discussed. When objection was made to the mention of L. A. Noel, Financial Secretary of an ironworkers' union, the court allowed the testimony to be offered on the representation by the District Attorney that it had been shown that Noel was a co-conspirator.

Ross said that he had been called to a meeting of union officials, had been accused by them of being employed as a spy by non-union builders, and had been told that "the brothers wanted to take radical action." Ross said he denied the charge, but warned them that the proposed explosions "would make a big noise."

Frank J. Higgins of Boston was accused of having admitted that the blowing up of the tower of the municipal buildings at Springfield, Mass., on April 4, 1911, had cost $300. Daniel W. Gallagher testified that after the explosion Higgins had admitted he had gone to Hartford, Conn., to establish an alibi. The witness also testified that Higgins told of trouble which Michael J. Young, ironworkers' union official in Boston, had had in traying to unionize the Springfield job.

Ortie E. McManigal has confessed that he actually caused the explosion and received pay for it.

HOLIDAY TREATS FOR ZOO ANIMALS

REMEMBERS WILD HORSES

Woman Sends Gift of Carrots for Mongolian Steeds in the Bronx—Cobra's Greed Puts It In Danger.

Bill Snyder, head keeper of the Zoo in Central Park, put down a feed pail as night fell last evening and declared that Thanksgiving Day answered Gen. Sherman's description of war. Snyder had had a long day superintending the feeding of the animals, and the result was that his own turkey had been neglected. It was a day to be remembered by the animals in Central Park and in the Zoological park in the Bronx. Treats were provided for the inmates of all the cages.

Usually on Thanksgiving Day there are many visitors to the parks, but because of the unpleasant weather not many persons ventured out yesterday. Some of those who braved the weather, though, brought fruit for the animals. One old lady gave Charlie Synder, the keeper in Bronx Zoo, half a bushel of carrots for the Mongolian wild horses. These graceful animals live in a large corral near the east fence of the park and to the left of the large animal houses.

The day was enlivened by what might have been a tragedy in the reptile house in the Bronx Zoo. Thanksgiving Day does not mean much for the snakes, for they only eat at long intrvals, but the eleven-foot king cobra was fed yesterday because it was after his regular meal time. This snake had its last meal ten days ago. Two days ago Snyder put a black snake in the cobra cage but the big snake refused to eat.

"You will be hungry soon," said Snyder to the snake, "and I am going to wait until you are."

He did, and when he assisted in preparing the Thanksgiving dinner for the animals, he remembered the cobra, and decided that it shoud not be overlooked in dispensing good cheer. In the afternoon Snyder put a three-foot water snake in the cobra cage. The king cobra was hungry yesterday. It seized the water snake, and owing to over-haste in swallowing it, choked. Fortunately Snyder came to the cage just at that moment, and seeing the situation, saved the cobra from strangling.

The polar bears enjoyed an extra supply of fish in honor of the day, and the South American spectacled bear and the two bears from the Andes, ate their dinner in their electrically heated home. These animals are very susceptible to cold and in Winter they occupy artificially heated quarters in the new bear pits. Last Winter they had a covered cage which was heated by an oil stove. This method of heating was considered dangerous, and so this year their new quarters are heated with an apparatus especially designed by Snyder. Yesterday the chief article on their bill of fare was shelled Brazilian nuts, which he said, were not only their favorite food, but reminded them of their Southern home.

The keepers in both the zoos were allowed a sufficient length of time off to eat their turkey at home. Pat Dolan, one of the oldest attendants in Central Park, gathered some of the other men about him in the afternoon after they had had their feast, and told them the story of the frogs in Ireland. It is a long tale, but has come to be the recognized feature of every holiday in the Park.

In Central Park, as in the Bronx, the carnivorous animals all had a treat of meat. Old Lewey, the dean of the lion cages, had a leg of lamb as a special treat. Smiles, the rhinoceros, spent much of the day munching on carrots, and Hattie and Jewell, the elephants, ate more than a ton of hay.

The monkeys in both parks retired last night so full of apples and oranges and other goodies that the keepers were worried for their digestions. Even the birds were not forgotten, and every one of them got at least a large splice of apple in honor of the day.

"Feeding the animals on a holiday is more of a task than most persons would suppose," said Bill Snyder in Central Park. "There is not only the extra supply to order, but a keeper has to be very careful not to neglect any of his charges. I am confident that the animals know in advance when a holiday treat is due. And animals are so sensitive. Two years ago, on Thanksgiving Day, Pat Keenan, in dispensing good-cheer, overlooked Baldy, the Javanese monkey. Its grief was positively harrowing. Take the case of Helen, the lioness. She was a great pet of Van Sicklen, the keeper. She did not get her full share of a New Year's dinner last year and she sulked for many weeks."

RICH MAN'S SON DEPORTED.

Lure of Broadway Led Him from Lessons and to Forgery.

Under very different auspices from those attending his advent into this country a year ago, Ladisaw Maszaros, a young Hungarian student, will leave for home to-morrow aboard a steamship of the North German Lloyd Line. The departure of young Maszaros was brought about by the Immigration Inspectors.

When he arrived here he brought letters of introduction from his father, a wealthy official of the Hungarian Government, and from many prominent residents of Budapest. The letters said he was an ambitious young student, and at his father's wish had come over here to study English and the ways of Americans. He was received by prominent Hungarians here and was shown the sights of the city by a representative of the Austro-Hungarian Consul General. Afterward he went to Passaic to visit friends of his family in the Hungarian colony there.

For a time the modest remittances from home, intended to be sufficient to employ a teacher of English and to buy informative books, were sufficient for young Maszaros. But he commenced to study Broadway more and his lessons less. Then he studied the handwriting of a Passaic druggist, and signed the druggist's name to a check, which a Passaic bank traced back to him.

He was arrested and was sentenced to three months in jail, the sentence having been made light on account of a promise from influential friends that he would be speedily sent back to his father. While he was in jail the immigration authorities became acquainted with the facts of the case and ordered him deported.

CRUSHED TO DEATH BY LIFT.

Young Workman Caught Between Wall of Shaft and Elevator.

Patrick Killeen, 23 years old, living at 709 Greenwich Street, was killed yesterday by being crushed and almost decapitated between the wall of an elevator shaft and the elevator in the James Butler Company storehouse, at 390 Washington Street. The elevator was operated at the time by Patricy Clancey of 410 West Fifty-third Street. Clancey was not arrested as the death seemed purely accidental.

Killeen was pushing a truck loaded with wines and liquors on the third floor, his intention being to push it into the elevator. As the elevator had stopped several inches below the level of the floor, Killeen told Clancey to raise it a little. Clancey did so, but the elevator gained too much power in the motion, and kept going up. Killeen had not waited for it to stop, and although he had got the truck into the elevator he himself was not entirely in the car. The result was that he was carried up, his head and body being caught between the elevator and the wall of the shaft above. He was instantly killed, and his body fell through the shaft to the cellar floor below.

HELD FOR KILLING BOARDER.

Young Man Shot After an All-Night Thanksgiving Eve Party.

Following a Thanksgiving Eve party which lasted all night at 164 Adams Street, Brooklyn, the furnished room house of James Maroney, John Lisanti, 22 years old, was shot and killed there early yesterday morning. Maroney was arrested, and later arraigned and held on a charge of homicide by Magistrate McGuire in the Adams Street Court.

Maroney denied that he killed Lisanti. He said he went upstairs to the top floor, where Lisanti had a furnished room, and found him dead. The police arrested five prisoners beside Maroney, and they were held as material witnesses. They are Florence Maroney or Florence Clark, who is known as Maroney's wife; Margaret Lisanti, known as Lisanti's wife; Mary Delaney, George Salvatore, and Salvatore Sawsome. All the prisoners live at the Adams Street address.

The police have an affidavit from the woman known as Mrs. Lisanti, in which she says that she heard the shooting at 5 o'clock in the morning. She went out into the hall and saw Lisanti stagger out of a vacant room and fall at her feet. She said she looked inside the room and saw Maroney. Maroney when arraigned in court had a gash over the left eye and two scalp wounds. The police say that Maroney got his injuries in a fight with Lisanti.

HUNTING BOHEMIA SPOILS ART WORK

Mrs. Sara Morris Greene Blames Cigarettes and Drinking for Many Paris Failures.

BACK AFTER SEVEN YEARS

Famous Sculptress, Pupil of Rodin, Returns to Execute Several Commissions and Give Exhibit.

Mrs. Sara Morris Greene, who has been studying sculpture and working in Paris for the past seven years, returned to New York yesterday for the first time since she went abroad in 1905 to study under Rodin. She is here to execute some commissions which she says are of a Governmental origin, and which she is not at liberty to discuss. Mrs. Greene brought with her a letter from Rodin which, translated, reads:

"Mme. Sara Morris Greene has talent, and in such measure that it gives me great pleasure to regard her work, and I felicitate her and her country."

This letter Mrs. Greene regards as a sort of diploma.

"I have had lately the same studio in the Latin Quarter that MacMonnies used to have," said Mrs. Greene, who is at the Wolcott. "One of the things I finished recently was a bust in bronze of Dr. Henry van Dyke, which was presented to Princeton. In the New Salon last Spring I had a lot of things, such as fountains and garden work. Of course my work is of Rodin's school absolutely.

"I shall stay here for a time, and shall take a studio. I am going to have an exhibition of my work soon, and for that purpose I brought over about thirty-five salon pieces.

Revival of Garden Decoration.

"In Europe the art of garden decoration is reviving. The owners of châteaux are all going in for fountains and the sort of garden sculpture that is familiar at Versailles. So it was that at the last New Salon, of which I am a member, there was what was called the Garden Annex, and I was one of fifteen invited to show in it. Next Spring this part of the salon will be much larger.

"So many Americans, young men and women, go over to Paris to study art and are not really serious about their work. It is for this reason you never hear of them again. Paris is the hardest place in the world to win. Competition is keen, the temptations numerous and difficult to resist. It takes strong character to keep from going down in the maelstrom. Yet, if you 'arrive' in Paris, you are absolutely sure of making a success elsewhere.

"Many young people go there expecting to win success right away and without effort. The American girl is wonder-struck by the life in the quarter. The idea of sitting about in cafés and smoking and drinking liqueurs seems to appeal to her. The woman is apt to become very 'bohemian,' and then it is good-bye to any more serious work for her.

"Of course, everybody has heard of the Cubistes and the Futuristes, but now there is a new set of painters called the 'Spheristes.' They see everything in spheres, or in circles. They haven't made much of a sensation yet, but everything they paint is round. An eye, for instance, no matter how elliptical it is, must conform to their standard of shape, and as for the face, they make that out of a series of circles.

"Some young Americans in Paris took up Matisse, and now call themselves Spheristes. They go about from collection to collection and tell how they adore this master or that, and are following him, but it is all talk and no work. Now Monet, who is one of the foremost French artists to-day, is past 70, yet he gets up at 5 or 6 in the morning and begins work. Most of the art students who are doing so much talking never get out until 10 or 11, and they only get a chance to paint the Sunday sunlight.

"Rodin is busy now with drawings and reproductions of his famous works, and has turned out nothing new in sculpture lately. His friends attribute that largely to the fact that a Duchess over there captivated him and took entire charge of the sale of his work for a time. He has just lately become a free agent again. I went to his place at Meudon only a day or two before I left Paris, and he seemed to be happy.

"The American Art Association in Paris is coming rapidly to the front again. It has a number of good men painting now, though it is poorly represented in sculpture."

RED CROSS SEALS ON SALE.

Annual Campaign for Tuberculosis Fund Began Yesterday.

An army of 100,000 workers renewed the annual holiday campaign yesterday for the prevention of tuberculosis. It will extend throughout the country in the shape of an effort to raise an additional fund of $400,000. To start this fund 80,000,000 Red Cross Christmas seals were put on sale yesterday in every State in the Union, according to the announcement of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

"The proceeds go for the benefit of work in the community where the seals are sold," said an official of the National movement. "Each contributor, therefore, is assured that whatever aid he renders will be of direct benefit in his own locality."

Only a small percentage of the fund will be necessary to pay the cost of printing and distribution of the seals. Each seal costs 1 cent, and if not obtainable from local agents may be had in any quantity from the Red Cross Seal Headquarters, 715 Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

LARGEST WOMAN DEAD.

Montreal Asylum Inmate of Great Strength Weighed 780 Pounds.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—Justine Masson, who weighed 780 pounds, and is said to have been the largest woman in the world, died here to-day. Several months ago she became insane, and was taken in charge by the Assistance Publique. In the institution she exhibited remarkable strength in fits of insanity, when even the walls of her room failed to restrain her, and it became necessary to build a round house especially for her outside the main building.

As no undertaker in Montreal would endanger his hearse, the body was removed from the institution in an express wagon. A specially built coffin will be necessary to inter the body.

OHIO STATE CHEER WILL CIRCLE EARTH

Meeting Here To-night at Same Moment Graduates Gather in Every Country.

FIRST TIME TO TRY IT

Alumni Will Set Aside One Day Every Year as the Ohio State Day for Dinners.

When Dr. George W. Knight, Professor of International Law at the Ohio State University and member of the recent Ohio Constitutional Convention, gives the word at the City Club at 10 o'clock to-night he will start an estimated 10,000 men and women, meeting in all parts of the world, to give simultaneously the college yells which they learned when students at the Ohio State University.

Dr Knight came on from Columbus, Ohio, for the particular purpose of officiating at the release of this college enthusiasm. The occasion is the annual Ohio State day, and the celebration of the New York alumni of the university at the City Club is only one of a chain of meetings which have been arranged not only for every county in the State of Ohio and for every State in the Union, but for points in Europe, Hawaii, the Philippines, Japan, and China as well. Everywhere graduates of the Ohio State University have made their homes, through a systematic campaign conducted by the secretary of the alumni association from Columbus, there will be dinners to-night, accompanied by cheering and singing for the Alma Mater. The longitudinal differences in time have been provided for so far as possible, so that with the signal from Prof. Knight the whole machinery will be set into action.

Plans for this world-wide collegiate celebration were begun last January, when the same plan, on a smaller scale, had been tried successfully in the eighty-eight separate counties of the State of Ohio. The plan originated with Miss Edith D Cockins, Registrar of the Ohio State University.

"This world-wide celebration of college men from a single institution," said Halbert E. Payne, President of the American Typewriter Company, and President of the Ohio State University Alumni Association, yesterday, "is the greatest thing of its kind ever attempted. We are certain that it will be a great success, and hereafter we hope to set one day apart each year for a like celebration or rally.

"To-night's local celebration, which will be attended by 200 of the New York alumni, will be only a link in the big chain. The triumph of the Ohio State University football team and Ohio State's entrance in the 'Big Nine' will of course, add to the joy. The event is particularly important, however, in showing the growth and strength of the university under the presidency of Dr. William Oxley Thompson. Dr. Thompson will attend the Columbus dinner and will be kept informed by telegraph and cable of the progress of the dinners in all the other parts of the world. The celebration will

Jacques Futrelle's Great Novel
My Lady's Garter

THE last story from the pen of the author-hero of the "Titanic" disaster concerns the richly-jeweled garter presented to the Countess of Salisbury by King Edward III. —the same that bore the famous motto "Honi Soit Qui Mal y Pense." (Evil to him who evil thinks.)

The scenes are laid on the coasts of Long Island and Massachusetts at the present time. The strange disappearance of the $50,000 garter from the British Museum, where it had lain for hundreds of years, and the part played by the spirited American heroine, help to make this one of the most thrilling and fascinating tales of love and adventure ever published.

The Place of Honeymoons
The theme of Mr. MacGrath's new story is a glittering one. An Austrian Prince, incognito, is a prominent character. The heroine is a grand opera singer and a beautiful woman. Courtlandt, the young American hero, is a typical MacGrath creation, so rich that he cannot get rid of his money fast enough. No love-plot was ever more original. Clearly this is one of the best of the MacGrath stories.

Disturbing—but Inspiring
Here is a novel that not only fascinates the mind, but stirs the heart and soul. It plunges you into the maelstrom of social unrest and presents great problems in a new and disturbing light.
But higher ideals are never submerged—and half of the story presents a charming setting in Southern France, with the romance and tragedy of an ancient race interwoven with the lives of an American man and American woman of great wealth.

HYDE'S FATE LIKELY TO BE DECIDED TO-DAY

Case Is In and Lawyers Will Sum Up and Judge Goff Charge the Jury Immediately After.

PRISONER STILL CONFIDENT

His Lawyer, Mr. Steuer, Thinks His Alibi Still Holds Good—Jurors Stay in Hotel Thanksgiving.

Charles H. Hyde, the ex-City Chamberlain charged with bribery, may hear the verdict of the jury, deciding his fate, this evening. The summing-up will begin when court is convened this morning at 10:30. Max Steuer will be allowed two and a half hours in which to review the case for his client. He will be followed in the afternoon by Assistant District Attorney Frank Moss, who will sum up for the State. Mr. Steuer said last night that he expected the charge of Justice Goff would follow, and that the case would be in the hands of the jury before evening.

Mr. Steuer said that he did not know what he would dwell upon as the strongest points for the defense in his speech to the jury.

"I never decide what I am going to say till I begin to talk to the jury," he said. "All that I can tell you beforehand is that I will hammer in the fact that Hyde is innocent."

Mr. Steuer denied the assumption that the two last witnesses for the prosecution had shaken Hyde's alibi. These were the telephone operators who showed from the records that two calls had been made from Hyde's law office on the evening of Aug. 22, 1910, when, according to his own testimony, he was in Roslyn, L. I. Mr. Steuer pointed out that there was no proof that the calls were made by Mr. Hyde personally, and also that Justice Goff had instructed the jury that this testimony was only admitted for its bearing on the question whether the mental state of Joseph G. Robin permitted him to tell a connected story.

Mr. Hyde himself is confident of acquittal, and continues to carry himself with the cheerfulness which he displayed on the witness stand.

The Hyde jurors spent their Thanksgiving yesterday at the Murray Hill Hotel. The snowstorm made them forego a long walk which had been planned for the afternoon. The morning was enlivened by a shaving contest. As soon as the 9 o'clock breakfast was over, one of the jurors suggested such a contest, the reward to be the first chance to look at the morning papers, expurgated of the stories on the Hyde case. Several took part in the competition, but the name of the winner was not made known.

A Thanksgiving dinner was served at 1:30 in the jurors' private dining room. After dinner they spent their time reading and writing letters and talking among themselves.

CAUGHT A BLACK HANDER.

Detectives Pounced Upon Him Just as He Received Marked Bills.

Carmello Torre, who described himself as a salesman and refused to give his address, was arraigned before Magistrate Harris in the Tombs Court yesterday and held in $2,500 bail for further examination to-day on a charge of attempted extortion.

Mrs. Anna P. Nicolino, 70 years old, who runs a grocery store at 57 Spring Street, complained that he represented himself to her as an agent for a band of "Black Handers," who had written her several threatening letters demanding money. She promised to give him the money if he called yesterday.

Meantime, she went to the police and received eighteen marked $1 bills and one $2 bill, also marked. She was instructed to give these bills to Torre when he appeared.

Torre went to the store as agreed and the money was handed to him. He counted it and becoming angry, shouted that there was not enough money, as he had demanded $1,000. He was then placed under arrest by Detectives Degilio, Dondaro, and Casetti, who had been watching him from a rear room. The marked bills were found in his pocket.

Said By The Critics

¶ Chicago Record-Herald—His earnest purpose is of the very fiber of his work * * a sweet and fine love story * * it is sweet-spirited, wise, full of ripened thought and feeling * * it is a noble and wholesome book.

¶ Boston Globe—This is the gentle story of the love of a man and a woman in which the vigor of "That Printer of Udell's," the kindliness of "The Shepherd of the Hills," the power of "Dan Matthews" and the grace of "Barbara Worth" are all woven into a strain more delicate and more beautiful than this great writer has ever before penned.

¶ Memphis News Scimitar—A really great book * * you feel better, you feel refreshed, and you feel a desire to drop to your knees and thank Almighty God for such a book and for permitting you to read it.

THE EARLIEST CUYLERS IN HOLLAND AND AMERICA and Some of Their Descendants.

By MAUD CHURCHILL NICOLL.

For five hundred years the Cuylers played an important and honorable part in every generation. A study of a genealogical chart, giving the descendants of Hendrick Cuyler, the founder of the family, and his wife, Annetje Schepmoes, shows there is scarcely a Dutch family of consequence who are not related to them.

Handsomely bound in full, green, flexible leather, artistically ornamented with gold, beautifully illustrated with family portraits, reproductions of wills and other documents, family seals and coats-of-arms.

Price, $10. Cloth bound, $5.

Our 194-Page "Musiclover's Handbook" SENT FREE

WE shall be glad to send to every reader of this newspaper who will carefully fill out and send us at once the coupon furnished below, a complimentary copy of our "Musiclover's Handbook," containing a dictionary of musical terms—the most satisfactory little reference book of the kind that has ever been compiled. This is the kind of book that is retailed in the shops at 50 cents; but we are distributing a limited number of copies to readers of this periodical absolutely without charge.

What the "Handbook" Contains

THE "Musiclover's Handbook" contains concise but full definitions of all those musical terms for which any one would have occasion to look. The pronunciation of foreign words is given according to a special phonetic system, and a number of musical illustrations are introduced in the text. This little book will be treasured by all those who are in any way interested in music.

No Obligation on Your Part

THE sending of this coupon does not obligate you in any way. A small edition of the "Handbook" is at our disposal and we wish to place one copy in the hands of every reader of this newspaper. We shall also take pleasure in sending full information in regard to the "University Musical Encyclopedia," edited by Professor Louis C. Elson, of the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, Mass. Dr. Elson has been assisted in this work by a number of eminent experts, and the result is the first important musical encyclopedia of American origin to be offered to the public. The ten volumes are sent all charges paid to any address for free inspection.

THE FOUNDATIONS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY. By HOUSTON STEWART CHAMBERLAIN. A translation from the German by John Lees. With an introduction by Lord Redesdale. New popular-priced edition.

In response to the general demand for a popular edition of this monumental work the publishers have decided to issue it in a new edition, with text identical with the original edition, at a price within reach of all.

Two volumes. Cloth, $5.00 net. Postage, 25 cents.

THE JOYOUS ADVENTURES OF ARISTIDE PUJOL. By WILLIAM J. LOCKE, author of "The Glory of Clementina," "The Beloved Vagabond," etc. Aristide Pujol, that Protean son of Provence, is a most attractive personality. With breathless interest we follow him through a career as disconnected as a pack of cards, and with a chuckle and a sigh of regret we close the book on his last adventure—that of matrimony.

With illustrations by Alec Ball. Cloth. $1.30 net. Postage 12 cents.

THE GOLDFISH. By JULIAN STREET. "A little Christmas story which ought to find its way into the Christmas stocking of every 'mussy' little boy, and perhaps boys who are not so little. Mr. Street says his story is for children between six and sixty."—New York Evening Globe.

With colored illustrations and page decorations. Cloth. 70 cents net. Postage, 6 cents.

It reads like a story book, looks like a picture book, and is at the same time the standard reference work on the subject.

Fully illustrated. Cloth. $1.25 net. Postage 12 cents.

MEMORIES OF JAMES McNEIL WHISTLER: The Artist. By THOMAS R. WAY.

This volume contains about forty illustrations, including an original lithograph sketch, seven lithographs in color drawn by the Author upon brown paper, and many in black and white. The text deals with the Author's memories of nearly twenty years' close association with Whistler.

Cloth. $3.00 net. Postage, 15 cents.

RECOLLECTIONS OF GUY DE MAUPASSANT. By his Valet, Francois. Translated by Mina Round.

"The book is so full of the personality of its hero, and is of so simple and unpretentious a quality, that it makes delightful reading."

RELATES MOOSE VICTORIES.

Judge Lindsey Comes with Stories of Colorado Election Triumphs.

Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver arrived at the Imperial yesterday morning with the snowstorm, but he insisted that the Progressives had by no means "been up against a frost in Colorado" in the recent election, and that a lot of really Progressive principles had triumphed out there. Judge Lindsey came East to attend the wedding of Police Commissioner George Creel of Denver and Blanche Bates, the actress.

"We won out on the recall of judicial decisions," said Judge Lindsey. "This was Col. Roosevelt's own idea, and Colorado was the first State to adopt the advanced measure. We had up for vote the recall of officers also, and, while the latter carried, also, the first got over 10,000 more votes.

"In fact, a resume of the measures voted upon in Colorado shows that we got through considerable Progressive legislation. For instance, there is the Mothers' Compensation law, which I suppose is considered one of the most radical measures that ever came up for a vote. It provides that if a mother has children that she cannot care for without going out and working herself, the State is compelled to see that she is taken care of, so that she can give necessary time to the upbringing and training of her children. We figure that this will cost the State from $40 to $60 a month in each case. However, the law puts no limit on the sum. A curious thing about the vote on this was that the bitterest opponents of the measure were women. On the other hand, its warmest supporters were also women. This goes to prove that the assertion that women are always guided by sentiment in casting their votes is wrong.

"Prohibition was defeated by an overwhelming majority—at least 2 to 1. In Denver, the vote against it was 3 to 1. I believe the majority of women voted against it. About two-thirds of the women voted for the women's eight-hour law, which was carried, 3 to 1."

MILITIA OFFICERS LACKING.

Gen. Potts Finds Those in Middle West Weak in Handling Camps.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Observation of militia officers' camps of instruction held in a number of States last Summer has caused Brig. Gen. Ramsay B. Potts to criticise the training of militia officers of the Middle West. In his report to the Secretary of War, Gen. Potts said that these militia officers disclosed weakness in handling their organizations, in caring for their men in camp, and in carrying out the general duties of commanders of organizations. Many of the officers, he charged, had progressed along theoretical lines at the expense of practical work, and, while they could discuss intelligently advanced military topics, they were hopelessly lost when in command of even a company in the field.

As a partial remedy for this condition Gen. Potts is trying a plan of attaching these militia officers to regular army posts to enable them to gain the needful practical instruction.

WHAT A MAN WISHES

A NOVEL

BY

William Stanley Hill

The title is the keynote to the story. Possibly it refers to happiness—possibly to wealth or power or fame—possibly to requited love.

At any rate, it refers to something vital, something that governs our lives.

Those who know contentment will understand, and those who do not may guess, but both will be interested.

THE GIRLHOOD OF QUEEN VICTORIA

Edited by Viscount Esher

A Selection from Her Majesty's Diaries between the Years 1832 and 1840

Printed in large type, with 34 photogravure Portraits and other Illustrations, including Reproductions of the Queen's own Drawings. Two Volumes, Medium 8vo. Bound in Blue and Gold. Gilt top. $9.00 net. (Expressage extra.)

Of the many great personalities of the Victorian Era none is more interesting, more striking, than Victoria herself. The Diary kept by the Queen in her girlhood is an intimate revelation of her interests, activities, and various accomplishments, and, above all, of the growth of her mind and character. She records the conversations of Lord Melbourne with the care and accuracy of a Boswell, and from them we can see how the Prime Minister and Courtier was training his Sovereign day by day in the art of statesmanship.

PENNSY DEFEATS CORNELL IN SLUSH

Capt. Mercer Picks Up Fumbled Ball and Runs 55 Yards for a Touchdown.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—Pennsylvania added another victory to her long string of successes over the Cornell football team by winning the Thanksgiving game on Franklin Field to-day by the score of 7 to 2. It had been snowing for almost ten hours before the game began and the field was soaked from the slush, causing both teams to frequently muff or fumble the slippery ball. This condition of the field was indirectly responsible for all the scoring.

Cornell got her two points as Carl Marshall, the linesman, was watching the final seconds of the first period tick off. It had been a punting game all through the period, and the ball was on Pennsylvania's 20-yard line, where Minds attempted to punt. J. Whyte broke through the Pennsylvania line and blocked the kick. Minds and Whyte raced after the ball, and the Pennsylvanian fell on it one yard from his own goal line, but before he could recover himself he slid in the mud across the goal, and Referee Langford declared a safety in favor of Cornell.

Pennsylvania's touchdown came unexpectedly, near the end of the second period. Cornell had the ball in midfield as the result of a punt. Bennett, who had gone into the game at right half back for Cornell, displacing Fritz, fumbled, and Capt. Mercer of Pennsylvania caught it on the rebound. He was fifty-five yards from Cornell's goal with a clear field, and dashing down the field, outrunning Cornell's fleetest men, he made an easy touchdown.

Because of the wet field the game resolved itself largely into a kicking contest, in which Butler of Cornell invariably had the better of Minds. Even with the wind against him, Butler's kick usually gained ground on the Pennsylvanians.

Neither team was able to consistently advance by rushing, except in several instances when the man carrying the ball broke through for a ten-yard gain. But few first downs were made by either team.

It was a bad day for the forward pass. Both teams tried it without much success, and especially the Cornell team, which lost many downs on incompleted passes.

A prominent feature of the game was the speed of Cornell's ends in getting down under kicks. They were always on the man about to catch the ball, and Pennsylvania gained very little ground through running the ball back after punts. The line-up:

Pennsylvania.	Position.	Cornell.
Journeay	Left guard	Munns
Simpson	Centre	J. Whyte
Greene	Right guard	Champlain
Dillon	Right tackle	Nash
Jourdet	Right end	O'Hearn
Marshall	Quarter back	Butler
Harrington	Right half back	Fritz
Mercer	Full back	Hill

Substitutes—Pennsylvania, none; Cornell, Reese for Eyrich, Lahr for Guyer, Weidenthal for Champaign, Williamson for Nash, Taber for O'Connor, Bennett for Fritz, Fritz for Bennett, R. Whyte for Fritz, Miller for Hill.

Touchdown—Mercer. Goal from touchdown—Minds. Safety—Minds. Referee—W. S. Langford, Trinity. Umpire—D. L. Fultz, Brown. Linesman—Carl Marshall, Harvard. Time of periods—Fifteen minutes.

COMMERCIAL HIGH WINS.

Brooklyn Preps Victims of an 8 to 0 Score on Gridiron.

Commercial High School's football season was concluded with victory yesterday morning when the team defeated the Brooklyn Prep eleven on Commercial field by a score of 8 to 0. The plucky Prep lads fought hard on the snow-covered field to prevent the Red and Gray from scoring, but after two periods of fast play and a strong defense the wearers of the Light Blue and White weakened and Commercial, quick to see their opportunity, in the third quarter employed more aggressive tactics and after scoring a safety followed shortly afterward with a touchdown.

Owing to the cold and slippery condition of the ball and field, there was a great deal of fumbling and the centres found difficulty in snapping back properly. But in spite of this fact both teams showed improvement in form and played very creditable football. The strong back field of the Red and Gray was the team's main asset, and when this machine became accustomed to the conditions existing the Brooklyn Prep line was unable to prevent great gaps being torn in their lines through which Frugone, Onley and Clayton plunged repeatedly for long gains. On the other side Mooney and Grace played the bulk of the game and the latter proved nimble enough to dash between two of the forward passes attempted by Frugone and capture the ball for his team.

For the first half the playing was even with the ball shifting between the 20-yard line of the two goals. At the very close of the first period the Commercial team narrowly missed having a safety being scored upon them when Onley was thrown on his own 2-yard line. Luckily for the Red and Gray Onley fell forward. If he had been thrown backward the ball would have gone over his goal line. During the second quarter the Brooklyn Prep lads came close enough to try two goals from the field, but both fell short.

In the opening of the second half the Commercial eleven mustered more speed and pushing down the field reached Brooklyn's 20-yard line. Here they were held for downs, but in the next play McNally's snap back went far over Grace's head and when he recovered it Lucke promptly threw him in back of his line for a safety. Encouraged by this, the Red and Gray kept on the offensive and Frugone started the final scoring with a long run across his own field to midfield. Onley then punted and Grace fumbled it. Lucke recovered it on Brooklyn Prep's 8-yard line. Frugone in two line plays brought it to the 1-yard line and then carried it through right tackle for the touchdown. There was no scoring in the final period, although when the whistle blew the Commercial lads were pressing hard on Brooklyn Prep's own yard line. The line-up:

Commercial.	Position.	Brooklyn Prep.
Grossman	Left guard	McGraine
Van Campy	Centre	McNally
Robinovitz	Right guard	McCullough
Glatzenmeyer	Right tackle	Heinz
Adams	Right end	Ennie
Frugone	Quarter back	Joyce
Clayton	Right half back	Mooney
O'Shaughnessey	Full back	DeGhee

Touchdown—Frugone. Safety—Grace. Referee—Mr. Levine, Pennsylvania. Umpire—Mr. Farrier, Dartmouth. Substitutes—Kavanaugh for McNally, Grace for Goggen; Gordon for Onley; Delehanty for McGraine; Schwartz for Adams. Time of periods—Eleven minutes.

WEST POINT TEAM PICKED.

Merrillat Selected for an End Position —Huston at Guard.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 28.—All the plays to be used by the Army in its game against the Navy next Saturday at Philadelphia received their final trial when the squad got a two-hour workout on the plains this morning.

The Army team is now intact, and after to-day's signal practice Head Coach Graves announced the line-up for the Navy game. Merrillat has been chosen over Hoge and Gillespie for the doubtful end position, and will start the game in that place. He is heavier than either of the contenders, a sure catcher of the forward pass, is fast in getting down the field and an unerring tackler. Huston has been chosen for the guard position next to Devore. Because of his knowledge of the game it is figured that the players will have more confidence in him. Herrick weighs over two hundred pounds and has played in most of the Army's games this fall, but lacks other experience. Huston's weight is 195, and he is an aggressive and heady player.

Coach Graves said to-day that Hobbs would do the punting for the Army on Saturday. Keyes has been doing such good work of late that many thought he would be the final selection, but Hobbs seems to have returned to form, and in to-day's drill gave a beautiful exhibition of kicking. He is a left-foot kicker, powerful and accurate when right, but has been anything but consistent until the last few days. His kicks to-day were good for 55 and 60 yards with splendid heights.

The coaches announced after to-day's practice that the Army would line up in the Navy game as follows:

Furnell, centre; Weyand and Huston, guards; Wynne and Devore, tackles; Merrillat and Markoe, ends; Prichard, quarter back; Hobbs, left half back; Keyes, right half back; Benedict, full back.

Keyes dropped three field goals to-day out of four trials. The Army squad will leave for Philadelphia on the 7:30 train to-morrow morning. The battalion of cadets will go down on Saturday.

MIDDIES MUST NOT BET.

Annapolis Cadet Punished for Trying to Wager on Army Game.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 28.—According to unofficial but reliable information here to-day Supt. Gibbons of the Naval Academy, following his anti-betting order to the Midshipmen a day or two ago, has given ample demonstration that he means business in his determination to break up the practice of betting on the inter-service athletic contests. One cadet who was endeavoring to arrange a bet against the Army on Saturday's football game was discovered, and, following an investigation of the circumstances, he has been placed under arrest, and sent to the prisonship Reina Mercedes.

For years it has been customary for the cadets of the two academies to form a betting pool at even money on the result of their annual football game.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—The Annapolis football team which will play the Army eleven on Franklin field next Saturday arrived here to-day, and saw the game between the University of Pennsylvania and Cornell. The football squad from the Naval Academy numbered thirty-five men, and they were in charge of Lieut. Howard.

PASSAIC ELEVEN BEATEN.

Stamford H. S., Champions of Connecticut, Defeat New Jersey Boys.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Nov. 28.—On a field covered with snow two inches deep and with the weather so cold that Right Tackle Farrier of Passaic wore mittens during part of the game, Stamford High School football team, winner of the scholastic championship of Connecticut, this afternoon defeated Passaic High School, champions of Northern New Jersey, 28 to 0.

Because of the snow and the cold there was a great deal of fumbling, and Passaic was the more unfortunate in this respect. At least two of their fumbles lead to touchdowns. Stamford outplayed Passaic in every department of the game. The local team got away with a number of forward passes, one of them a pass from a placement kick formation over Passaic's goal line for a touchdown, and they made many substantial gains through the Passaic line and around the ends.

Capt. Dolan, Stamford's full back, scored two touchdowns and did a lot of effective interference. During the season he scored 103 points. The Stamford team has lost only two games in three years, one of them going to West Point's second team. Stamford scored four touchdowns to-day, and Right End McGourtly kicked a field goal from the 30-yard line. Dolan and Woitke made long runs for Stamford. Passaic's best offensive work was done by Walker, Greenwood, Prescott, and Demarest. The line-up:

Stamford.	Positions.	Passaic.
Madigan	Left end	Staff
Geary	Left guard	Demarest
Morse	Centre	Sexer
Demino	Right guard	Donovue
Grogan	Right tackle	Farries
McGourty	Right end	Dunn
Gillespie	Quarter back	Herty
Woitke	Right half back	Greenwood
Dolan	Full back	Prescott

Substitutions—Cook for Woitke, Graney for Cooke, Elliott for Geary, Opper for Donohue. Touchdowns—Dolan (2,) Madigan, Woitke. Goal from touchdown—Dolan. Field goal—McGourty. Referee—M. A. Boyle, Stamford. Umpire—James Kenelly, Stamford.

HOLY CROSS WINS IN WEST.

Worcester Collegians Defeat St. Louis University, 24 to 15.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 28.—Holy Cross College, of Worcester, Mass., defeated St. Louis University this afternoon, 24 to 15. St. Louis made a touchdown on a forward pass, but failed to kick goal, and the first period ended St. Louis, 6; Holy Cross, 0.

O'Brien of Holy Cross got the ball in the second period on an intercepted forward pass, and ran seventy yards for a touchdown. Goal was kicked. Starting with the ball on its own twenty-three-yard line, three rushes through tackle and a place kick by Ratican earned three more points for St. Louis. Score was 9 to 7 in favor of St. Louis.

Holy Cross scored first in the third quarter when Capt. Ostragen made a goal from placement after O'Brien had caught a punt from behind St. Louis's goal line. After Zachritz had been put out of the game for striking a Holy Cross player and the St. Louis team penalized thirty yards, Pickett blocked an attempted punt and ran twenty yards for a touchdown. Ostragen kicked goal. Pickett scored another touchdown by interrupting a forward pass, and Ostragen again kicked goal. Score, Holy Cross, 24; St. Louis, 9.

St. Louis scored a touchdown in the last quarter by line plays and forward passes, but failed to kick goal. The game closed with the ball in Holy Cross's possession on its own thirty-five-yard line.

Bushwick, 6; Bay Ridge, 3.

At West End Oval, Bay Ridge, yesterday morning, the Bushwick High School football eleven defeated Bay Ridge High by the score of 6 to 3. Bay Ridge scored early in the game, Carlos kicking a field goal from the 25-yard line in the opening period, and held the advantage until within a few minutes of the close of the game, when Nolan circled Bay Ridge's left wing for an eighteen-yard run, which resulted in a touchdown. Nolan and Court were the stars for Bushwick High and Carlos starred for Bay Ridge.

Pazzetti Rescues Woman from Danger

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Penn., Nov. 28.—Vincent Pazzetti, Captain of the Lehigh University football eleven, and the hero of many gridiron battles this past Fall, proved himself a hero in another manner to-day when he saved a woman from being crushed to death under a train. Pazzetti was waiting at the local station to take a train for Lancaster when an elderly woman got off one train and bewildered, walked in the direction of an approaching passenger train. Pazzetti made a dash and managed to shove the woman out of danger just in time.

INDIANS OVERWHELM BROWN ELEVEN, 32-0

Capt. Thorpe Again Struggles Through Opponents for Most of the Points.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 28.—The Carlisle Indians overwhelmed the Brown University team on Andrews Field by a score of 32 to 0 to-day. Glenn Warner's braves completely outclassed the Brunonians, who were powerless to stop the spectacular runs of Thorpe, the famous Indian half back.

Thorpe was the stellar performer of the game, and figured directly in all the scoring, making three of the five touchdowns and kicking two goals. It was Thorpe's long runs that repeatedly put the Indians within striking distance of Brown's goal.

A driving snowstorm swept across the field during the entire game, making conditions uncomfortable for the 8,000 spectators.

The slippery field aided the Indians, for the Brown tacklers were unable to down Thorpe, and often shot clear past him because of the treacherous footing. For Brown Capt. Ashbaugh played a star game at right end, and Crowther at quarter back excelled. The whole Brown team played hard from start to finish, but they had no defense for the open play of the Indians, which proved far more effective than would have been the case had the field been dry.

The forward pass worked by the Indians again and again for long gains was executed successfully but once by Brown. Twice Brown carried the ball close to the Carlisle goal, once to the half-yard line without being able to get it across.

There was no score in the first period, though Thorpe got away with two runs of 20 and 30 yards each.

In the second period the Indians scored twice. The first time directly after a 33-yard run by Thorpe, and the second time after a 50-yard run by the same player.

Thorpe attempted a field goal from the 23-yard line in this period, but failed. Carlisle scored again in the third period, marching from their own 15-yard line over the Brown goal line.

In the final period the Indians made a whirlwind finish with two more touchdowns, the first coming after Thorpe had received Crowther's punt on his own 40-yard line and dashed 50 yards to Brown's 10-yard line, and the second near the close of the period, following gains by Thorpe, Wheelock, and Bergie, aided by a forward pass which netted 22 yards. The line-up:

Carlisle.	Positions.	Brown.
Garlow	Centre	Staff
Busch	Right guard	Gottstein
Calac	Right tackle	Kratz
Williams	Right end	Ashbaugh
Arcasa	Quarter back	Crowther
Thorpe	Left half back	Tenney
Goesback	Right half back	Bean
Bergie	Full back	Henry

Substitutions: Carlisle—Powell for Hill, Wheelock for Goesback. Brown—Bartlett for Kratz, Goldberg for Gottstein, Kulp for Staff; Kulp for Goldberg, Wade for Murphy, Langdon for Andrews, McLean for Crowther, Metcalf for Bean, Hazlett for Henry.

Touchdowns—Thorpe (3,) Guyon, Wheelock. Goals from touchdowns—Thorpe, 2. Referee—Mr. Thompson, Mount St. Mary's. Umpire—Mr. Burleigh, Exeter. Head Linesman—Mr. Okeson, Lehigh. Time—Four fifteen-minute periods.

Victory for Central of Newark.

Capt. Stanford of the Central High School of Newark was the individual star of the game that his team played yesterday against the East Side High School at Wiedenmayer's Park in that city, the Centrals winning by the score of 16 to 0. Two touchdowns were scored, and in the third quarter Stanford added to his laurels by kicking a neat goal from placement from the 25-yard line. Stanford was hurt in the early part of the first quarter when a player jumped on his head, but he recovered quickly and helped his team make the touchdown. He carried the ball over in the second quarter on a thirty-yard run around left end. East Side braced in the second half and held the Centrals back, though they failed to gain anything, resorting mostly to forward passes, which did not work. Snow fell through the whole progress of the contest. The line-up:

East Side High.	Positions.	Central High.
Smethurst	Centre	G. Smith
Heilman	Right guard	H. Smith
Nelson	Right tackle	Ennis
Bongivanni (Capt.)	Right end	Gilhuly
Bauer	Quarterback	J. Baer
Slott	Right halfback	H. Bennett
Schneider	Fullback	Stanford (Capt.)

Touchdowns—Schmitt, Stanford. Goal after touchdown—Stanford. Field goal—Stanford. Substitutes—Singaren for Bauer, Netchert for Gilhuly, Kronz for Baer, Schmauer for Nelson, and Silver for Schneider. Referee—C. H. Garrison, Wellesley. Umpire—L. H. Fields, Springfield Y. M. C. A. Head linesman—E. F. Moller, Newark. Linesmen—H. Baldwin, East Side, and J. Frank, Central. Timers—S. Karrakis, Central, and E. Kiefer, East Side. Time of quarters—Fifteen minutes.

East Orange Defeats Barringer.

The New Jersey interscholastic football title went to the East Orange High School yesterday afternoon, when on Ashland Field, East Orange, they defeated the Barringer High School eleven by the score of 6 to 0. East Orange scored a touchdown in the third quarter, after the Newark team had obtained what seemed to be a safe lead, by A. Dempsey's clever goal kick from placement in the second quarter from the 25-yard line. The winners were outweighed by an average of almost ten pounds and had depended upon playing with open tactics. The snow covered field and the wet ball spoiled this plan. The line-up:

Barringer High.	Position.	E. Orange High.
A. Dempsey	Left end	Taylor
Schaaf	Left Guard	Middleton
Thornell	Centre	Schwartzkopf
Anton	Right guard	J. Smith
Barry	Right tackle	Wallace
Sutton	Right end	H. Smith
Bush	Quarter back	Switzer
Gilbertson	Left half back	Roper
W. Dempsey	Right half back	Walton (Capt.)
Grady	Full back	Culbert

Substitutes: For Barringer—Brandes for Anton, Jose for Bush, Bush for Gilbertson, Mansfield for Jose, Van Ness for Sutton. For East Orange—Hall for Culbert, Shaw for Walton, Fisher for Taylor, Abbott for Roper, Morse for Middleton. Touchdown — Switzer. Field goal—A. Dempsey. Referee—Mr. Scudder of Brown. Umpire—Mr. Selvage of Columbia. Head linesman and timer—Mr. William Maroney of Newark Academy. Linesmen—D'Angola, Barringer, and Dewar, East Orange. Time of halves—Fifteen minutes.

Old College Stars Win on Gridiron.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 28.—Using both the old and new style football effectively the "All Stars," former heroes of the gridiron both in the East and West, to-day proved that they could "come back" and defeated the Beavers, a professional team here, by a score of 34 to 7. Two touchdowns by Rosenwald and one each by Marshall, McGovern and Capron, and four kicked goals tells the story of the "All Stars" victory. Brion, for the Beavers, made the touchdown. The play on which Marshall scored is said to have been the most sensational here in years. Taking the ball from Pickering on a 40-yard forward pass, the former speedy Minnesota end, ran 35 yards to plant the ball behind the goal line. "Pudge" Heffelfinger, former star of the Yale team, played a great game at guard.

Vanderbilt Champion of South.

NASHVILLE, Nov. 28.—Vanderbilt University won the football championship of the South to-day by defeating Sewanee, 16 to 0. Vanderbilt scored a safety in the first period and two touchdowns and kicked two goals in the final period. In the first tperiod, with the ball on its 4-yard line, Sewanee tried to punt from behind itts own goal. The pass to Gillem was wide and before he could recover the ball and run it out he was downed. Neither team could do much until Shea displaced Collins at halfback for Vanderbilt in the third period. This seemed to put new life into the game, and Vanderbilt scored its two touchdowns on rushes.

Georgetown Wins a Title.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—By defeating Virginia Polytechnic Institute at football here to-day by the score of 24 to 8, Georgetown University practically was assured of the football championship of the South Atlantic States. The Virginia boys were able to make a showing only in the first quarter, when they played the local team to a scoreless tie. On the wet field Virginia's light eleven soon tired and were helpless against the heavy attacks of Georgetown's men.

SPORTING EVENTS PUT OFF.

Snowstorm Plays Havoc with Outdoor Games in City.

The snowstorm which struck New York early yesterday proved just big enough to spoil nearly all the outdoor sporting events scheduled for this city and vicinity. Scholastic football was the heaviest sufferer, five games between schoolboy elevens being postponed because of the poor condition of the playing fields. These games will be played to-morrow.

The one college football game scheduled for this city, between the Fordham and Villanova elevens at Fordham Field, suffered the same fate because of the snow and mud which covered the field, and it will be played here to-morrow. Several hundred football enthusiasts had gathered to see the contest, but their appeals for a game had no effect on the managers of the two teams. The Villanova squad returned to Philadelphia in the afternoon and will return to-morrow. This is the final game on the Fordham schedule, and the Maroon eleven has been working hard to close a most successful season with a decisive victory.

At American League Park, where the Commerce and De Witt Clinton High School teams were scheduled to play in the scholastic championship series of Manhattan, several hundred followers of both teams were disappointed because the game was postponed. The "No Game" signs, used for baseball postponements, were displayed early, but the crowd continued to increase until upward of 1,000 had gathered at 2 o'clock, the time set for the game. The game will be played at the same field to-morrow, beginning at 2 o'clock.

Similar conditions prevailed at Washington Park, where the Manual-Boys' High game was to be played, and at Hawthorne Field, where Erasmus and Poly Prep were to clash in their annual struggle. All these games will be played to-morrow. The Curtis vs. Curtis alumni game was also called off.

The Yonkers Marathon, an annual Thanksgiving day event of considerable interest, over the full Marathon distance, was also called off on account of the rain. It will be run off on Jan. 1.

The Point to Point horse race on Long Island was also postponed and will be run off to-morrow if the weather permits.

Although most of the golf and country clubs in the metropolitan district had planned a variety of competitions for yesterday as the formal closing of the season, the heavy storm in the majority of instances played havoc with the schedules. At some of the clubs the competitions were called off altogether, while at others a postponement was made. Included in the latter class were Nassau Country Club, Fox Hills Golf Club, the Apawamis Club, and the Englewood Country Club. At Forest Hills the competition was called off. At the other clubs throughout the metropolitan district the fields were greatly reduced on account of the weather.

NO SCORE IN SOCCER.

England and Scotland Unable to Score in International Match.

England played Scotland on the soccer football gridiron yesterday afternoon and in spite of the snow the event, under the auspices of the New York Footballers' Protective Association, attracted to Marquette Oval a large crowd of enthusiasts, who watched a royal struggle that ended in a scoreless draw.

Fred Milnes of Sheffield, famous as the Captain of the Pilgrims who visited this country twice and donor of the intercollegiate trophy, represented the St. George Football Club on the English team. He had fully recovered from the injuries sustained earlier in the season soon after his arrival here, and his work at right back was a revelation. K. Napier of the same club and H. Agar of the Critchleys also distinguished themselves for England.

On the Scottish side, J. Kerr of Yonkers, J. Dunlop of Newark, and O'Gara of Greenpoint, excelled their fellows.

The most exciting bit of play occurred in the middle of the first half, when Shanholt of Columbia Oval, centre forward for England, took the ball down half the length of the field. He dodged past the backs and had a fairly free chance at goal, but O. Wilson of Scotland's team made a magnificent stop. A. McLeod of Hollywood Inn showed great speed at outside right for Scotland.

The only player keeled over was T. Doyle of the Clan McDonalds, Vice Captain of the English side, but he quickly resumed play.

Owing to the tie, the game will be replayed on a date to be announced by the Executive Committee of the Association. Other teams entered in the international series are the All-American, Irish, and Continental. The line-up:

England.	Position.	Scotland.
Halliwell	Goal	Wilson
Milnes	Right back	Ross
Napier	Right half	Girvy
Gray	Centre half	McCann
H. Agar	Left half	Dunlop
Bailey	Outside right	McLeod
Lord	Inside right	O'Gara
Shanholt	Centre	Phillips
I. Agar	Inside left	Salmond

Referee—C. Creighton. Linesmen—W. Welsh and W. Newman. Time—Halves of forty-five minutes.

After journeying to Montclair, N. J., yesterday morning the Crescent A. C. soccer players of Brooklyn found the grounds in unfit condition for a championship match, so that the Field Club League fixture was postponed. Instead, the players who had turned out took part in a game, with the result that the Crescents won by 2 goals to 1.

FIELD CLUB SOCCER LEAGUE.

Staten Island Team Sure of Title—Team Picked for Philadelphia.

By their defeat of Montclair the soccer players of the Staten Island Cricket and Tennis Club practically clinched the leadership of the Field Club Soccer League championship series. With two games to play, they need only 1 point to win positively. The eleven of the Central Y. M. C. A. of Brooklyn is in second place, with the remaining team so closely bunched that the third place will probably not be decided until the end of the schedule. The record to date:

Clubs.	Won.	Lost.	Dr.	Pts.
Staten Island	7	0	1	15
Central Y. M. C. A.	4	2	1	9
Richmond County	3	3	1	7
Crescent A. C.	3	4	1	7
Bensonhurst	2	5	1	5
Montclair	1	6	1	3

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Field Club Soccer League a team was chosen to represent the league in the annual game with the Associated Cricket Clubs' Soccer League of Philadelphia, at Philadelphia on Dec. 7. The New Yorkers picked were the following: Goal, Van der Zee, Staten Island; right back, McClellan, Crescent; left back, Milnes, Staten Island; right half, Brown, Central Y. M. C. A.; centre half, Banning, Staten Island; left half, G. Jeffers, Crescent; outside right, Kaufman, Staten Island; inside right, McWhinnie, Staten Island; centre forward, Harland, Crescent; inside left, Shanholt, Central Y. M. C. A.; outside left, Welsh, Bensonhurst. Alternates—Zyplot, Crescent; Charlwood, Crescent; Hunter, Central Y. M. C. A.; Winpenny, Montclair; Gardner, Montclair; Fraser, Central Y. M. C. A.; Van Laar, Staten Island; Waters, Central Y. M. C. A.; Nichold, Staten Island; Philip, Crescent; Diem, Montclair.

Turkey Shoot at Greenwich.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Nov. 28.—At the Greenwich Country Club a number of members competed in the annual turkey shoot to-day. The snow storm made the clay birds difficult to see and was the cause of rather poor scoring. Five turkeys were given as prizes, three of which were won by B. Foster and the others by George M. Pynchon and Ernest B. Wills. The conditions in each called for twenty-five birds, club handicap. The best scores were:

B. F. Foster, 23, 2, 25; 22, 2, 25; 23, 2, 25; 22, 2, 24; 21, 2, 23. George M. Pynchon, 17, 6, 23; 17, 6, 23; 18, 6, 24; 18, 3, 24; 17, 6, 23; 19, 6, 25. Ernest B. Wilts, 17, 5, 22; 18, 5, 23; 18, 5, 23; 21, 5, 26; 20, 5, 25. C. S. Wills, 19, 3, 22; 18, 3, 21; 18, 3, 21; 16, 3, 19; 16, 3, 19. N. Webb, 20, 4, 24; 20, 4, 24; 17, 4, 21; 20, 4, 24; 19, 4, 23.

Lockwood Wins at Traps.

Dr. F. W. Lockwood won the club championship at the annual trap shooting tournament held yesterday at the Orange Gun Club traps in Orange, N. J., having a score of 84 out of his four strings of 25 targets each. I. D. Unger was second in the club's banner event with a score of 82. There were six contestants and the others finished in the following order: A. Mosier, 73; Dr. G. W. Wakeley, 73; O. L. Yeomans, 72; H. Kingsland, 68. In addition there were four sweepstake handicaps, the prizes being turkeys.

The winners' scores were: Dr. Lockwood 24, A. Mosier 24; H. Kingsland 24 and J. Von Longerke Jr., 25. The scores in two scratch events in which three men contested were in the first shoot as follows: Dr. Wakeley, 24; Unger, 22; Mosier, 18. Dr. Wakeley also won the other scratch event with a score of 22, Unger was second with 20 and Mosier third with 18.

AMATEUR CHAMPION WINS AT THE TRAPS

B. M. Higginson Does the Best Work in Travers Island Contests.

B. M. Higginson, amateur trapshooting champion of the United States, did the best work in the holiday shoot of the New York Athletic Club at Travers Island yesterday. In the shoot for the high gun prizes the champion was the winner in both the scratch and the handicap legs. He took the former with a total of 90 out of a possible 100 targets. With an allowance of 4 blue rocks he led the field in the other event with a total of 94.

Mr. Higginson, however, could not win both cups, so the handicap event went to C. Stein and Dr. De Wolfe, who tied with a score of 93 targets each. The trophy finally was won by the former gunner after a close and an interesting shoot-off. Mr. Higginson, however, took the McMahon Cup with a total of 25 straight targets.

Dr. De Wolfe also did good work throughout. He first landed the Travers Island trophy after a shoot-off against B. M. Thomson. He followed the win by taking the event under Olympic rules. In the latter shoot he broke 23 out of a possible 25 targets. The November Cup fell to the steady aim of Dr. Bogart, who had a full score of 25 targets. C. Stein landed the Ogden Cup, giving him also two prizes during the afternoon.

The weather conditions were miserable. Not only did it snow during the greater part of the day, but a high wind whirled the blue rocks into shooting angles that made it exceedingly difficult for the gunners to hit the targets. Under the conditions the scores were considered good. The scores:

WOLGAST, TOTTERING, FOULS RITCHIE

Referee Disqualifies Champion in Sixteenth Round of California Fight.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—Ad Wolgast, lightweight champion pugilist, lost his title to Willie Ritchie to-day in the sixteenth round of their fight at Jim Coffroth's arena at Daly City, near this city. In that round Wolgast fouled Ritchie twice, and Referee James Griffin awarded the fight to Ritchie. Wolgast, however, was already a beaten man. His eyes were glazed, his legs shaky, and his whole body tottering.

The end of the fight came after those at the ringside had noticed in the fifteenth round that Wolgast's strength seemed waning somewhat. At the beginning of the sixteenth the boys faced each other with Ritchie confidently carrying the fight to his opponent. Wolgast looked worried. His face had lost the sneering smile it wore in the earlier rounds. Ritchie made him wince with a two-hander to the body, and then shot a crushing right squarely to the jaw. Wolgast fell against the ropes, then retreated toward his corner. Ritchie crowded him, and as Wolgast raised his hand, he right-crossed him and Wolgast fell sprawling.

Official Timekeeper George Harding, who has been counting out champions for thirty-seven years, began to toll off the seconds. At the count of four Wolgast, very groggy, got up and came toward his antagonist. Ritchie, who had crossed to the opposite side of the ring, rushed to meet him, and they exchanged blows. Wolgast, though badly dazed, covered so that Ritchie could not send in the finishing smash. Only twenty-four seconds remained of the round. Ritchie, near his own corner, made ready for the right cross again, when Wolgast's left struck him low. Hundreds of voices raised the cry of "Foul! foul!" and Referee Griffin cautioned Wolgast. In another instant the left glove of Wolgast struck low again and found the same sore spot. Ritchie tried to fight back, but was plainly in distress.

Referee Griffin rushed between the fighters, pushed Wolgast aside, and raised Ritchie's hand in token of victory. The crowd at the ringside cheered him and hundreds rushed to shake hands when he left the ring. Ritchie was taken to a bath house and Wolgast went to his Ocean Beach training quarters immediately after the fight.

Wolgast had the better of seven of the rounds, four were even, and the remainder were easily Ritchie's. In the first two the local lad outboxed the champion; he outfought him in the tenth, which was really the turning point of the fight; he stood shoulder to shoulder with him and slugged to body and head. Wolgast had much the worst of the milling and Tom Jones, his manager, increased the allowance of stimulant that the champion took during each intermission.

All through the fight Ritchie blocked and ducked cleverly, but encountered the Wolgast left hand a few times that bruised his left eye and nearly closed it. In the in-fighting his right eye was slightly damaged and his lip puffed a bit, but on the whole, Wolgast's blows did little damage.

Wolgast seemingly was lacking in condition. In the round before the finish his legs were so heavy he could hardly lift his feet from the mat, while Ritchie, fresh and breathing perfectly, danced around his puffing adversary and pecked him with straight lefts.

Wolgast says he did not intentionally foul Ritchie, and that he thinks it is a poor way to win a championship.

"I didn't hear Griffin caution me, and I do not believe I struck a foul blow," he said after the fight. "Ritchie was rough, and when I first got in trouble in the sixteenth it was from him throwing me against the ropes instead of hitting me. I would be willing to fight him again to-morrow."

Ritchie protested that he was fouled but said that he was strong and could have finished Wolgast in another round. The new lightweight champion's real name is Gary Steffen. He was reared in San Francisco and took to driving a sand wagon team for his older brothers when school studies became irksome. When 15 years old he began boxing. He showed his quality in the amateur ranks and later in preliminaries to big fights.

A year ago to-day he made his first big forward stride when he was substituted for the stricken Ad Wolgast in Los Angeles and boxed twenty rounds with Freddie Welsh. Since then he all but won in ten rounds from Joe Mandot in New Orleans and last May he boxed four rattling rounds with Wolgast, flooring the then champion once. He is 21 years old and of German parentage.

When time was called for the first preliminary, a heavy fog hung over the arena but the amphitheatre was jammed to capacity. There were several women present.

Ringside betting was brisk with the odds fluctuating between 10 to 6 1-2 and 10 to 6, Wolgast on the long end.

A half hour before the principals were scheduled to enter the ring, Ritchie money was much in evidence, the short enders demanding 10 to 6. Manager Nolan, Ritchie's manager, offered Tom Jones, Wolgast's manager, $5,000 against $10,000, but the latter declined.

Both Wolgast and Ritchie weighed in in their dressing rooms at 2:15 o'clock and each was easily below the stipulated figures—133 pounds ringside. Odds of 6½ to 10 were offered at this stage, Ritchie money preponderating.

Referee Jim Griffin called the men from their corners and time was called at 2:47 o'clock. The fight by rounds:

Round 1—Ritchie, with the men fighting close, scored several times to the head and face and before the champion essayed the offensive. They mixed fiercely in a neutral corner and the Californian scored the first blood as a result of a succession of short arm blows to the mouth. Wolgast spat blood as he took his seat. It was Ritchie's round.

Round 2.—Wolgast opened the round with a rush. The champion kept well under cover and after deluging Ritchie with several lefts and rights to the jaw drove two wicked rights to the jaw and a left uppercut over the heart. Ritchie broke ground and Wolgast drove two telling lefts to the stomach. The round ended with desperate infighting, Ritchie excelling. Wolgast's round by a shade.

Round 3—Wolgast drove in a powerful left to the stomach. His blows lacked direction, which provoked comment. Wolgast drove two wicked rights to the stomach and a right to the mouth, which started the blood. Wolgast almost sent his man through the ropes with a right to the jaw. Ritchie fought back fiercely. The bell ended the round with both bleeding from the mouth. Even.

Round 4—They came up eagerly and exchanged right uppercuts to jaw. Ritchie drove the champion against the ropes with snappy blows to the face. The "wildcat" stood in his own corner and covered up. Ritchie's round.

Round 5—A rally to the ropes and clever blocking by both men brought cheers. Wolgast sent right and left to the jaw. A right cross almost sent Ritchie to his haunches. The champion followed this with a right that all but closed the Californian's right eye. Decidedly Wolgast's round.

Round 6—Wolgast took no chances with the shifty Californian. He kept at a safe distance. Two lefts reached Ritchie's damaged right eye. At close range the champion hammered away at the body, landing once in the pit of the stomach with great force. Ritchie's hitting power was deficient. The champion took his corner grinning. Wolgast's round.

Round 7—Wolgast rushed in and planted a right to the jaw. Ritchie winced. Wolgast began to talk to Ritchie. The champion whipped several punches to the jaw and body that all but floored the Californian. Ritchie appeared groggy. Wolgast's round.

Round 8—Ritchie came up with a sick smile and the champion sent in short range blows to the face. Wolgast's defense was perfect. Ritchie's blows failed to reach him. Wolgast landed on body and jaw and scampered to his corner. Wolgast's round.

Round 9—Ritchie's right eye was closed completely. The champion rushed and chased his man about the ring. He showered rights and lefts to the stomach, Ritchie wincing under the blows. The wonder was that Ritchie weathered the storm. Ritchie landed a hard right swing to the face at the bell, but it was Wolgast's round.

Round 10—They fought close together, with Wolgast doing considerable execution. He used short-arm blows to the body. Ritchie showed surprising vitality and tilted the champion's head with a straight left and several rights. Wolgast here lost his poise and Ritchie hammered him unceasingly with right and left swings to the jaw. The crowd was on its feet. Wolgast went to his corner looking worried. It was Ritchie's round and his best showing thus far.

Round 11—Ritchie carried the battle to the champion. A vicious rally followed in mid-ring. Wolgast swung wildly. Ritchie landed straight rights to the jaw. Ritchie was growing stronger, planting solid rights and lefts to the face. Wolgast swung wildly again. The champion was slowing up, and it was Ritchie's round.

Round 12—Wolgast chopped his right to the eye and left to the stomach. Ritchie sent back straight rights to the face. He rushed Wolgast about the ring and drove his right to the stomach. Wolgast landed a hard left on the point of the chin without effect. It was an even round.

Round 13.—Fighting head to head, they exchanged face blows and did little damage. Wolgast appeared wild but both seemed strong and each seemingly willing to force the pace. Wolgast rushed Ritchie to the ropes just as the bell ended the round. Round even.

Round 14.—The round opened fiercely. Both men swung wildly. Wolgast sent Ritchie to the ropes with two good rights to the stomach and a left on the closed eye. Ritchie countered with a light right to the body. Wolgast sent Ritchie's head back with a left to the nose and almost closed Ritchie's good eye, with a hard right. Wolgast's round by a shade.

Round 15—Ritchie was able to see from one eye only as he came up, but he was able to send a wicked left to Wolgast's stomach, and they fought at close range. The referee pried them apart several times in this round. Ritchie landed a volley of lefts to the stomach and outboxed the champion. Wolgast closed the round with a hard drive to the stomach. Wolgast had been getting a taste of whisky during the intermissions.

Round 16—Ritchie swung right to jaw as they met and Wolgast tottered to the ropes. Ritchie sent the champion to the floor with a right swing. Wolgast came up reeling. Again Ritchie's rigat shot out and Wolgast was sent against the ropes. Ritchie, however, lacked power to put in a finishing blow. The best Wolgast could do was to close in, stalling all the while, his eyes glazed. With the men locked, Wolgast brought his left up from his side and struck Ritchie low. The blow was clearly discernible and the crowd yelled its protest. Referee Griffin grasped Wolgast, saying: "Do that again and I'll disqualify you." He had scarcely finished when Wolgast duplicated the punch, catching Ritchie below the belt. Griffin stopped the fight and promptly gave the decision to Ritchie.

RIVERS CONQUERS MANDOT.

Mexican Shows Reversal of Form in Second Bout of Season with Opponent.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 28.—Joe Rivers, the Mexican lightweight, who was decisively defeated by Joe Mandot of New Orleans in a twenty-round bout on Sept. 2 last, showed a wonderful reversal of form in the return bout this afternoon, and defeated the New Orleans boy by almost as wide a margin as marked the latter's victory on that occasion. This bout, like the previous one, went the full distance of twenty rounds, and was marked by fierce fighting throughout. Rivers's victory makes him the logical candidate to fight Willie Ritchie, who won the lightweight championship from Ad Wolgast to-day.

Rivers exhibited far more speed and cleverness than he has ever shown before in the ring, and his victory was clean cut. It was nearly dark and the electric lights over the ring had been turned on before Referee Eyton hoisted the Mexican's hand in token of victory at the close of the twentieth round. There was no disputing the award of the referee, and the large crowd went wild over the showing of the Mexican, who, less than six months ago, was able to gain the honors in only three of twenty rounds against the same opponent.

Although outpointed practically all the way Mandot put up a remarkably hard fight, and the bout bristled with action all the way. At times both boys threw caution to the winds in their efforts to score a knockout. The nearest thing to a knockdown was scored by Rivers in the fifteenth round, when he landed hard right and left swings to Mandot's jaw in quick succession, driving the latter back to the ropes. He had previously weakened Mandot with terrific stomach punches in the infighting and two or three hard uppercuts. Mandot staggered under the shower of punches, and it seemed to the spectators that he would go down, but his great stamina came to his rescue and by falling into a clinch he managed to stay on his feet.

Rivers took the lead before the first round had closed. As soon as the bell started the boys on their way, Rivers assumed the aggressive and quickly showed that he was a different boy than in his previous battle with the New Orleans lightweight. A hard right to the jaw in this chapter almost put the latter through the ropes. In the second Rivers continued to set the pace, and was entitled to the honors, though he had to travel at top speed for the full three minutes. In the third they fought like a pair of wildcats from bell to bell, with Mandot doing the greater part of the damage.

Rivers drew blood from Mandot's mouth early in the fourth chapter, and had a shade the better of the round. In the fifth his advantage was very pronounced. The Mexican forced the fighting throughout the round, and landed frequently on Mandot's jaw. Mandot had the better of the sixth round, which was a bit quiet compared with the preceding rounds. Both boys kept their distance, and the fighting was all at long range.

Rivers missed a hard swing at Mandot's jaw early in the seventh round, and fell to the floor from his effort, but was up in an instant and again forced the work. The round belonged to him on points. Following a tame eighth round, the ninth was rough, the honors being about even in both chapters.

From this point until the final bell Rivers set the pace. The twelfth, thirteenth, and fourteenth rounds were fiercely fought, Mandot putting up the pluckiest kind of a battle, although he was gradually falling behind. Rivers had him on the ropes when the bell ended the fourteenth, and in the next round Mandot, after being nearly floored, tottered to his corner at the bell. He recuperated somewhat in the next round, but was on the losing end. During the last four rounds Mandot remained on the defensive and had to take considerable punishment.

Winners in Irving A. C. Bouts.

Terry Mitchell of Brooklyn outpointed Lee Barrett of Wisconsin, Willie Shafer of Chicago easily defeated Johnny Dohan of Brooklyn, and Phil Bloom beat Willie Warren in the three ten-round bouts yesterday at the Irving A. C. of Brooklyn. The bouts were the three that constituted the special Thanksgiving matinee and drew a large crowd of Brooklynites to the clubhouse. The main tilt between Mitchell and Barrett was the feature of the card. Mitchell put up a clever exhibition and showed himself to be much faster than his opponent. He jabbed and crossed either hand to the body with telling effect, and excelled at long-range work at all times. Johnny Dohan, a Brooklyn idol, had to be content with the loser's end in his bout with Shafer. Shafer floored Dohan in the third session for the count of nine, after which the Brooklynite was practically on the defensive. Shafer's hard blows repeatedly slowed up Dohan when he tried hard to regain his lost ground. In the opening ten-round session Phil Bloom easily defeated William Warren.

Britton Stops Young Saylor.

DAYTON, Ohio, Nov. 28.—Jack Britton of New York stopped Young Saylor of Indianapolis in seven rounds before the Lakeside Athletic Club here this afternoon. Saylor took a terrific beating and was unable to respond to the call of the bell at the beginning of the eighth round. In the second round he was brought to his knees by right and left hooks to the jaw, following a rain of straight lefts to the face. After taking the count of five he continued, but never had a chance to win thereafter. Britton pounded his opponent to a state of collapse in the seventh, while Saylor tried to cover up. He was so badly punished that the minute interval did not revive him, and his seconds conceded the battle to avoid a knockout.

Kelly Outpoints McGee with Jabs.

Eddie Kelly, the Harlem lightweight, had the better of the going yesterday in the ten-round bout at the New Polo A. A. with Fighting Dick McGee of Brooklyn. The Harlemite won the honors in every round by a constant session of jabbing. He started by sticking a left jab to McGee's face, and, finding little opposition in landing, continued his style until the end. McGee was a rugged boxer and relied on his ability to mix matters at close quarters. When he stood up in the centre of the ring and tried to box Kelly he found it impossible to check the steady pummeling of jabs, and was always forced to break ground.

McMahon Knocks Out Madden.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov 28.—At the Albany Athletic Club this afternoon Tom McMahon of Pittsburgh knocked out Jeff Madden of Boston in the seventh round of a fast and furiously contested bout, which was scheduled for ten rounds. Madden put up a good fight, but was clearly outclassed by his shifty and skilled opponent, who gave a fine exhibition of fast boxing which had Madden in a helpless condition. Early in the seventh round, after a volley of vicious blows, Madden went down and out.

Cortez Outpoints Jarvis.

Andy Cortez easily outpointed Jimmy Jarvis in their ten-round bout yesterday, which featured the card of the matinee performance at the Liberal A. C. of Staten Island. Both men were of the lightweight class, and fought a hard contest from bell to bell. Cortez displayed superior knowledge of ring tactics and scored the cleanest and most blows. In the semi-final of six rounds Mickey Devine of the west side scored a decisive victory over Eddie Kelly of Harlem.

Bundy and McLoughlin Beaten.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 28.—Tom Bundy and Maurice McLoughlin, the National lawn tennis champions, were defeated in a sensational game by Nat Browne and Claude Wayne of Los Angeles in the opening round to-day of the doubles tournament at the Los Angeles Country Club.

LEACH CROSS BEATS BATTLING NELSON

Ex-Champion Shows Little of His Old-Time Form at Sporting Club.

Battling Nelson, who a few years ago held the lightweight championship of the world, yesterday demonstrated before a crowd of about 2,400 persons in a ten-round bout with Leach Cross at the Forty-fourth Street Sporting Club that he is still a marvel at assimilating punishment. The former title holder was defeated decisively, but he weathered the battle without once being floored, and amazed his antagonist with his recuperative powers. Although Nelson failed to show any of his former butting powers, he was able to stand up through the ten sessions and take all that Cross had to offer without breaking ground.

The weights as officially announced were Cross 138 pounds and Nelson 138½. From the beginning to the end there was never a dull moment, and despite the fact that the contest resolved itself into a one-sided affair, the followers of both men found plenty to keep them on edge. Nelson persisted in his old-time tactics of boring in with such aggressiveness that he made Cross wonder what was coming, while the latter unceasingly strived to bring over the punch that would end it all.

Of the entire ten rounds eight favored the east sider, with the first one slightly favoring Nelson, and the fifth also going to him, when Cross failed to show his best and covered up.

There was little long-range work exhibited in any one of the ten rounds, as both men worked at close quarters and directed all their work from that angle. Cross began by using a left jab to the face, which he followed with rights to the ribs and stomach. On numerous occasions the east sider staggered Nelson, and knocked him off his balance with terrific uppercuts. Cross, after getting in close and allowing Nelson to pound away at his stomach and ribs, always shot out clear, and, with both hands, pummeled Nelson about the face, jamming his head back and knocking him about, but could not down him.

It looked very much as if the bout would not go the scheduled distance after the work of Cross in the second period, but from then until the end the stamina of the former champion stood him in good stead, and he weathered each session remarkably.

Teh final round was bad for Nelson, and he was bordering on a collapse as the bell rang. His face as he left the ring was badly battered, with both eyes swollen and his mouth bleeding. Cross's right eye was blue and swollen also.

In the semi-final of six rounds Kid Fisher and Young Flynn boxed a draw. Young Parisoli knocked out Young Pardell in one round in a preliminary, and in the opening bout of four rounds Young McElroy and Young Madden fought four rounds to a draw.

FENCERS ARRANGE SCHEDULE

Many Events to be Decided by New York Clubs.

A lengthy schedule of events has been arranged for the season by the Amateur Fencers' League of America. Competition begins at the New York Turn-Verein Saturday, Dec. 14, and ends the latter part of April at the Hotel Astor, when the National championships will be held. All competitions will be conducted under an alliance with the Amateur Athletic Union. The clubs comprising the New York division are: New York Athletic Club, Fencers' Club, New York Turn-Verein and West Side Y. M. C. A.

The championship events will be divided among the clubs. The title for team sabres, team duelling swords and women's junior foils will be fought out at the Fencers' Club, while the team and junior championship in foils will go to the Turn-Verein, the remainder of the title events being assigned to the remaining clubs. As in the past, competition for the Saltus medals and Eddy cup, two of the most coveted trophies in local fencing circles, will be held in the gymnasium of the Fencers' Club.

The Long Island division of the league will hold five competitive events, three at the Crescent Athletic Club and two at the Young Men's Christian Association. The schedule follows:

Dec. 14—New York Turn Verein. Fencing.

Jan. 6, 1913—New York Fencers' Club. Club team of three, each man to fence with a different weapon; A. F. L. A. three-weapon trophy; A. F. L. A. gold medals to winners. Foils, dueling swords, sabres.

Feb. 18—Boston Athletic Association. Open competition, foils, N. E. Division. B. A. A. gold, silver and bronze medals.

March 22—Boston Athletic Association. N. E. Division championships and preliminaries for National championships.

Y. M. H. A. Cross-Country Race.

The Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A. announces that it has obtained permission from the Y. M. H. A. Athletic League to hold the annual cross-country championship run of the league on Sunday morning, Dec. 8, along the following route: From Ninety-second Street and Lexington Avenue west to Fifth Avenue, north to 110th Street, west to Eighth Avenue, south to Eighty-fifth Street, across to Fifth Avenue, up to Ninety-second Street, and back to clubhouse, a distance of about four miles. A team prize has been offered, and six individual prizes have also been donated. The meet is open to bona-fide members of the Y. M. H. A., and a large entry is expected. All entries must come through the league representative in each association, and must be in the hands of the Secretary of the league not later than Dec. 5.

Sailor White Loses to Pelki.

CHICOPEE, Mass., Nov. 28.—Arthur Pelki, the Chicopee "White Hope," won the popular decision over Sailor White of New York in a ten-round bout here this afternoon. Pelki had the better of the fight from the start and had White going in the final round.

HORSES AND CARRIAGES.

SAVE-THE-HORSE SPAVIN REMEDY.

Druggists everywhere sell Save-The-Horse with a legal contract to cure or refund money.

LIVELY SWIMMING AHEAD.

N. Y. A. C. and City A. C. Have Strong Teams for Coming Indoor Season.

A lively scrap for metropolitan swimming honors is in sight for the coming indoor season, which will open officially on Dec. 7. Both the New York Athletic Club and City Athletic Club are eager to capture the title of supremacy in the district, and they are leaving no stone unturned to outdo each other in the water. Many new recruits have swelled the ranks of the two squads, and the fight promises to be close and interesting, for the teams are strong and well balanced.

Among the Mercury Foot's fresh batch are Fred Culman, Captain of last year's Columbia forces and a rattling good all-around man; Wheaton Chambers of Princeton, the former intercollegiate hundred-yarder, who recently won the championship of China, and is good for about sixty seconds; Arthur Behning, a fast developing sprinter; Franklin Fielding of City College, an expert fancy diver, and S. B. Downes, another diver of unusual merit. Of the old team there are again available the swimmers South, Ash, Hanrette, Nerich, Reilly, Goodwin, Ruddy, Voth, Trubenbach, Lee, Manley, Kelly, Leveridge, Arnold, Palmer, O'Sullivan, and McCarthy; the fancy divers McAleenan, Dunn, Mullen, Lee, and Keily; the plungers Goodwin and Reilly. For the breast stroke there is no representative of moment, but at the back stroke James Reilly, the 500-yard free style holder, has been showing remarkable speed, and his friends believe he will give the Olympic winner, Harry Hebner, a run for his money.

The City Athletic Club has secured a pair of trump cards in R. E. Frerichs of Commercial High and A. L. Clyburn of Erasmus, the two fastest schoolboy watermen of 1912. It is also learned from a club official that a couple of Germany's crack performers will compete under the colors of the organization. The men carried over from last season are the all-around swimmers Frizell, Auerbach, Currier, Oppenheim, Herold, Curran, Adae, Hager, Tobias, Soss, Hallstein, Helfrich, and Ritter, though the latter is going abroad and may not be on hand for the important meets; the fancy divers Rogers, Frizell, and Behrens, who is also in Europe at present, and the plungers Bosselman and Adae.

The action of the Amateur Athletic Union in adopting soccer water polo instead of the American game, will bring about some fine matches between the rival clubs, and odds are slightly against the New York Athletic Club, for the City Athletic Club has pressed into service several Continental players who rank as internationalists, Ritter, Hager, and Tobias among them. Still the Mercury Footers have a few experienced soccerites and they will put up a good fight.

Boys' Games at West Side Y. M. C. A.

The boys' department of the West Side Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association held its first set of indoor games last night in the gymnasium of the clubhouse, in West Fifty-seventh Street. This department will hold games every month in addition to the bi-monthly athletic games. The summaries:

220-Yard Dash.—Won by Albrecht; O'Donnell second; Lucken and de Cordova tied for third. Time—0:32.

440-Yard Relay, (junior.)—Won by the Acme team; U. and I. team second. Time—1:05.

880-Yard Relay, (senior.)—Won by the Phi Alpha Mu team; Delta Gamma Phi team second. Time—2:04.

Obstacle Race, (senior).—Won by Greenwald; de Cordova second; Massett third. Time—0:15.

Obstacle Race (junior)—Won by Walker; Homay, second; Rhinehard, third. Time—0:16 4-5.

20-Yard Dash (junior)—Won by Walker; Ralston, second; Dimino, third. Time—0:04.

Potato Race (junior; distance 50 yards)—Won by Dimino; Taylor, second; McQuade, third. Time—0:06 4-5.

Potato Race (senior; distance 50 yards)—Won by Albrecht; O'Donnell, second; Ducke, third. Time—0:56.

Burke Wins Roller Race.

Harry Burke of Bridgeport won the one-mile professional skating race last night at the Metropolitan Roller Skating Rink, Fifty-second Street and Broadway, skating the distance in 3:08 1-5. William Yale, also of Bridgeport, was second and James Clark of this city, finished third. Burke led from the start to the finish of the race, with Yale a close second, and won by about one yard.

Storm Drives Golfers Away.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Nov. 28.—The active golf season was concluded at the Plainfield Country Club to-day with a cross-country tournament. There was a field of forty at the start, but owing to a snowstorm only the following were able to finish: Will T. Glenney and M. J. Dumont, 58—3—55; Dudley H. Barrows and A. M. Collens, 61—8—58; W. Lester Gleney and D. O. Rodgers, 63—4—59; A. J. Watson and H. Reeve Stockton, 62—3—59; Frank O. Reinhart and J. E. Erickson, 78—4—69; S. H. Patterson and E. T. Willson, 76—6—70; R. H. Cox and E. A. Lyon, 89—12—77.

University of Washington Champion.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 28.—For the fifth consecutive season the University of Washington was proclaimed football champion of the Pacific Northwest to-day, when the State university team defeated the team of the Washington State College (Pullman), 19 to 0. By winning to-day's game Washington attains the distinction of having gone five years without losing a game.

PLATT BEST GOLFER IN LAKEWOOD SNOW

Qualifying Round of Fall Tournament Played Under Severe Difficulties.

Golf under difficulties marked the opening round of the annual Fall tournament at the Country Club of Lakewood yesterday. The storm which set in shortly after breakfast soon covered the links with a constantly deepening layer of snow, but despite this handicap Percy Platt, an unattached player, managed to play around in 88 strokes which led the field. Two strokes away was Fred Herreshoff of the National Golf Links of America.

Out of an original entry of 102 only about 60 golfers had the pluck to start, and nearly every one regretted it. As the depth of the snow increased it became difficult to find the balls which disappeared at every shot. As one player ruefully observed: "I used a red ball in the belief that it would be easier to see, but it disappeared as quickly as any other, and once underneath the surface they all looked alike."

Although usually capable of rising to the occasion when confronted with abnormal conditions, Walter J. Travis, hero of hundreds of memorable battles, failed to do himself proud this time. The Garden City veteran, with a 7 at the ninth hole, took 51 to go out, and a 45 back gave him a 96 total. H. J. Topping, the Greenwich long driver, had the same score as Travis.

The best part of Platt's golf was his 40 on the homeward journey. He always drives a long ball, and as his putts were lucky he was well satisfied with the score. Players qualified in four sixteens. The scores:

First Sixteen—Percy Platt, unattached, 88; Frederick Herreshoff, National, 90; John M. Ward, Garden City, 92; Chisholm Beach, Fox Hills, 94; Walter J. Travis, Garden City, 96; H. J. Topping, Greenwich, 96; F. C. Jennings, Nassau, 99; R. L. Redfield, National, 100; L. L. de Forest, Mumford, 100; T. D. Conner, Fox Hills, 101; J. G. Batterson, Lakewood, 101; H. F. Bunket, Inverness, 101; J. E. Faber, Richmond County, 102; J. F. Shanley, Deal, 102; W. H. Yawger, Baltusrol, 103; S. C. Mabon, Ardsley, 103.

Second Sixteen—S. K. Wood, Forest, Lakewood, 105; M. L. Pearsall, Richmond County, 105; W. A. Engeman, Nassau, 106; C. N. Fowler, Jr., St. Andrews, 106; E. Van Schaik, Richmond County, 107; B. S. Bottome, Fox Hills, 107; Garfield Scott, Philadelphia, 107; W. C. Scott, Philadelphia, 108; A. W. Brand, Lake Geneva, 108; W. E. Heim, Richmond County, 109; N. E. Sprague, Inwood, 109; W. H. Leeds, Fox Hills, 110; W. R. Hochster, Deal, 110; A. P. Roth, Manhattan, 111; F. C. Russell, Dyker Meadows, 111; A. C. Camovito, unattached, 111.

Third Sixteen—Harry McSweeney, Atlantic City, 111; H. S. Jenning, Kingston, 111; C. L. Tappin, Garden City, 112; W. H. Bolton, Glen View, 113; C. F. Harmen, Wykagyl, 113; George A. Taylor, Richmond County, 113; A. G. Bruiner, Richmond County, 114; James T. Smith, Deal, 114; C. R. Gillett, Wykagyl, 114; F. S. Viele, Lakewood, 115; A. H. Howard, Woodland, 115; C. A. Lindley, Lakewood, 117; C. W. Pierson, Richmond County, 117; E. M. Hunt, Trenton, 117; F. M. Warfield, Fox Hills, 118; C. N. Cohen, Inwood, 118.

Fourth Sixteen—E. H. Wiswell, Montclair, 119; Theodore Senseman, Atlantic City, 120; W. R. Delehanty, Deal, 120, F. A. Potts, Lakewood, 121; F. J. Evans, United Service, 122; Maxwell Lester, Lakewood, 122; G. G. Smith, Lakewood, 123; W. C. Stevens, Riverton, 126; L. A. Ripley, Oil City, 126; W. H. Botsford, Richmond County, 127; B. B. Peabody, Dyker Meadows, 127; R. R. Reid, Wykagyl, 130; A. J. Simpson, Baltusrol, 130; H. E. Hayes, Lawrence, 132; H. Ohashi, Englewood, 132; C. H. Tuke, Montclaim, 136.

Golf on Other Links.

Two competitions were on the cards at Montclair Golf Club yesterday, one being an eighteen-hole medal play handicap and the other being foursomes, in which the best ball minus one-half the combined handicaps of the players counted. In the latter W. B. Bremner and W. E. Marcus, Jr., were the winners, with a card of 84—7—77. Bremner won the handicap, with 91—5—86, while Marcus was second, with 99—6—91, and W. R. Hotchkin third, with 114—16—98.

A two-inch snowfall in Glen Cove yesterday made it necessary for the Nassau Country Club to postpone the competitions carded for the holiday until to-morrow. The principal attraction was to have been an eighteen-hole medal play handicap.

Slush, snow, and sleet caused a postponement until Saturday of the eighteen-hole medal play handicap originally scheduled for yesterday at the Dyker Meadow Golf Club However, a dozen or more of the faithful braved the rigors of the storm and took part in a sweepstakes. T. W. Haughey proved to be the winner with a card of 121—22—99, while H. P. Kidd was second, with 1[illegible] 101.

TROTTERS FOR AUSTRIA.

Dave Halle and Bracegirdle Purchased at Old Glory Sale.

Holiday prices were realized at the Old Glory sale yesterday in Madison Square Garden. Not only was the best individual price of the sale recorded, but the average was far in advance of the three preceding days. Gay Audubon, the champion four-year-old trotter of 1911, with a race record of 2:06¾, was knocked down for $7,700, while the average for the day was nearly $700. More than a score of trotters and pacers were sold for prices exceeding $1,000 each.

Two of the highest-priced horses sold will be shipped at once to Austria. Dave Halle, 2:06¾, the champion four-year-old trotter of last year, realized $6,000, and Bracegirdle, 2:04¾, holder of the world's five-heat race record, went for $2,400. The pair were bought by W. J. Robinson, as agent. Dave Halle will be raced on the Austrian tracks, while Bracegirdle will be sent to the stud.

W. J. Scott of the Road Drivers' Association of New York secured Eva Tanguay, 2:08¾, a four-year-old daughter of Peter the Great, for $3,750, for driving on the Harlem Speedway. This is the highest price paid for a Speedway horse in several years. Princess Pique, winner of the New York Driving Club champion cup, was sold for $190. Princess Pique was the champion pacer of the Speedway during the time she was in the stable of T. B. Leahy.

Guy Axworthy, the ten-year-old son of Axworthy-Lillian Wilkes, with a record of 2:08¾, left the stable of William Bradley for Lexington, the exchange price being $4,200. The other important sales recorded were: Echo Todd, 2:26¼, by Todd-Amiss, $3,000; Todd's Echo, two years old, by Echo Todd-Alice Todd, $2,400; Bon Voyage, 2:15, by Expedition-Bon Mot, $3,000; Princess of India, yearling, by Prince of India-Phoebe Onward, $1,800; Tramp Some, 2:23¼, by Trampfast-Ellen Houser, $1,450; bay colt, by Axworthy-Wrytha, $1,125; Wumly C., 2:23¼, by Prince of Edgar-Laura McGregor, $4,400; Young Sweet Marie, yearling, by Bingen-Sweet Marie, $2,000; Arona McKinney, 2:08¾, by McKinney-Barona, $2,100; Chatty Direct, 2:07¼, by The Director General-Chatty Brook, $2,400, and Check Hook, $2:14¾, by Conrad-Ramona, $1,225.

Fox Chase on Long Island.

Special to The New York Times.

WESTBURY, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Owing to the snowstorm to-day on Long Island the annual point-to-point races to be held over an unannounced course were postponed until next Saturday at the same time on the Chilton Farm. Members of the Meadow Brook Club found compensation, however, in a fox hunt this morning from the Syosset School house. The fox, however, found a hole in the ground. The hounds picked up a trail at the Columbia stock farm, ran to Woodbury and then lost the trail. The party then broke up and rode home. The party included Miss Elsie Ladew, Harvey Ladew, Miss Reed, Robert Bacon, Robert F. Potter, Samuel Willes, Harry Payne Whitney's children, De Lancey, Jay, W. Burling Cocks, James Coogan, P. E. Voss, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock and family. Mrs. J. E. Davis followed the hunt in a motor car along the road.

Hunters Ride to Hounds in Snow.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Nov. 28.—A field of thirty riders of the Watchung Hunt Club met the hounds at the Baltusrol Golf Club this morning and, notwithstanding the bad weather, including a snowstorm, enjoyed a fine chase, which led along the Watchung Mountains, through Mountainside, Westfield, Fanwood, Scotch Plains and Netherwood, ending at the Plainfield Country Club. The croppers taken were by Edward R. Finch, Fred Alpers, F. D. French, Miss Marjorie Dana and W. H. Wildey. Only a small number of those who started finished, and they included Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H., L. B. Smith, Miss Gertrude Noe, Harry L. Finch, Mrs. W. S. Brown, J. S. Casey, Edward R. Finch, J. J. O'Donohue, C. W. Holland, C. S. Bellows, Stanley Bellows, Beverley Brown and Huntsman Harrison.

SOLIDARITY.

The defendants in the Lawrence murder trial had public sympathy with them in their acquittal on the charge which was made against them so awkwardly and unjustly, and which the court considered so fairly, according to the defendants' own testimony. But the acquittal was for murder, not for the conduct out of which the killing grew. To attribute the fairness of the trial to fear of the solidarity of labor is a wrong to our institutions, and may have serious consequences unless checked. Already there are signs of recurrence and increase of the disorders, which are a thing apart from the murder trial. Already the authorities at Lawrence have been compelled to refuse authorizations for demonstrations in support of a sort of freedom of speech and action which offends the law instead of being protected by the law. And HAYWOOD, the I. W. W. agitator, is emboldened by the acquittal to promise exhibitions of the solidarity of labor in many other places than Lawrence, and on a far greater scale. If HAYWOOD fulfills his threat there will be a labor Armageddon akin to the Balkan quarrel, that is a "language" strike, or a strike by races instead of crafts.

This is a new sort of solidarity, and it is worth while to ask where it leads us. It may lead us far, for the class whose solidarity is to be exhibited at Pittsburgh and Paterson and elsewhere in the same manner as at Lawrence is both the most numerous and least intelligent of the downtrodden workers. Its members have scarcely English enough to understand what is told them, and they are told worse things even than were told to the deceived strikers at Lawrence. They are below even the standard of the Federation of Labor, and the agitators are telling them that the federation does not really care for their wrongs. Thus there is a rift in the solidarity of labor.

But opposed to the divided ranks is the solidarity of capital. It also has its dissensions, but sinks them in union against the solidarity of labor when exhibited by either labor camp. It is only within sixty years that the law countenanced the solidarity of labor. And there was no solidarity of capital in the present portentous sense until the limited liability and corporation laws of the middle of the nineteenth century. Both sorts of solidarity owe their existence to laws passed by democracy, and now democracy is threatened by its children. For the two solidarities are strengthened alike by means of communication which facilitate common action by great numbers of men in a manner impossible even to armies before steam and electricity. It might almost seem that society is in danger of disorganization by the very forces which make modern life so incomparably superior in a material sense to any civilization existence previously experienced.

But the danger is more seeming than real, for the solidarities of labor and capital are confronted by a third solidarity. First the new industrialism, the factory system, necessitated the solidarity of labor for the protection of the individual. Then was born a new solidarity of capital in self-defense. And now society needs a major solidarity to defend itself against the minor solidarities. That phase of the conflict of solidarities cannot be better expressed than by the arbitrators in the engineers' award. It is true that society cannot supply its needs unless both the other solidarities are checked. The mandate of society must run supreme to the mandate of either the Federation, or the I. W. W., or the capitalist trusts.

Whatever merit there is in a patriotism of class, and loyalty to any order of society, there is a greater merit in the only true patriotism, the patriotism of all against any class. Such "soldiers of the common weal," as those now on trial at Indianapolis, are truly mere exploiters of other classes for selfish reasons. Their savagery knows no limit, and their factions show a brutality toward each other surpassing the usages of warfare, or the oppressions of them by their capitalist foes. They reverse the Chinese custom, and instead of advancing against their foes with horrendous masks, they borrow the livery of charity and benevolence. Within the past few days they have re-elected as their spokesman Mr. GOMPERS, an advocate and example of that solidarity of labor which proposes laws from which it asks exemption for itself, the solidarity of labor which construes the laws for itself, and which promotes contempt of the courts which administer the law for all. It is a more serious menace than either HAYWOOD or ETTOR or all their dupes together. It is easier for society to protect itself against strikes and riots and dynamitings of any size or conspiracy than to arouse perception of the danger lurking in the lobbies of legislatures. Democracy is seen at its worst in this arraying of solidarity against solidarity, organizations of class against universal welfare.

THE EQUITABLE PARK PLAN.

When we said a week or so ago that the clearing of the block formerly occupied by the Equitable Life Assurance Society's building, bounded by Broadway and Pine, Nassau and Cedar Streets, had led to much talk downtown about the desirability of preserving the open space as a park, it was with no idea that the matter would be seriously taken up. The talk suggested merely that the park idea had taken hold of the public mind. It used to be next to impossible to impress upon the minds of men of affairs in this community the need of many small parks in a great city. An open space in the midst of "improvements" always seemed to the practical New Yorker a neglected building site.

But the idea of keeping the Equitable site for a public park has been taken up, and a plan is afoot, as was reported in yesterday's TIMES, to induce the du Pont Company to erect its proposed thirty-six-story building elsewhere, or not at all, and to devise a financial process by which the desired end may be accomplished. That the bankers and other business men of the neighborhood would contribute liberally to a fund to buy the site is understandable. Indeed, one-twenty-sixth part of the required sum has already been promised, but the other twenty-five parts would be difficult to obtain quickly.

The proposition that the city shall issue special bonds to the amount, say, of $13,500,000, the interest to be paid by the property owners of the neighborhood, who would also establish a sinking fund to retire the bonds at their maturity sixty years hence, is one that would involve many legal complications. The bonds would be exempted from the city debt limit, of course, and it is doubtful if the issue could be legally made. However, if the bankers and merchants of that part of the city are really determined to preserve the Equitable site as a park, to keep for their own buildings the light and air they have received since the ruin was removed, and, incidentally, to increase rental values in that part of Manhattan, we do not doubt that they will be able to overcome all difficulties in the way of their project.

THE RELEASE OF PATRICK.

The Governor is sworn to uphold the law and protect the public interests. If Gov. DIX has honestly reached the conclusion, after careful consideration, that ALBERT T. PATRICK did not murder WILLIAM MARSH RICE or connive in his murder, he has done right to pardon the man. But he is setting aside the verdict of the trial jury, which was upheld by the highest court in this State, and it is clearly his duty to give to the people a clear statement of his reasons for believing PATRICK guiltless. It would have been a wiser and a safer plan, if the Governor's examination of the evidence in this case has satisfied him that there is doubt of PATRICK'S guilt, to appoint a commission to go thoroughly into the matter and abide by its decision. The Governor's pardoning power, of course, is not to be denied. He had a right, if he chose, to release PATRICK merely on humane grounds. We doubt if the pardon on that ground would have been approved by thinking men. But he has chosen to declare his belief in PATRICK'S innocence, and thereby to cast doubt upon the proceedings of the trial court and, at the same time, to withhold from the public the facts on which he bases his conclusions.

Gov. DIX has not been alone, by any means, in his conviction of PATRICK'S innocence, so far as the charge of murder is concerned, but the man had a fair trial and has profited greatly by his legal knowledge. That the lawyer, whose acquaintance with his aged client was slight, who had done nothing to obtain the old man's gratitude, had formed plans to gain possession of all or a large part of the Rice estate, amounting to several millions, is a proved fact. The testimony of JONES, the valet, was contradictory and to some lawyers unconvincing.

PATRICK has fought for his life with remarkable bravery and persistence, has practically conducted every stage of his own case, which passed from the trial court to the Court of Appeals, and thence to the United States Supreme Court, before the sentence of death, pronounced April 17, 1902, was commuted to life imprisonment Dec. 20, 1906. In the intervening six years PATRICK has managed to keep his name and his cause in the public mind. Presumably the case is now closed. But if the report is true that PATRICK intends to renew his demand for the Rice millions, and to seek to secure probate of the will declared a forgery, it may last many more years. We can hardly credit this tale, however; the man who has been under sentence of death, and in durance for twelve years, is likely to value his freedom too highly to risk it again in an attempt to get money.

From whatever aspect the case is viewed it is plain that there has been a serious miscarriage of justice. If we admit, now, that PATRICK was indicted and convicted of murder on insufficient or incompetent testimony, that a man guiltless of murder was convicted and sentenced for that crime, and deprived of his freedom for twelve years, we must also admit that the relations of PATRICK and the valet JONES and the actual cause of the death of RICE are still mysteries which the law has not penetrated in spite of the money expended and the time wasted. The mystery of the second will, also, has never been explained. PATRICK has never been tried for forgery, and will not be if he is content to let well enough alone. The administration of justice in this State, therefore, suffers from the outcome of the Patrick case, which constitutes a bad precedent in criminal law, and is likely to be used too frequently by astute lawyers in the future.

As for PATRICK, his courage and persistence have gained for him a large share of public sympathy of a certain sort. Too many people will be glad that he has escaped further punishment. "He has suffered enough," they will say. In that manner the sentimental people of this city came to look upon the prosecution and imprisonment of that arch-rascal, WILLIAM M. TWEED. Law exists, however, not to punish or revenge, but to protect society. In this view we must regard the influence of the Patrick case as detrimental to the public welfare.

THE LIVES OF THE CITY.

What would be thought of a great commercial business that kept no books, or that kept them ill? But that would be merely a matter of financial profit and loss. This city boasts of a great organization which requires millions yearly for its support, that touches directly the lives and welfare of all its inhabitants, and in it there is no good accounting of lives and health.

In the current Medical Record a committee headed by Dr. CHARLES L. DANA presents the views of the New York Academy of Medicine on the need of a bureau of vital statistics, like that of Paris, or of London. London is divided up into twenty-nine sanitary areas, in each of which an accurate record is kept of births, deaths, and states of health and sickness. The deaths of infants are classified by causes and by "very minute age groups"—by weeks for the first month of life, and by months for the remainder of the year. The mortality of infants is correlated with overcrowding, and the entries relating to the chief epidemic diseases are amplified by descriptive statistics. In this way, for all the age groups and nationalities of London, the various social and economic phenomena that relate to the health of that vast municipality are closely determined and measured.

New York's tables, Dr. DANA'S committee reports, "present the minimum "of information necessary for general "administrative purposes." They are "utterly inadequate as a guide for social or legislative action," and are "of little use for scientific purposes." It would cost but $40,000 extra to get a staff of trained statisticians who would be able to enlighten public and private agencies upon housing conditions, occupations, and social movements that bear upon the questions of death and disease, to the end that the lives of the city may be better safeguarded.

CLEARING HOUSE REFORM.

The commendable recommendations of the Clearing House Committee on Inland Exchange regarding check collection charges are made at a time which gives them the appearance of a reform under fire. There has been an investigation in search of the Money Trust, and there has been threat of a prosecution such as is actually pending elsewhere for similar combination "in restraint of trade."

Not to go too far afield, however, and to confine discussion to the report, it is apparent that the Clearing House is not satisfied with its arrangements regarding check collections on purely business grounds, and would be justified in amending them without any reference to the legislative and political agitators. A net profit of under a hundred thousand dollars on a turnover of over five billions is certainly little pay for much work. The Congressional investigators represented that the check collection charge was extortionate. The fact seems to be that the collection charge costs far more in loss of banking business than the pitifully small return mentioned above. It is estimated that the check collection charge, small though it is, drove away from New York $100,000,000 of deposits of checks formerly sent for collection free.

The Clearing House is not a private institution. It is a public utility, although it is a voluntary organization. Membership, therefore, should be inclusive of all meeting the standard of business established by all. Banks in good credit, and doing a lawful business, ought not to have extra-legal requirements imposed upon them, not even by high-minded men of business acting as they thought and meant in the public interest. When the Clearing House required its members to levy the check collection charge it took action which now appears wrong in business discretion, and of doubtful legality. It might have been well enough for the Clearing House to express an opinion that the check collection charge was desirable, but to impose it with a penalty is not defensible either commercially, as is proved, or perhaps legally, as is suggested.

THE COMMON SCHOOLS.

"I say all this subject to correction," Mayor GAYNOR was careful to remark during his speech announcing the reappointment of members of the Board of Education, in which he took occasion to say that there were too many refinements in the common schools and too little substantial learning. The Mayor does "not pretend to be an expert." But inasmuch as he has the appointing power and the duty of looking after the qualifications of the board, he feels that he must "have some conception of what the department should do."

So must all the citizens, with or without the aid of educational experts, form an opinion and express their sentiments about the school system which they pay for. That there are experts who would say that the Mayor speaks common sense in criticising the system is shown by the letter from Prof. MEEKER of Princeton, which appeared in THE TIMES on Nov. 25, and by the letter which we print this morning from President HUMPHREYS of the Stevens Institute of Technology.

The Mayor thinks that the majority of school children should be taught things that will help them in earning a living, and the city ought to "teach them trades and how to work, also." President HUMPHREYS declares that the school system should be designed primarily for the benefit of those who "must go out into the world early in "life and earn an honest living with "hands as well as heads." The reasoned statements of experts who would confute the Mayor and Mr. HUMPHREYS would be of interest.

SMOKING CARS.

Those who object to the tolerance of smoking in public conveyances will be cheered by the information given in The Engineering News that "all pas-"senger-traffic managers of either "electrical or steam railways would be "greatly relieved if they did not have "to make provision for smokers."

The solicitude shown by the railways upon this point is not ethical, but financial. It costs them annually millions of dollars extra to provide separate compartments for smokers and non-smokers on their lines. The separation of different classes of traffic on European railways accounts largely for their excessive cost of operation, as in consequence a large percentage of their passenger trains are only partly filled.

The Engineering News notes that street railway companies are lessening their accommodations to smokers. The standing on car platforms to smoke is gradually being done away with, and wherever the traffic is congested, as in elevated and Subway trains, there is complete prohibition. But the smoking car on steam railways will not easily go. It not only confers a privilege upon the smoker, but gives him a seat, when no seats are to be had in the regular coaches.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Surgeon Goes to Court.

Nothing decisive results from such discussion as has recently appeared on this page of the question whether or not surgeons are justified in making rich patients pay for operations performed on poor ones. Everybody concerned remains of his original opinion and the controversy dies away again, as it has so often before, not because it has been settled, but because the disputants weary of the subject. This interesting issue, however, has been raised down in New Orleans in a way that will lead to something which, whether satisfactory or not, is at least definite—a court decision.

In that city, one FRANK B. WILLIAMS, who is described as a wealthy lumberman, did what the custom of the time has made almost compulsory for self-respecting people—he had appendicitis. Thereupon a surgical notability of the vicinage, Dr. CHARLES A. DANNA, came with his kit of tools, was welcomed with the grateful confidence which on such occasions makes the very suggestion of a bargain impossible, and removed the vestigial organ that was threatening Mr. WILLIAMS'S life. The job must have been well done, for it turned out to be a case of "two inches and two weeks," and the wealthy lumberman resumed his wonted activities.

Then, after a decent delay, came the bill. It was for $20,000. The remarks and emotions of Mr. WILLIAMS are doubtless known to some of his friends and imaginable by the others. Of what may be called public record is only the fact that he declared the bill exorbitant and offered to pay $5,000. That sum was refused by Dr. DANNA, and he has brought suit for the full amount.

Now, the operation for appendicitis, while of a serious nature and demanding the exercise of skill and care, rarely takes much time and is of no special difficulty. Any surgeon properly called good can do it. The chances are that Dr. DANNA will not find it easy to convince any Judge or jury that even a wealthy lumberman should pay more than $5,000 for what people far from beggary usually get done for a tenth or a twentieth of that amount. On the other hand, Dr. DANNA can undoubtedly get many of his professional brothers to pronounce his charge a reasonable one, in the circumstances, and presumably they will be able to prove that like fees for like services to the rich have often been paid.

If the case goes, as seems probable, whatever the verdict in the District Court, to several higher tribunals, it may become famous and rank as "leading."

Not Wrongs to Stir the Blood.

There can be, of course, nothing like sympathy with men who beguile foolish and ignorant people into paying absurdly and outrageously high prices for books that in the eyes of ordinary readers are of small money value and in those of "collectors" are practically worthless. It is, however, almost as difficult to arouse pity or indignation in behalf of the complaining victims.

In the evidence and correspondence that have been collected by the prosecution of the accused publishers it appears that the purchasers of the more or less rare and sumptuous editions, besides being in every case almost unpardonably unsophisticated, were in most cases moved to buy, not by an appeal to an innocent desire for glory as the owners of fine books, but by a distinctly sordid hunger for quick and easy profits, obtainable, as they were told, by seizing something much wanted by a mysteriously slow millionaire. Buyers who acted on this second motive were not thereby put in exactly the class of those who invest in "green goods," but they were made near neighbors of them. The wonder is, not that complainants have come forward reluctantly and are requesting to have their identities concealed, but that anything less than utter ruin impelled even the least sensitive of them to reveal a misadventure so humiliating.

And were they really robbed? Some of us, who have little or none of the collecting instinct, read of enormous prices paid at sales about which nobody complains, by people whom nobody suspects of lacking sophistication, for books that have no intrinsic value whatever—of books the artificial value of which depends wholly upon scarcity in that particular edition or condition, though they can be bought for a few cents or dollars in other editions or conditions for all practical and literary purposes just as good or better. A bold Philistine might ask why, if one book is worth whatever anybody will pay for it, the price of any or all other books cannot be fixed in the same way.

Of course, that question is not pertinent when there have been deliberate misrepresentations, but the book collector who hasn't been fooled is rarer than the most precious treasure of the wisest of them, and, when taken in, they are usually content with making a resolution to be more careful next time.

Sensitiveness Carried to Extremes.

Remembering that the effect, if not the purpose, of the English libel law is about as much to prevent the publication of truths as of falsehoods, one cannot decide, from the brief dispatches at hand, whether the ROTHSCHILDS in London are trying to suppress a certain unauthorized history of their family because of its accuracy or of its inaccuracy.

The specimen anecdote from the book that has been cabled over in explanation of the resort to the courts by the great bankers is not, judged by American standards of free speech and publicity, obviously calculated to create much excitement or humiliation in any mind. for the story is to no more dreadful effect than that a ROTHSCHILD once made profitable use in the London stock market of advance information from Waterloo. That may not have been quite delicate, but like things have been done by so many speculators in so many markets since then, and passed for smart or clever, that most financiers would easily survive the telling of such a story about one of their remote ancestors.

The new business morality had not been invented in Waterloo days and nobody could be expected to show the gentle courtesy and tender consideration for the interests of others which now characterize all dealers in stocks and bonds.

Why should any of us be sensitive about the rudeness of our forefathers, their rudimentary ethics, their keen appreciation of the main chance? They produced us, and more could not reasonably be demanded of them.

FIFTH AVENUE DOOMED.

Commercial Skyscrapers Sure to Replace Present Residences.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the matter of limiting the height of the buildings on Fifth Avenue, it seems to me not only unwise but quite impossible to attempt to stop a march of events that must be, by the very nature of things, inevitable.

If the value set by the sweat shop owners upon a Fifth Avenue address is sufficiently high to warrant their paying Fifth Avenue prices they will pay them, no matter what the class of buildings, and the class of buildings will be arranged to meet this demand, and there is no reason why it should not. And so, that dwelling houses will practically disappear from Fifth Avenue I have no doubt; with the possible exception of one or two of the very finest, which will probably be retained by such families as the Vanderbilts for a town address in precisely the same fashion that Londoners keep theirs, while living the greater part of the time in the country.

Of course, my own feeling has nothing to do with practical matters; I stand strongly for the free as opposed to the formal in architecture and lose no opportunity of fighting the continental ideal of level uniformity, found at its best, not in Paris but in Vienna. It is a comfort to feel that St. Thomas's will be a hard nut for my Beaux Art brethren to crack when they reach it. G.

New York, Nov. 27, 1912.

SCHOOL DISCIPLINE

Needed by Workers with Hands as Well as Heads.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article headed "Our Foolish Schools" should be read with an open mind by all who are giving thought to our public schools and the results they produce. All your suggestions and criticisms are justified by the facts.

Very properly you have not placed the full responsibility for the present inefficiency of the public schools upon the teachers and administrators. Politics and misguided enthusiasm must bear a large share of the blame. The system has been allowed to develop along lines of inefficiency with respect to the wants of the vast majority of the people.

We must learn that education and culture are not obtained from the schools alone. Primarily the school system should be designed for the benefit of those who must go out into the world early in life to earn an honest living with hands as well as heads. With such a system of thorough education in the essentials and the maintenance of a firm discipline we should not have so much trouble from the unproductive and criminal elements of society.

ALEX. C. HUMPHREYS,
President Stevens Institute of Technology.
Castle Point, Hoboken, N. J., Nov. 27, 1912.

St. Thomas Island.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Berlin correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES wires that the concession conveying possession of the Harbor of St. Thomas, Danish West Indies, has been revoked on account of demonstrations made against it in Denmark.

Such is not exactly the case. The syndicate of Danish financiers returned the concession to the Government because they did not succeed in raising the 20,000,000 kroner needed for the harbor improvement as orginally planned.

The subscription of shares amounted to about 5,000,000 kroner, which will be used for harbor improvements, as such are badly needed on account of the near opening of the Panama Canal and anticipated business on a large scale. A new concession, smaller in extent than the first, has been obtained, and the enterprise is supported entirely by Danish capital. Only one Dane, the meritorious Niels Gron, has "made demonstrations" against it.

The accusation that Germany was or is interested in the concession is ridiculous.

LAURITZ LAURITZEN.
New York, Nov. 28, 1912.

DEFENDS $50,000 FEES.

Surgeon Says Superior Skill Warrants High Compensation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Letters to THE TIMES like that of Mr. Knapp are invaluable because of their frank statement of the real views of people on the subject of doctors' bills. All of us doctors would like to come to a genuine understanding with the public in this matter. Mr. Knapp asks if "Visitor" did not learn his art of surgery from the thousands of great surgeons who lived before him, and whose methods have come down in history. He states it as his opinion that no life is worth a fifty-thousand-dollar fee.

The question asked by Mr. Knapp seems to assume that a surgeon has only to pick out the right formula from traditions, and then apply it to his patient. In answer to this I will make two points. (1) A famous German doctor is said to have killed a patient one day, because his book had been carelessly cut and he turned over two pages at once by accident. (2) We have records available in hospital statistics showing that of two men of equal standing in the profession, one may have a death rate of 2 per cent. in a certain class of operations, while the other has a death rate of 20 per cent. in the same class of operations.

Concerning the value of life, let us assume that a given business man of large affairs has an earning capacity of $250,000 per year. If he chooses the 2 per cent. death rate operator, at $50,000 for a certain operation, he is simply taking out insurance at a fair rate against accident to a single year's efficiency, leaving out all questions of sentiment.

As a matter of fact we never really charge $50,000 for an operation. We should do so, but a fee of half that amount is about as large as we hear anything much about in professional circles. A chosen engineer can build a great new railroad station without interfering with the running of a single day's train. A chosen doctor can exercise the same degree of skill and efficiency in managing the health of a man whose arteries are undergoing senile changes. The difference in the respective emoluments indicates only that property according to nature's plan is held in greater reverence than life. VISITOR.

OPERA HOUSE ILL-VENTILATED.

Smoking and Overheating Make Balconies Unbearable.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am glad to see that one of your correspondents has raised the question of the lack of ventilation in the Metropolitan Opera House, especially in the upper galleries. The overheating is bad enough, the temperature being too high at all times, but the absolute lack of ventilation is much worse. The air in the family circle is foul and unfit to breathe, and the rear part of the balcony, just below, is still worse. On the occasion of Titta Ruffo's debut last week all the corridors of the family circle were filled with tobacco smoke, not only from the toilet room and the outer lobbies, but by men smoking openly in the main lobby. It is a rare thing for a window or door to be opened anywhere, either during or between the acts.

Granted that the ventilating system of the Metropolitan Opera House is defective, and that to remedy it effectually might be too costly, there seems no reason why the existing facilities for ventilation, such as they are, should not be utilized to the fullest possible extent, a few thermometers being installed, and certain ushers detailed to maintain a reasonably low temperature and as full a supply as possible of fresh air. The enforcement of the rule against smoking not only in the main lobby and the elevators but in all rooms and halls opening directly into the main lobby would do much to keep the air more pure.

THE POSTAL DEFICIT

Might Be Traced by Using Special Franking Stamps.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Every lover of common sense must have greatly enjoyed your editorial proof that the so-called deficit of the Post Office is not a deficit at all, because of the vast amount of work done by that department without pay through the franking privilege. Why not introduce a separate kind of stamp to be used by the departments and by others who have franking privileges? Make it compulsory upon these to use the same kind of envelopes as heretofore, and, in addition, to stamp their letters, &c., with these stamps according to the regular mailing rates. The stamps would be supplied free of charge to all entitled to them against their vouchers. The books of the Post Office would then show how much free work it does for other branches of the Government. They would also show that the Post Office works with a profit, and not with a deficit. Congressmen would perhaps become a little more careful in the use of the franking privilege. I wonder whether this could not be done without legislation by simple Post Office regulation. J. L. S.

New York, Nov. 27, 1912.

Church's Work in Spain.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In commenting on the assassination of Canalejas THE TIMES says editorially among other things:

Spain has suffered more than any other country in modern Europe from the baser kind of priestcraft, and was overrun with orders, the members of which lived on alms and fed the natural superstitions of the people.

These objectionable religious orders, "the members of which lived on alms and fed the natural superstitions of the people," are not the parasites you would have them, according to the most recent Spanish Government Year Book. These orders are credited with 606 provincial and municipal hospitals, in all of which they give their services gratuitously, and in 208 receive the large salary of $93.60 per year. The Little Sisters of the Poor maintain 51 refuges for the aged poor, with 5,093 inmates, and another religious organization shelters 3,593, neither receiving a penny of Government aid. There are 50 free eating houses and 22 reformatories and refuges cared for by the religious. They educate 133,901 persons without any cost to the Government. Ninety-five per cent. of the charitable institutions must go to their credit. P. L. GERETY.

Turkish Character Cruel.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with surprise the letter of G. F. Herrick in THE NEW YORK TIMES about the character of the Turks. I have lived and traveled in Asia Minor, and studied the history of the Turks in Asia Minor, but could not find the "honest," "peaceable," "thoroughly human," and "lovable" Turks of Mr. Herrick; neither have the great men like the Right. Hons. James Bryce and Gladstone, nor any truthful and unbiased foreign observers of common intelligence been able to find his mythical Turks.

If Mr. Herrick has not studied the Turkish history, blackened all through by fiendish Turkish atrocities, how could he forget the wholesale massacre of 100,000 Armenians in 1894, and the horrible massacre of Adana, unparalleled in the history of Tartars?

Buyers' Syndicates a "Menace."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to the article entitled "Fears Buyers' Syndicates," I think these large syndicates are a menace to the public, and are formed for the express purpose of crowding not only the manufacturers but also the small retail trade. Nowadays a young man cannot under any circumstances, even in some of the smaller towns, be successful in business owing to these large syndicates forming and underselling him until he is forced to the wall. It is certainly as much a restraint of trade as the American Tobacco Company was, and should be handled quickly before it gets such a hold that it will require long litigation to dissolve it. I might add here that the manufacturers are on the alert, and will in the near future positively decline to sell to large syndicates or ship their goods to small houses composing these syndicates in any other way than direct from their houses.

THE BROADER EUGENICS

Includes Racial Improvement by Social Reforms.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have noted the attention given in THE NEW YORK TIMES to the recently held International Eugenics Congress in London. Some of the most important contributions from the scientific standpoint were made by the American members of the Congress.

There is, as you doubtless know, considerable feeling in America that some organization, analagous to the Eugenics Education Society, is urgently needed to press forward the educational aspect of race improvement on sound and scientific lines. The Eugenics Record Office, under Dr. Davenport, is doing all that is possible for a scientific institution to meet this demand, but there are many questions to which a propagandist society can devote its attention, which are outside the scope of such an expert body of scientists.

The founder of the science, Sir Francis Galton, gave his patronage to the Eugenics Education Society in Great Britain, and until the day of his death took a keen interest in its policy, much of which he directed personally. For some years previously research work had been done by the Galton research scholar under his auspices, and also by Professor Karl Pearson.

The work of the society at first consisted in giving lectures both in London and the provinces. At the same time very strong evidence was laid before the Departmental Committee, which was inquiring into the reform of the Inebriates' act, recommending that an indeterminate sentence should be introduced, and that those inebriates who were feeble-minded should be treated as such and permanently cared for. This present session of 1912 has seen the reformed act affirm this principle.

The report of the Royal Commission on the care of the mentally defective was issued in 1908. As the question of the permanent care of the feeble-minded is one which appeals very little to the feelings of party politicians, it has been necessary both for the Royal Commissioners and for this and other societies to exert their united efforts in educating the country as to the need of such reform. To force the hand of the Government a private member's bill, entitled the feeble-minded control bill, was introduced last session. It had the desired effect and the Government introduced an adequate measure under the title of the mental deficiency bill early this Summer. The bill passed its second reading and was submitted to the Standing Committee of the House, where it is still under discussion, and is not, as is stated in your report, a law already in operation, although it is hoped that it may become law before the end of the session.

The bill provides for the permanent care of all those mentally defective individuals who are at present in any way touched by existing legislation either as paupers, vagrants, prostitutes, inebriates, perpetrators of petty crimes, &c. It does not, as has been stated, enable any mentally defective child, already under adequate care, to be deported to an institution; on the contrary, it provides that all inmates of colonies should be yearly examined by the commissioners. The act meets the Special Schools act, and cares for the mentally defective children as they come from the defective schools.

The society also offered very weighty evidence to the Divorce Commission, and the recommendations of the majority report follow closely the lines of that evidence, namely, that insanity, inebriety, and severe crime should prove grounds for divorce.

We are now engaged in an effort to introduce eugenics into the systems of elementary education in this country, and in that scheme we have the willing cooperation of the majority of the educationists in the country, so may hope that within the next few years all children will be inculcated with the larger idea of patriotism, which the eugenic ideal implies.

The International Congress has done much to bring together those working in all countries, and we hope that the outcome will be a still closer co-operation in the practical application of eugenics to social reform.

T. GOTTO,
Hon. Secretary, the Eugenics Education Society of Great Britain.

CARNEGIE GUILTY

Of Violating the Rules of His Own Simplified Spelling.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As an earnest advocate of simplified spelling, I was interested in observing what kind of work Mr. Carnegie's stenografer made of it, as reported in your issue of to-day. Mr.—or rather Dr. Carnegie (LL. D.), has done much for this reform.

Let us see how nearly the spelling approaches the standard. One rule is that in words where the last syllable contains a final "e," which can be omitted without leaving the pronunciation of that syllable in dout, it shall be so omitted—as in the words "imagin," "giv," but the words are spelt in your report "imagine," "give."

On the other hand, the "e" should be retained when it serves to make plain the pronunciation, as in "desired," "declined," "proved," "advised," "ensured," "resolved," &c., in all of which it is dropt.

Agen, where "ea" has the sound of short "e," the "a" shoud be dropt, as in "deth," "welth," &c., where your copy retains it.

Agen, short "e" final preceded by "c" shoud be dropt when it will not change the pronunciation, and the "c" should be changed to "s," which was not done in "referens."

Also the superfluous one of double final letters shoud be dropt, as in "Congres," "will," &c. And the silent "l" shoud be dropt in "coud," "woud," "shoud," which was not done.

Perhaps it is in part the difficulty of remembering all these changes that makes the adoption of simplified spelling so difficult, but it is not really so hard as it seems, and a tithe of the time and cerebral energy required for the mastery of our present cumbrous and illogical system would suffice to give us a far simpler and better spelling.

THE OMEN.

Turn, proudest Sultan, to the sinking West!
For there, above Sofia's swelling crest,
Beyond that magic-haunted minaret,
In blood-red air, the waning moon doth set.
See how it hovers, like a taper near gone,
And trembles at the first gray streak of dawn;
While to the fall, with keen, victorious hue,
In mingling rays, four mighty stars pursue.
Look how the pallid moon before them dies!
They couch its light with greater brilliancies.
Like to a wounded bird that trembles lies
Before the falcon tow'ring in the skies.
Thus Turkey sinks beneath the prone strife,
Trailing a bloody scimitar and knife.

'PARSIFAL' SUNG FOR HOLIDAY MATINEE

Special Thanksgiving Performance of Wagner's "Consecration" Festival Play.

"LA BOHEME" IN THE EVENING

Lucrezia Bori as the Mimi of Puccini's Work in the Regular Subscription Series.

Amfortas.....Hermann Weil

Lenora Sparkes, Rita Fornia, Rosina Van Dyck, Bella Alten, Vera Curtis, Florence Mulford.
Conductor.....Alfred Hertz

"Parsifal" entered upon its tenth year at the Metropolitan Opera House with the holiday performance that was given there yesterday. Its hold upon the affections of the music loving public is maintained, and the impression made by the performances at the opera house is unimpaired by familiarity and many repetitions. The audience yesterday, entirely made up of people who came because they wanted to hear "Parsifal" and not because they had subscribed to an opera season, was large; most of the audiences have been at the performances of Wagner's "consecrational festival play." The attitude of these audiences toward the drama has become habitually that which the most ardent admirer of it would wish without forcing the note of "reverence" or creating an "atmosphere" too rarefied for human consumption.

There have been many changes made in the cast of "Parsifal" since the first production, but these have been brought about so gradually and the hand of Mr. Hertz on the ensemble has been so firm that the general effect of the performances has not strayed far from that which the conductor established for them in the beginning. Now some detail or some particular feature is better or worse; but there is a recognizable standard at the Metropolitan that has been set and maintained for "Parsifal." Yesterday there was some cause for complaint of the choruses of the Brotherhood and the Esquires, which were not sung with so much finish and smoothness and beauty of tone, and especially not with so much purity of intonation as they have been. Mr. Hertz's orchestra, with few exceptions, acquitted itself admirably.

The foremost figure in the New York representations of "Parsifal" is now that of Kundry in Mme. Fremstad's consummate interpretation. Like all her other chief impersonations, it grows, develops, matures, becomes firmer, filled with more dramatically significant detail. This was especially true of the scene with Parsifal, which she sang and acted with marvelous seductiveness and beauty of voice and action. Mr. Burrian looks and sings less like the guileless youth with advancing years. Praise is due Mr. Witherspoon for his development in the part of Gurnemanz. Most of the others are also familiar from previous performances here in recent seasons, except Mr. Weil, the Amfortas, who appeared in that character for the first time here, and who hardly equaled the best of his predecessors in it.

"La Boheme" in the Evening.

Rodolfo.....Enrico Caruso
Schaunard.....Adamo Didur
Benoit.....Paolo Ananian
Mimi.....Lucrezia Bori
Parpignol.....Pietro Audisio
Marcello.....Dinh Gilly

Alcindoro.....Antonio Pini-Corsi
Musetta.....Bella Alten
Sergente.....Vincenzo Reschiglian
Conductor.....Giorgio Polacco

In the evening Puccini's "La Bohème" was given for the first time this season in the subscription series, when a very large audience was present. The chief feature of novelty about it was the first appearance in it here as Mimi of Miss Lucrezia Bori, the young soprano who has joined the company this season. It is a part which necessarily subjects her to some exacting comparisons with famous predecessors in it. Miss Bori is not a Melba nor a Sembrich, but she was an excellent representative of the luckless heroine. She had charm and grace in her appearance and action, the suggestion of gayety and of pathos; and her fresh, powerful, and youthful voice found material wholly fitted for it in the music she has to sing. Mr. Gilly as Marcello had a conception of his own of the part, which he made valid, and his voice was in condition to give his airs with real beauty of tone. Mr. Caruso did some of his finest, most perfect, and artistic singing as Rodolfo. The conductor was Mr. Polacco, who gave a spirited reading of the work and one with many truly dramatic traits; but he was disposed upon occasions to let the orchestra play with undue volume of tone.

YSAYE AT THE PHILHARMONIC

Concertos by Leclair and Bruch—An Overture by Master Korngold.

The programme of the Philharmonic Society's concert last evening was disturbed by a sudden change of mind on the part of Mr. Eugène Ysaye, who was the soloist of the concert. In place of a concerto by Corelli that had been announced, he decided to play a concerto in D minor by Leclair, with accompaniment of string orchestra and organ. This occupied the place that was originally appointed for Max Bruch's G minor concerto, and the modern work was put later. The conditions were somewhat unfavorable for a perfect performance of Leclair's concerto on account of disastrous differences of intonation of various factors of the performance. This was chiefly the fault of the organ, which was seriously at variance with the pitch of the orchestra; but even the solo player was not free from this disturbing influence. The concerto itself is a noble and dignified composition of the elder school of violin composition, and there were fine qualities in Mr. Ysaye's playing of it. There were more in his playing of Bruch's beautiful G minor concerto, and also more in the orchestral accompaniment of it.

There was an interesting novelty at the head of the programme, Erich Wolfgang Korngold's "Overture to a Play," Op. 4. It is the first orchestral composition by this Viennese lad of fifteen years that has been heard here. It is said to be the first composition that he has orchestrated himself; and if it be true that he orchestrated it himself, it is indeed a remarkable product of precocious talent that has been heard here. The music shows a greater spontaneity and naturalness, less restless seeking for effect, than either the trio or the pianoforte sonata by this lad that have been played in New York, also a greater ripeness in its content. It is, of course, of the extremest modern tendency in its substance and development, and especially in its harmonies, and it shows that even of he is "so engrossed in his own creative work that he does not care to hear the music of others," as the programme notes informed us, he has somehow got much more than an inkling of Richard Strauss's musical style and methods. The orchestration is very elaborate and brilliant. There are ambitious attempts at all sorts of novel effects. It is certainly an extraordinary technical achievement for a boy unaided. And the composition, as a whole, whatever dissent and doubt it may arouse, has a certain undeniable vitality that, even as a promise, should mean much.

The orchestra played it with the brilliancy it demands, and it played with even more brilliancy Richard Strauss's tone poem, "Don Juan," which Mr. Stransky conducted with great ardor and conviction. It was one of the most successful performances the Philharmonic Society has given under its new conductor. After this, making a concert of rather unusual length, came Beethoven's fifth symphony.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Mansfield Ogden of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., sailed on the Carpathia, and will arrive in Naples on Dec. 4. Mr. and Mrs. Ogden were on the steamer last Ajril at the time of the Titanic disaster.

The British Imperial Club will give a housewarming at 108 East Thirtieth Street on Saturday, Dec. 7, from 4 to 7.

Dr. James B. Clements and family of this city are at Briarcliff Lodge for a visit.

Prince Gennaro Caracciolo of Italy, who is at the Hotel Seville, is leaving for Washington to-morrow on his way to Chicago and the Pacific Coast. He plans also to visit China and Japan.

Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge of Boston are at the Belmont for several days.

Mrs. Edwin S. Marston is giving a dance at Sherry's to-night for her débutante daughter, Miss Edna Marston.

Mrs. James Mott Hartshorne will give a tea this afternoon at 40 East Sixty-fifth Street to introduce her daughter, Miss Eleanor Hartshorne.

Mrs. Joseph B. Hoyt of 37 East Sixty-eighth Street will introduce her daughter, Miss Gertrude Hoyt, at a reception this afternoon.

Mrs. Henry A. Todd of 824 West End Avenue will introduce her second daughter, Miss Clover Todd, at a tea this afternoon.

MISS GRACIE A DEBUTANTE.

Reception at Hotel Gotham for Daughter of Col. Archibald Gracie.

Col. and Mrs. Archibald Gracie of Washington, D. C., gave a reception yesterday afternoon in the ballroom at the Hotel Gotham to introduce their only daughter, Miss Edith Temple Gracie.

Mrs. Gracie wore a gown of blue and brocaded satin with ornaments of gold and pearls, and her débutante daughter was gowned in white charmeuse embellished with hand-painted roses and trimmings of crystal fringe.

They were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Delliva-Dutton, Mrs. Gracie's sister, who wore a costume of pale gray charmeuse with gold lace; Miss Mercedes Rafferty, daughter of Col. and Mrs. William Carroll Rafferty, who was in white charmeuse trimmed with bands of lace and pearl beads, and edged with white marabou feathers, and the Misses Priscilla Bull, Cornelia de L. Cammann, Susanne Warren, Caroline Wyeth, Anna Livingston Glover and Caroline De Lancey Ward of this city, and Mildred Fearn and Mildred Bacon of Washington, D. C., who were gowned alike in pale blue satin and chiffon.

The ballroom was decorated with American Beauty roses and palms. Miss Gracie received many flowers which she sent to the hospitals.

A buffet supper was given for the receiving party.

FEW FLUSHING DEBUTANTES.

Families' Domestic Troubles and New-Fangled Dances Among Causes.

On account of the scarcity of débutantes in Flushing, L. I., this season the Assembly dances, which have been held every Winter for the last thirty years, have been abandoned.

Several reasons have been assigned for the giving up of the dances. The girls who were to come out this season made their début last year ahead of time, and there are also several of the prominent families in mourning. Others have been involved in suits for separations or legal domestic controversies, and do not care to introduce their daughters at this time, and many do not approve of the new-fangled dances and are keeping the girls away from fashionable functions where the sensational form of dancing is allowed.

WEDS MISS SELIGMAN.

Harold Lehman Married to Daughter of Late S. J. Seligman at Delmonico's.

The wedding of Miss Cecile Seligman, daughter of the late Samuel J. Seligman, to Harold Lehman of this city, took place at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at Delmonico's. The Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman officiated.

The bride wore a gown of white satin with a court train of chiffon edged with point lace, which fell from the shoulders. Her veil of tulle was caught up with a chaplet of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and orange blossoms.

Mrs. Allan Lehman, who was Miss Evelyn Schiffer, and who was married on Monday, attended the bride as matron of honor. She wore a gown of orchid-colored satin embroidered with silver, topped with a picture hat of the same shades, and carried a bouquet of orchids. Miss Birdie Freedman was the maid of honor, and wore peachblow satin draped with chiffon, a large brown tulle hat, and carried a brown muff trimmed with a bouquet of yellow roses. The flower girls were the Misses Frances and Helen Lehman. They wore frocks of point de esprit and carried a Leghorn hat filled with pink roses.

Allan Lehman was his brother's best man, and the ushers included Irwin Buck, Nathan Straus, Jr., Frank Altschul, Howard Goodhart, Herbert Lehman, Samuel Cowen, Robert Lehman, Walter Herzfeld and Arthur Wiener.

Mr. and Mrs. Lehman will spend their honeymoon in California.

BLANCHE BATES MARRIES.

Actress Weds Police Commissioner Creel of Denver at Country Home.

Blanche Bates, the actress, was married yesterday at her country place at New Castle, N. Y., near Ossining, to George Creel, the Police Commissioner of Denver, Col. The ceremony was performed in the library of the old Ira Bailey farm by the Rev. A. N. Peterson, pastor of the Scarborough Presbyterian Church, and was witnessed by a gathering of literary and stage people from all parts of the country. After the ceremony the entire party went to New York for a supper at Delmonico's.

Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver and W. E. Lyons of Kansas City were the ushers, and the best man was Wylie Creel of St. Louis, a brother of the bridegroom. Mrs. Rupert Hughes was matron of honor.

During the week Miss Bates entertained a large house party of literary people at her home, and all of them were present at the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Creel will have their honeymoon in Southern waters, visiting Panama, Cuba, and a part of South America, and after their return they will make their home in Denver.

Mr. Creel met Miss Bates about three years ago when she was playing in New York. As a dramatic critic he reviewed the play. He then went West and took up reform work in Denver and was elected to the office of Police Commissioner there. Mrs. Creel expects to retire from the stage.

Miss Van Zile to Wed Dr. W. F. Scott.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Van Zile announce the engagement of their second daughter, Sally Van Zile, to Dr. Walter F. Scott of Birmingham, Ala. Dr. Scott is a son of Col. Walter S. Scott, U. S. A., retired, now of Los Angeles, Cal. He was graduated from the University of Virginia and Johns Hopkins, Baltimore.

Miss Van Zile's elder sister, Miss Mary Van Zile, married in April last the Rev. Gerald A. Cunningham, senior curate of St. George's Church. Miss Harriet Lee Van Zile is a younger sister, and Edward Bulkeley Van Zile is her brother.

Mr. and Mrs. Israel's Silver Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Israel of 600 West 159th Street celebrated their silver wedding anniversary last night at the Hotel Astor. Their marriage took place on Thanksgiving Day twenty-five years ago, and among the guests, numbering more than 150, were many of their friends and relatives from Baltimore, Md., where Mrs. Israel's family resides, and Washington, D. C. The dancing took place in the College Room, and later a supper was served in the Art Noveau Room.

Miss Alice Lichtenauer a Bride.

The marriage of Miss Alice Lichtenauer, youngest daughter of Mrs. Joseph M. Lichtenauer and the late Mr. Lichtenauer, and Isaac L. Mayer took place at noon yesterday at the home of the bride's mother, 58 West Fifty-second Street. The Rev. Dr. H. G. Enelow officiated. Breakfast was served after the ceremony. Owing to the bride and bridegroom's families being in mourning only members of the immediate families were present.

Miss Edith Josephi Engaged.

Mrs. I. A. Josephi of 321 Riverside Drive has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Edith Josephi, to John Dudley Phillips. A reception will be held on Sunday. No date has been set for the wedding.

DR. EDWARD CURTIS DEAD IN 75TH YEAR

Descendant of Harvard Presidents and Professor Emeritus of College of Physicians.

HIS CAREER AS SCIENTIST

Developed Embryo Art of Micro-Photography — Assisted in Performing Autopsy on Lincoln's Body.

Dr. Edward Curtis, who was a descendant of two Presidents of Harvard University, and whose father was at one time President of the Continental Bank, and a Vice-President of the Chamber of Commerce in this city, died at his home, 331 West Seventy-sixth street yesterday. Dr. Curtis was seventy-five years old, and had been for years one of the most widely known physicians in this country.

Dr. Curtis came of an old and distinguished New England family and was born in Providence, R. I., his father being the late George Curtis of that city and New York. The Harvard Presidents from who he was descended were Samuel and Joseph Willard, brothers. His mother was, prior to her marriage, Miss Julia Bowen Bridgham of Providence.

In 1859 Dr. Curtis was graduated with high honors from Harvard and the following year he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, but his medical education was interrupted by the breaking out of the civil war, and he left college to enter the Union Army as an officer on the staff of the Surgeon General.

From the army Dr. Curtis resumed his medical education at the University of Pennsylvania, from which institution he was graduated in 1864. In the same year he married Miss Augusta Stacey of Chester, Penn.

Despite his youth, it was Dr. Curtis who was selected in 1864 to assist Dr. Woodward of the Surgeon General's office in Washington in performing the autopsy on the body of President Lincoln.

After the war his enthusiasm for scientific research caused him to be appointed to the microscopical department of the Army Medical Museum, where he developed the embryo art of micro-photography, the results of his work gaining a worldwide celebrity for the microscopic department of the museum. He was also among the first to make astronomical photographs through the telescope, and was appointed in 1869 one of a party of scientists from the United States Naval Observatory to observe and report upon the total eclipse of the sun.

In 1870 Dr. Curtis resigned from the medical staff of the army and came to New York to start private practice. In 1873 he was appointed Professor of Materia Medica and Therapeutics at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University in New York. He resigned this position in 1886 on account of the pressure of other duties, and was appointed professor emeritus. He also served at various times as microscopist to the Manhattan Eye and Ear Infirmary, surgeon to the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, honorary microscopist to the New York Board of Health, President of the New York Opthalmological Society, and as one of the Board of Trustees of the New York Dispensary.

He served as medical director with the late Dr. Edward W. Lambert of the medical department of the Equitable Life Assurance Society from 1876 until 1904, when he retired on account of ill health.

Among his published writings are: "A Manual of General Medicinal Technology," "Nature and Health," various articles in Wood's "Reference Handbook of the Medical Sciences," and in Johnson's "Universal Cyclopaedia," besides other scientific and medical treatises for medical and scientific periodicals.

Dr. Curtis was a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Medical Society of the State of New York, the New York County Medical Society, the American Society for the Extension of University Teaching, the Phi Beta Kappa Alumni Association, the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, the New York Society of the Sons of the Revolution, and the Century Association.

He was a brother of the late George William Curtis and of Dr. John Green Curtis, now professor emeritus of Physiology in Columbia University. He is survived by his widow, two sons, George De Clyver and Bridgham, and three daughters, Mrs. Roger Whitman and the Misses Constance and Natalie Curtis.

TAFT AT BOUTELL WEDDING.

Sees Daughter of Minister to Switzerland Married to J. W. B. Ladd.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The marriage of Miss Alice Gates Boutell, only daughter of Henry Sherman Boutell of Chicago, the Minister to Switzerland, to John Wood Brooks Ladd of Boston took place at 2 o'clock this afternoon at St. John's Church, Lafayette Square, with President Taft and a fashionable company to witness the ceremony.

The ushers were Roger Sherman Boutell, brother of the bride; Ralph Rich, Bertram S. Vilas, Stuart Hayman, and Andrew Heath, all of Boston, and Ashe Stowe and Leon De Fremery of San Francisco.

A musical programme by Mr. Freman, organist, assisted by a harpist, entertained the guests for a half hour prior to the ceremony, at which the officiating clergyman was the Rev. Reginald Pearce of Massachusetts, a friend of the bride's family, assisted by the rector of the church, the Rev. Dr. Roland Cotton Smith.

The decoration of the church was in Autumn foliage ard various-hued chrysanthemums, following an original design of the young bride to express her conception of the Autumn and Thanksgiving season. The same color scheme was reproduced in the costumes of the bridal attendants, who were the young sister-in-law of the bride, Mrs. Roger Boutell, as matron of honor; Miss Constance Anderson of Ottawa, Canada, as maid of honor, and the following bridesmaids: Miss Amelia Ladd, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Bourne, cousin of the bride; Miss Catherine Holbrook, Miss Frances Webster, Miss Margaret Worthington, and Miss Nona Murray.

The bride, who was escorted by her father, entered the church to the strains of "Lohengrin," as played by harp and organ. Her gown was silver brocade embroidered in chrysanthemums, with which she wore a lace veil of unusual beauty, which fell to the end of her long train.

Hugh Boutell, the bride's younger brother, was best man.

The President entered the church just in advance of the bride, attended by his aid, Major Rhoades, the latter in full uniform.

Following the ceremony there was a reception and breakfast at the Highlands, where Mr. and Mrs. Boutell are passing several months. Mr. and Mrs. Ladd will reside in Boston.

Hippodrome Wedding Record Now 157

The second Hippodrome wedding within a week and the 157th since the playhouse was opened took place Wednesday evening, when Thomas Mansfield, who plays one of the soldiers in "Under Many Flags," and Emma Kettle of 547 West Forty-seventh Street, were married in the rectory of the Church of the Sacred Heart in West Fifty-first Street. The young couple has an apartment at 450 West Forty-seventh Street and moved in yesterday for their Thanksgiving dinner.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Charles Frohman received a cablegram yesterday from Haddon Chambers announcing that he would sail for New York on the Caronia to-morrow in company with Sir Herbert Tree. Mr. Chambers is bringing a new play that Mr. Frohman expects to produce this Winter.

Mme. Simone is making arrangements to have Louis N. Parker's comedy, "The Paper Chase," in which she is now appearing, translated into French in order that she may use it in Paris next Spring.

Norman McKinnell, who is coming to America under the direction of Winthrop Ames, will make his first appearance in New York in "Rutherford & Son," by Githa Sowerby. The play has been running in London for the last year, and it is the first playwriting effort of a girl not yet in her twenties.

The performance of "The Road to Arcady" in Brooklyn at the Bedford Branch of the Y. M. C. A. will be given on Friday evening of next week and not to-night. To-night at the Berkeley Theatre there will be a special performance of the piece, and Sydney Rosenfeld, President of the Federation of Theatre Clubs, will make an address. A new play will be put on by the Federation on Dec. 30.

$50,000,000 WATERWAYS BILL

Ransdell Will Ask at Least That for Rivers and Harbors.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—"We hope that Congress will make the most liberal annual appropriation for rivers and harbors this year that has ever been made," said Representative Joseph E. Ransdell, Senator-elect from Louisiana and President of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, after he reached the capital to-day. "The needs of the country are so pressing that I shall urge that the appropriations shall not be less than $50,000,000—and we hope to have the rivers and harbors bill passed by the Christmas holidays."

That announcement by Mr. Ransdell is expected to bring out further strong support for a big appropriation bill this year. The Rivers and Harbors Congress is to meet here next week, coincident with the opening of Congress. Backed by favorable planks in the Democratic and Republican platforms, an effort will be made to induce the Democratic House to be unusually liberal with appropriations for public works.

Committee staffs were working in the capital to-day on the preliminary drafts of the rivers and harbors and the public buildings appropriation bills. Representative Sheppard of Texas, Senator-elect, Chairman of the House Committee on Public Buildings, said his omnibus measure probably would be completed in the House in January, carrying more than $20,000,000, and that the Senate was likely to pass it with several millions added. His committee will meet late next week.

The House Committee on Rivers and Harbors probably will meet Saturday. The rivers and harbors bills aggregated $41,000,000 in 1910, $24,000,000 in 1911, and $31,000,000 last year. It was suggested by several Representatives to-day that the committee strike an average of $32,000,000 for this year.

The public buildings measure may carry $750,000 for an amphitheatre dedicated to the soldier dead in the National cemetery in Arlington, across the Potomac River from Washington, and for definite plans for a National hall of archives here. More than 750 bills are pending for individual public buildings. The general rule of the House is to allow to each member only one building. Pressure is being brought for $850,000 for a new public building in this city for the Interstate Commerce Commission, and for specific authority for the private construction of a subway and maintenance of a railroad under the Post Office in New York.

GOVERNMENT WANTS NAMES.

Counsel In Harvester Suit In Wrangle Over Sales Committee Report.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Edwin P. Grosvenor, special assistant to the Attorney General in the Government's inquiry into the formation and methods of doing business of the International Harvester Company, and Edgar A. Bancroft, representing the company, entered into a heated argument during the session to-day over the reasons for delay in producing the reports of the Sales Committee.

The question of courtesy between counsel was brought up when Mr. Grosvenor demanded the name of the filing clerk and declined to accept Mr. Bancroft's statement explaining a cause for delay.

Mr. Bancroft said he had endeavored to make a complete file of the sales reports, but was unable to find two sets, and Mr. Grosvenor said the statement would not be accepted as proof of the facts alleged.

E. N. Wood, Secretary of the company, was then placed on the stand and asked if the papers were produced from the company's files. The witness could not remember either the removal of the papers from the company's offices or the name of the filing clerk.

On request of counsel, who pleaded Thanksgiving engagements, the hearing was adjourned until to-morrow.

CHILDREN'S THEATRE READY.

Liebler Company's Playhouse on Roof of the Century Will Seat 800.

The Liebler Company yesterday described the children's theatre on the roof of the Century that is soon to be opened. The establishment of this playhouse exclusively for the entertainment of children is the result of a plan developed by W. K. Vanderbilt and George C. Tyler.

The theatre will have a seating capacity of 800. There is no balcony, but twelve boxes are arranged at the rear of the auditorium. The roof is arched and groined, the stage is low, and the seats are somewhat lower than those of the ordinary theatre. The frame of the proscenium is decorated with a frieze, an adaptation of Italian sixteenth century art, and modeled by Philip Martiny. The base of the frieze is supported by bits of animal life illustrative of the fables of Aesop and La Fentaine.

The open air character of the theatre is obtained by the penetration of the arches with windows and three large French glass double doors that open upon the terraced esplanade overlooking Central Park. The stage has a double equipment of old style grooves with wings and flats, and the modern system of counterbalances for drops. It measures 100 feet between the walls. The electrical equipment is unusually elaborate. V. Hugo Koehler is the architect.

Preparations for the first production are under way under the direction of Hugh Ford, and the name of the play and the personnel of the company will be announced soon.

Ex-State Senator John G. W. Havens.

Special to The New York Times.

POINT PLEASANT, N. J., Nov. 28.—John G. W. Havens, for nearly thirty-seven years Superintendent of the Life Saving Service for the New Jersey coast, and President of the Ocean County National Bank, died of apoplexy this morning at his home in Arnold Avenue, in his 80th year. He was born in Ocean County, which he represented in the State Senate from 1872 to 1874. Mr. Havens was appointed a Revenue Officer by Abraham Lincoln. He is survived by his wife, a daughter, and son.

EX-SENATOR GORDON DEAD.

Aged Mississippian Is Best Known for His Famous "Good Will" Speech.

OKOLONA, Miss., Nov. 28.—Ex-United States Senator James Gordon, aged 79, died here early to-day from the infirmities of old age. Senator Gordon was born in Monroe County, Miss., in December, 1833, and until a few months before his death had been in excellent health. He fought throughout the civil war as a Captain in the Confederate Army.

Ex-Senator Gordon is best remembered for his famous "good will" speech that he delivered in the Senate on Feb. 24, 1910, a speech that Senator Depew declared was the "most remarkable farewell address" ever delivered in the history of the Senate. It was a speech in which the aged Mississippian made a plea for a unity of the sections, and in which he urged that his hearers join him in an effort to obliterate Mason and Dixon's line.

The speech did not last more than fifteen minutes, and was a touching, humorous effort that kept the Senate keyed up, and when it was over the Senators of both parties rushed forward to congratulate, while President Taft sent word to him expressing his own appreciation of the sentiments he had expressed. Senator Gordon had referred to the President as "a big, fine young man."

"I am an old Confederate," said Senator Gorden, "and you, perhaps, an old Union soldier. We were conquered and took the oath of allegiance, and I can raise my hand and say that I have never violated that oath and I have never known an old Confederate who did."

Col. Gordon was a poet as well as a statesman, and one of his last acts in Washington was to present an autographed copy of his poems to the late Vice President Sherman. Another copy went to President Taft.

Before the war Col. Gordon was a millionaire, but he was a poor man when he came to Washington. He said that he had lost some of his money and the rest he had spent on his friends, "just as any gentleman should."

He was a gallant old soldier and personally captured the late Gen. Shafter when that officer was a young Captain in the Army of Tennessee.

Only this week there appeared in The Evening Post a letter from Col. Gordon defending the memory of the late Senator Heyburn of Idaho. Senator Heyburn delivered many bitter attacks on the South in the Senate, and a number of the Southern newspapers have referred to these attacks since his death a few weeks ago. The letter was characteristic of Senator Gordon. In that letter Col. Gordon, among other things, said:

"Is it not better to be charitable to the dead who can no longer defend their character? I prefer to remember the man who had the manliness to come forward and offer me his hand as a token of friendship after I had replied in the way that cut him deepest to his tirade of abuse against the Confederacy, and to his imputation on the character of our best beloved chief, Gen. Robert E. Lee.

"I would," added Col. Gordon, "in a spirit of love for frail humanity plant a flower on Senator Heyburn's grave that should fill the atmosphere with fragrance of sweetest love, that should dispel every odor of hate from his memory."

COL. D. M. RANSDELL DIES.

Sergeant at Arms of Senate Was Close Friend of Ex-President Harrison.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Col. Daniel Moore Ransdell, Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate, who died in a hospital here to-day from heart disease following an operation, was one of the best known men in Republican politics and in National official life. He was a close associate and political adviser of Benjamin Harrison in Indiana, and when Gen. Harrison became President he appointed Col. Ransdell United States Marshal for the District of Columbia, an office that in those days carried with it the duties of Chamberlain of the White House. No man was as close to Gen. Harrison as Col. Ransdell with the possible exception of Lieut. Col. E. W. Halford of the army, who was secretary to the President in his administration.

Col. Ransdell was a soldier in Gen. Harrison's civil war regiment, the Seventieth Indiana, and he lost his right arm at Resaca while fighting under Harrison's command. The friendship between the two men grew closer in Indianapolis after the war, and it became a saying that Gen. Harrison would not move unless Col. Ransdell was at his elbow.

When President Harrison and Secretary of the Interior Noble had their quarrel with "Corporal" James Tanner, the then Commissioner of Pensions, the effort of the Administration to get Corp. Tanner to resign was futile until President Harrison directed Col. Ransdell to try his hand. "And don't you come back until you bring his resignation" the President is reported to have said. Col. Ransdell got the resignation about 2 o'clock the next morning.

In 1900—six years after he had ceased to be Marshal for the District of Columbia, Col. Ransdell was elected Sergeant-at-Arms of the United States Senate.

Col. Ransdell was born in Indiana in June, 1842. His widow was Miss Mary Cathcart of Indianapolis and his children are Mrs. R. A. Warner, wife of a surgeon in the navy; Miss Charlotte Ransdell, William J. Ransdell of Washington, Surgeon Robert C. Ransdell of the navy, and Paymaster H. C. Ransdell of the navy.

President Taft sent Mrs. Ransdell this message:

"I send you my deep sympathy in your great sorrow. Col. Ransdell and I were friends for a great many years. He was a man of the highest loyalty and the deepest convictions and a good citizen, and worthy public servant. I am greatly distressed at his death."

REV. DR. J. N. BLANCHARD.

Archdeacon of Newark Diocese Succumbs in Post-Graduate Hospital.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph Nathaniel Blanchard, rector of the Grace Episcopal Church of Madison, N. J., and Archdeacon of the Newark Diocese, died late on Wednesday night in the Post-Graduate Hospital.

Dr. Blanchard was born in Albany, N. Y., 62 years ago. He was a graduate of Amherst College and the Berkley Divinity School of Middletown, Conn. His first charge was as rector of St. James's Church in Fordham. He remained there five years, and was called to St. John's Church, Detroit. Five years later he went to St. James's Church, Philadelphia. After ten years' service there he went to Trinity Church, Boston, and remained as rector of that church two years, leaving it to go to Madison. He had served there six years.

Dr. Blanchard's body was taken to Madison yesterday afternoon. He will be buried to-morrow in Evergreen Cemetery, Morristown. The burial service will be read by Bishop Edwin S. Lines of the Newark Diocese.

EX-SENATOR J. P. JONES DIES.

Nevada Statesman and Free Silver Advocate Succumbs at 83.

John Percival Jones, for thirty years a member of the United States Senate from Nevada, who died Wednesday night at Los Angeles, Cal., had retired from the Senate in 1903, and spent his last years in Southern California, living chiefly at Santa Monica and Los Angeles.

Ex-Senator Jones was born in England in 1829, and came to this country while an infant. After going to school at Cleveland, Ohio, he went to California during the excitement following the discovery of gold, and engaged in mining. He was a member of the California Senate from 1863 to 1867, leaving at the end of his term for Nevada, where he became an extensive mine owner. He was first elected to the United States Senate in 1873, and served five successive terms.

He was one of the leading advocates of free silver when that doctrine was at its height, and quit the Republican Party in 1896 because of the attitude of the St. Louis Convention on the silver issue. Later he returned to Republican ranks.

Dr. John D. McGill.

Dr. J. D. McGill died yesterday at home, 16 Gifford Avenue, Jersey City, of Bright's disease, aged 65. He was President of the Hudson County National Bank, Jersey City. Dr. McGill had served on many Grand Juries and was foreman of the elisor-drawn Grand Jury appointed by Supreme Court Justice Swayze in the Fall of 1911 that indicted Stephen M. Egan, County Collector of Hudson County, and others. Dr. McGill was appointed to the Jersey City Police Board by the late Edward M. Hoos, former Mayor of Jersey City, in 1897, and was made President of the board. He was surgeon to the Pennsylvania Railroad. Dr. McGill is survived by a son. He was a brother of the late Alexander T. McGill, former Chancellor of New Jersey.

Col. Francis N. Mann, Jr.

TROY, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Col. Francis N. Mann, Jr., died this morning at his home in this city. Mr. Mann was born in Troy Aug. 2, 1849. He was graduated from Yale in 1870 and from the Albany Law School in 1872. In 1879 he was elected to the Assembly on the Republican ticket, and from 1880 to 1883 was on the staff of Gov. Cornell as aid de camp. In 1878 he was appointed Quartermaster with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, and was later promoted to Judge Advocate with the rank of Colonel. In 1895 Col. Mann was appointed one of the managers of the State Hospital at Poughkeepsie. He also served as Postmaster in this city from 1890 to 1895.

Obituary Notes.

Louis F. Diehl, 38 years old, a stenographer, of Fort Schuyler, N. Y., died suddenly yesterday in the Hotel Empire, Broadway and Sixty-third Street, where he had been removed following an attack of heart disease in the Twelfth Regiment Armory on Wednesday night. Mr. Diehl was a member of the Wyoming Lodge, Ivy Chapter, New York Commandery, Mystic Shrine, Azim Grotto.

CHARLES C. BARRETT of Syracuse, dropped dead in Rochester on Wednesday while he was marching in a parade as members of the Keder Khan Grotto of Syracuse, and formerly assistant Superintendent of Public Works in charge of the Western division of the Erie Canal.

Dr. LOUIS SCHAFER, President of the Schafer Alkaloid Works of Maywood, N. J., died at his home, 150th Street and St. Nicholas Place, on Tuesday night. He was born in Stuttgart, Germany, and came to this country after taking courses in chemistry at several European Universities.

FRANK G. SMITH, 57 years old, died yesterday at the Lafayette General Hospital, Buffalo, N. Y. He was familiarly known as "Judge" Smith, and had acted as a starter on nearly every racetrack in the United States and Canada. For many years he owned large stables and was noted as a trainer and breeder. He was born in Orchard Park, N. Y., in 1855.

GEORGE W. JOHNSON, one of the early real estate developers in the Borough Park section of Brooklyn, was found dead Wednesday morning in the Subway station at Lexington Avenue and 116th Street. He was 70 years old and died of heart disease. Mr. Johnson lived at 1,445 Fifty-sixth Street.

JOHN R. LARKIN, associated for many years with The Scientific American, died Wednesday at his home, 160 Windsor Place, Brooklyn. He was 60 years old and left three children.

WILLIAM KING, a retired merchant, died yesterday at his home, 692 Fourteenth Street, Flatbush. He left five children.

Mrs. SALLIE A. LITCHFIELD, wife of Percy Litchfield, President of the Litchfield Construction Company, died yesterday at her home, 154 West Eighty-seventh Street. She was a daughter of Mrs. Lewis Boudinot Atterbury.

Responsibility

To the business man of integrity, the professional man of honor, or the conscientious executor or trustee, the word responsibility has a significance of large importance. It also conveys a peculiarly personal thought to those having others dependent upon them, and for whose welfare they are anxious to provide.

One of the best means by which to provide for those dependent upon you is to make it a habit to purchase sound investment bonds. The result will be strong security for your principal and a return to yield approximately

JUDGES' AID ASKED IN FIGHTING SHARKS

Up-State Courts Told of Battle to Protect Workers from Money Lenders.

CITY TAKES THE INITIATIVE

Number of Public Employes in Trouble Causes a Campaign Against Excessive Costs.

Recent investigations made by city officials by order of Mayor Gaynor resulted in the discovery that more than $20,000 of claims against city employes in garnishee execution proceedings had been filed with the city paymaster. Every one of these claims included costs of $10 or more, which the Judges in the judicial districts of the city refused to allow. Because of these refusals the loan sharks presented their cases to Justices of the Supreme Court in other counties of the State, journeying as far north as Hamilton County and as far west as Monroe, where the methods of the loan sharks were not so well known.

In the papers of each case was a clause permitting the charge of extortionate costs, and it was by this authority that the sharks' lawyers proceeded. The courts here denied to sanction such costs, and reduced them to one-third the amount demanded and sometimes less.

The matter was submitted to Corporation Counsel Watson, who caused a special search of the records to be made. The result astonished him. The victims ranged from those holding places of great responsibility to men holding the least remunerative places.

Watson has been sending to up-State Judges and persons attached to the courts in the distant departments a record of twenty-two cases that were tried here and the judgments in each case. His purpose is to induce the Judges all over the State to co-operate with the Judges here to protect victims of the sharks. The opinion in all these cases was that the provision for $10 costs was unwarranted.

Full Schedule of Sharks' Procedure.

Watson is anxious that the courts all over the State shall know just what the situation is. One of the attachés of his office who made a study of the matter reported that a city employe to get a loan from a shark was required usually to sign a number of papers. These papers included undated notes, indorsed by another employe; two or three blank assignment forms, a power of attorney to fill in the blank spaces in the assignments, a confession of judgment for the amount of the loan, and sometimes a general power of attorney to sign for and to collect all wages due. It was said that in most of the cases the borrowers did not know what they were signing.

When surprise was expressed that the city permitted employes to anticipate their wages in this fashion this explanation was given:

"When a city employe goes to a shark to get money he goes secretly. The transactions are not known by the bigger officials and of course are not matters of record in the Finance Department."

From the great number of city employes found to be in the power of the loan sharks one hundred specimen cases were selected as showing a fair average outline of conditions. It was said that all these men were clerks whose salaries ranged from $900 to one man holding a conspicuous place at a salary of $2,000.

The one hundred men taken from the list were found to be paying interest at the rate of from 50 to 400 per cent. a year. With the report was a list of nineteen loan sharks and the rate of interest demanded by them. The range of one firm ran from 133 1-3 per cent. to 164. Other rates ran from 200 per cent. to 223. 133 1-3 to 400, 164 to 229, and from 141 to 171.

It was said that some of the money lenders refused to accept part payments and insisted upon a renewal of the loan with attendant costs. It was said that in some cases confessions of judgments were filed against men who had paid four-fifths of the orignal loan in renewals. Some sample cases were furnished from a report prepared some months ago.

Figures in Individual Cases.

A fireman, who had obtained $47.50 and returned $40 in renewals was garnisheed for $77, which, with fees, amounted to $96.49. In the end he paid $136.49 for the loan of $47.50.

A $1,200 clerk borrowed $30 three years before the report was made and incurred an obligation of $38. After he had paid $96 in renewals he was told that he owed $51.

Another clerk borrowed $150. At the end of two years he had paid back over $200 and still owed $90.

An explanation of the way the loan sharks work was prepared and sent to Justices everywhere in the State. It reads in part:

When executions against the salaries of city employes are filed with the City Paymaster they are sent to the Law Department for advice as to their regularity. The affidavit and execution in each case are examined, and if in proper form are certified back to the Controller for payment. Most of these judgments are obtained upon confessions.

In many of the actions in the Supreme Court of this county, up to the Spring of 1911, the Clerk of the county refused to tax $15 confession costs. The order in each case asked for payment to the plaintiff of $10 costs.

Many judgments of confession are being entered now in counties up the State for the reason that $10 costs are entered up in the judgments. The real costs in the cases range from only $1 to $7.

The up-State Justices have been assured in the briefs and letters sent that there is no law compelling payment of more than actual costs.

But more than any other procedure the officials of this city want the up-State Justices to refuse to grant applications in these cases and to send them back to the counties where they belong. Reports held by the city authorities contain information how the sharks work in the Legislature to obtain the passage of laws enabling them to do business. It is also said the sharks have some plan of appealing to the coming session of the Legislature for a law that shall leave them free to operate as they did before the District Attorney's office began attacking them.

WOULD SIFT STEEL STRIKE.

Workmen Ask Congress to Look Into Anti-Union Conditions.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 28.—Congress will be asked to order an investigation of the United States Steel Corporation mill in this region. The men on strike in Homestead and Duquesne to-day authorized J. D. Pierce of Washington, a member of the Legislation Committee of the Federation of Labor, to have Samuel Gompers, President, ask the Stanley Investigating Committee to come to Pittsburgh next week. The purpose is to have the Stanley Committee ascertain the conditions that have kept organized labor out of the Carnegie mills since the great strike riots of 1892.

The committee is to meet next week. Pierce, for the solution of the difficulty, looks to Judge Gary and J. P. Morgan. He says those men can bring about an immediate settlement of the strike that has thrown 16,000 men out of work and is causing an enormous loss each day. In an interview, Pierce said:

"Both Judge Gary and J. P. Morgan have declared under oath that they are willing the men should be organized. They say they do not prevent the formation of organizations in the mills. They now have a chance to make good on those assertions."

No violence has marked the strike. Strikebreakers were taken into the Homestead plant early to-day under police escort. No attempt was made to molest them. Guards employed by the company are patrolling the streets in the mill district.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Rabbit Skins and Parchment Paper Lower—Red Melon Seed Tax Stands.

The Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday sustained a protest by Dublin, Morris & Kornbluth regarding white rabbit skins. They were assessed at a high rate of duty under the tariff provision for furs dressed. The importers asked 20 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 489. Judge McClelland decided.

The Board also reversed the Collectors on supercalendered imitation parchment and grease-proof paper returned at 4½ cents a pound under the present tariff act. It was claimed that the paper was dutiable under Paragraph 411, which provides for parchment papers. The Board ruled that the duty should be 2 cents a pound and 10 per cent. ad valorem. The importers included Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher Co., Pritchard, Verkrusen & Co., L. De Jonge & Co., the Japan Paper Company, and O. M. Steinman.

Red melon seeds, imported by the Sun Heng Company, were returned for duty under Paragraph 266 as seeds not specially provided for. Claims for lower duty were overruled.

SILK DEMAND CONTINUES.

Good Business Still Being Booked in Popular Weaves—Ribbons Uneven.

Notwithstanding the fact that this is the "off" season in the local silk market, there is still a fair business passing in the fabrics that have been well up in the popular demand all Fall. Charmeuse, particularly the better grades, is getting a good call, and brocades continue active. There is little doubt of the position of these fabrics for some time to come, and, because of the scarcity of jacquard looms in this country and a consequent limited production, prices quoted on them are well maintained. Crêpes, especially crêpes de chine, are about the most wanted fabrics at the moment, and advances on them ranging from 5 to 10 per cent. are reported in various quarters of the market.

The return of the vogue for narrow ribbons is expected to work the salvation of the ribbon trade this Spring. It is contended that they will match well with the hats to be worn, and will, consequently, receive a better call from the millinery trade than for some time. There is a good business now being done in holiday ribbons, but the general demand is not over active.

RICE SCARCE THIS YEAR.

Imported and Domestic Stocks Light —Growers Control Latter Supply.

Rice is scarce. Arrivals have been small from all importing points this year, and the quantity produced in this country has ranged below the average. Some of the mills in the South are well supplied, but they are jealous of their holdings, and in most instances refuse to consider proposals to dispose of them excepting at full outside figures. Apparently buyers are not yet quite ready to pay that range.

The Southern Rice Growers' Association has developed unexpected power, and so far has succeeded in retaining control of the bulk of the stock, compelling all but the most forehanded mills to pay the price or go without. Few have come to terms as yet, but as the demand increases it is quite probable that advanced quotations will prevail. Both Japan and Honduras grades are scarce, and buyers are compelled to fall back on domestic stocks. New York dealers have comparatively little in hand, and are forced to hunt sometimes for stock sufficient to fill their orders.

WALL PAPER SALES KEEP UP.

Manufacturers Getting Fairly Good Business from the Road.

Retail business in wall paper is keeping up a great deal longer this year than is usually the case, doubtless because of the continuance of mild weather. The Fall season for the manufacturers is therefore much longer than it has been for a number of years, and orders, which are usually scarce at this time of the year, continue to come in. The out-of-town trade is fairly active in this respect. Stock houses throughout the country are putting off their buying until after the holidays, and in most cases the country stores having wall paper departments are putting all their energies to pushing other lines. The prospects for business on stock goods is excellent.

The factories are still behind in their deliveries, and are running night and day to meet the demands made on them. Road orders are apparently satisfactory, though they have fallen off somewhat with the approach of the holiday season in retail circles.

FURNITURE ORDERS LIGHTER.

Wholesalers Not Concerned, However —Prices Are Tending Upward.

A rather sharp decline in the retail demand was reflected in the business done in the local furniture trade in the last week, but little was thought of it, apparently. The holiday call will begin in earnest shortly, and this will doubtless mean additional business for the manufacturers after the turn of the year. In many instances the factories are behind with their deliveries, but are working to full capacity to catch up.

Recent price advances have been well sustained, and there is said to be a strong possibility of higher levels shortly, in sympathy with the increased cost of lumber, leather, and other raw materials. Retail stocks are not heavy from all accounts, and this condition is more or less true of the stocks held by producers. Consequently, buyers looking for special lots and jobs are not finding much to select from. Little change in the general situation is looked for by sellers until the January sales open.

CHECK ON RAILROAD PASSES.

Roads Obeying Order to Record All Applications to Safeguard Issue.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—In accordance with a rule of the Interstate Commerce Commission effective on Jan. 1 next, which provides that a record of all passes issued must be kept, large forces of clerks employed by the railroads are now engaged in investigating all applicants for free transportation so that a report may be furnished as to whether the person seeking the pass is entitled to it.

Thousands of annual passes are being prepared throughout the country by the railroads for distribution next month. A record of each one must be in readiness so that investigators for the Commission could readily obtain any information they desire concerning the free transportation.

Railroads are permitted to issue passes to officials, employes and dependent members of their families. As many as 25,000 annual passes have been prepared by railroads having their general offices here, while trip passes in the course of the year will be much more numerous.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

The general trade of the Society Islands with the United States for 1911 showed an increase of 31 per cent. over 1910, the gain in imports being 34 per cent., and in exports 28 per cent. To insure this favorable showing steps must be taken to improve the transportation facilities between the Port of Tahiti and the United States.

According to the British Board of Trade Journal of Oct. 24, 1912, the Government of Persia has decided to impose an export duty of 3 per cent. ad valorem during the next six months and 6 per cent. ad valorem during the succeeding six months on all carpets dyed with aniline colors.

The tax rate on all real and personal property in the Territory of Hawaii will be on $168,000,000 assessment, an increase of $18,000,000 over last year. The tax rate will be lowered proportionately.

A commission of engineers appointed by the Department of Fomento will leave shortly for the State of Coahuila, Mexico, to mark the limits of National lands in that State. It is believed that more than 1,700,000 acres belong to the Government in Coahuila. The Government proposes to divide all of this land among the small farmers of that State.

PREPARES FOR XMAS MAIL.

Post Office Already Issues Order to Expedite Delivery During Holiday.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The Post Office is already preparing for the Christmas rush by notifying Postmasters to-day that from Dec. 20 to Jan. 3 the regulations requiring the "backstamping" of mail matter would be suspended to expedite the delivery of mail during the holiday season.

Special delivery and registered mail only will be stamped with the time of receipt during the period, the ordinary mail going through the offices by "short cuts."

GEORGIA BUILDING ROADS.

Governor-Elect Slaton Says His State Is Foremost in That Work.

Governor-elect John M. Slaton of Georgia is at the Waldorf taking a little vacation before settling down in his job Slaton was Governor of Georgia once before, but it was an interim term. As President of the State Senate he had to step in when Hoke Smith got out of the executive chair and put on a Senatorial toga, but he only stayed three months until a new Governor had been elected. The Georgians liked Slaton on the job so well that in the recent election they gave him one of the biggest majorities a gubernatorial candidate ever received in the State.

Slaton was a member of the State Legislature for seventeen years. In that time he served four years as speaker of the lower branch and four as President of the Senate. He says there are some things about Georgia that folks up here don't seem to realize. First, that Georgia is the biggest State on this side of the Mississippi River, which Slaton says he has looked up and can verify. Then, again, he says Georgia is doing more in the way of building good roads than any other State in the Union except New York. About the only thing Georgia is not doing well in, according to Slaton, is cotton.

"We are not raising so much as usual this year," he said, "but then," he added, "we are developing on other lines. The corn clubs, which have only been going since 1909, have increased the production of corn enough to give every man, woman and child in the State a peck of meal. Georgia is the fourth State in the Union in the value of its agricultural products. We have practically the smallest debt of any State, and our State-owned Western Atlantic Railroad is worth three times the amount of our public debt.

"The Prohibition question in Georgia," said Slaton, "is now simply a question of enforcement of the law. The law is as strong as it can be under the constitution, but its enforcement depends upon sentiment. You can enforce any law if the sentiment of the community is behind it. The law allows what are called 'locker clubs' for those who drink, but these are generally restricted to the larger cities."

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES.

The Daily Consular and Trade Report notes the following foreign trade opportunities. Further information regarding them may be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Manufactures, care of the Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C., giving the number of the item referred to:

9,960. COCOANUTS.—An American Consular officer at a Mediterranean port writes that a resident of his district is desirous of obtaining the agency of a first-class exporter of Porto Rican cocoanuts. Correspondence may be in English.

9,961. MONTANA LARCH.—One of the commercial agents of the Department of Commerce and Labor has forwarded the name of a business firm in the United Kingdom that would be glad to receive quotations on Montana larch cut to the following dimensions: 1¼ by 7 and 8 inches, 2½ by 7 inches, 3 by 7 inches, 3 by 9 inches, 3 by 11 inches, 15 to 30 feet.

9,962. LUMBER OF VARIOUS KINDS.—A foreign business firm has informed one of the commercial agents of the Department of Commerce and Labor that it desires prices on sap gum 1 inch and up, red gum 1 inch and up, 1¼ by 3 inch hard maple flooring strips, parquetry flooring, Montana larch, Pacific Coast white and sugar pine, and yellow poplar.

9,963. GAS-BURNING APPLIANCES.—An American Consul reports that the distributors of natural gas in his Consular district are planning to extend their mains early in the Spring of 1913 to several adjoining cities. He has forwarded a list of dealers in stoves, ranges, and plumbing supplies who will probably deal in gas-burning appliances. The Consul adds that the use of natural gas is new to the people of that region, that local manufacturers are giving the matter their careful attention, and that it would be well for American manufacturers of gas-burning appliances to send agents to that field as soon as possible.

9,964. SMALL METAL FLAGS.—Bids are requested by an association in a European country for from 50,000 to 100,000 small metal replicas of a certain flag, to be delivered in New York or Chicago. The flag is ⅝ by ½ inch, with staff 9-16 inch long, and has a small straight pin attached to it about 1⅝ inches long. Sample flags, forwarded by an American Consulate, can be obtained from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. The time required for filling the order should be stated in submitting bids, which may be in English, and should be addressed to a person named in the report.

9,965. REFRIGERATOR MACHINERY.—An American Consular officer has forwarded a copy of correspondence held by him with municipal officials in his district concerning the contract for a large order of refrigerator machinery for a new city meat market. He has also forwarded a copy of an article appearing in a local paper in reference to the purchase of American machinery for this purpose. Copy of the complete report will be sent to interested American manufacturers of refrigerating machinery.

9,966. PUMPS, MOTORS, MACHINERY, RESERVOIRS, &c.—Supplementing previous reports in regard to the construction of a pipe line from the Roumanian petroleum district to the Black Sea, the American minister at Bucharest writes that specifications are now being prepared and that bids will probably be invited at an early date for the furnishing of the pumps, motors, machinery, reservoirs, &c., which will be required for the pumping stations.

9,967. PLAIN GRINDER.—One of the commercial agents of the Department of Commerce and Labor reports that the manager of a machine tool firm in Australasia recently stated that the company will soon be in the market for a plain grinder about 12 by 60 by 72 inches.

9,968. HOSPITAL FURNISHINGS.—A hospital in a foreign country desires bids, terms, catalogues, plans, prices, &c., for the complete furnishing of five large, newly constructed hospital pavilions of a new hospital, and would gladly welcome offers from American firms in a position to supply the needed materials. An American Consular officer urges firms in the United States that are interested to submit the desired information as quickly as possible. The persons in charge of the purchase of the necessary equipment request that this matter be considered at once on account of the fact that orders for the complete furnishing of these buildings will soon be placed, and extreme expedition and haste are particularly desired. Copy of the complete report, giving detailed descriptions of the furnishings, &c., will be sent to interested firms by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

9,978. PINE, FIR, AND LARCH LUMBER.—One of the commercial agents of the Department of Commerce and Labor has forwarded the names of three firms in the United Kingdom that desire quotations on Pacific Coast white pine, sugar pine, Oregon fir and Montana larch.

9,979. MACHINERY FOR MAKING STEEL BALLS.—The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce is in receipt of a communication from an American manufacturing company stating that he has received an inquiry from a foreign scientific institute for information in regard to machinery for manufacturing steel balls. This institute intends to install a factory making steel balls, which would produce 100,000 to 150,000 balls per day, and desires an estimate of the complete installation. Correspondence should be sent direct to the institute.

9,980. LUMBER AND PAVING BLOCK MACHINE.—A report from one of the commercial agents of the Department of Commerce and Labor states that a firm in the United Kingdom desires quotations on Montana larch, and also prices and other particulars from American manufacturers of a good paving block machine.

9,981. PORTABLE BUILDINGS.—An American Consular officer in a Mediterranean country reports that he has been informed by a local business firm that it desires to be placed in communication with American manufacturers and exporters of portable buildings, ready-built sectional houses, portable garages, and bungalows, with a view to representing such firms as agent or of importing direct. Correspondence may be in English, and references will be furnished.

9,982. LAUNDRY JOURNALS.—A report from an American Consular officer in the Far East states that a resident of his district desires to secure the names of American publishers of laundry journals, preferably those in the Southern States.

9,983. LARCH, CYPRESS, HICKORY, AND ASH LUMBER.—A commercial agent of the Department of Commerce and Labor reports that a foreign business firm desires quotations on Montana larch, Louisiana red cypress, and hickory lumber; also on round ash logs.

BOURSES OF EUROPE

General Improvement in London on Better European Outlook—Paris and Berlin Prices Firm.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 29.—The Times says in its City article to-day:

"There was a strong demand for money yesterday. Every endeavor is being made to avoid borrowing from the Bank of England, which nevertheless did a moderately large business in loans, besides taking a few short bills.

"Discount businsss was more or less in abeyance, attention being given to the search for money. Bills were rarely offered. Most houses quoted rather high terms when applied to, but rates were hardly tested.

"The withdrawal of sovereigns for Brazil amounted to £420,000.

"The stock markets passed a quiet day, undisturbed by any rumors of a disquieting character. Members were engaged with the final adjustment of the account, yesterday being pay day, and business was extremely quiet. The general tone of the markets was cheerful, and at the close a fair number of advances in prices were recorded. In most cases the rises were slight, as there was a disposition to secure profits on any appreciable advance. France and Germany operators were small buyers of their specialties.

"The American market was quite steady in the absence of Wall Street advices.

"Investment brokers reported a fair demand for gilt-edged securities, and the floating supplies of stock appeared to be small."

PARIS, Nov. 28.—Prices were firm on the Bourse to-day.

Three per cent. rentes 89 francs 87½ centimes for the account.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—Trading was quiet and prices were steady on the Boerse to-day.

WAISTMAKERS MAY STRIKE.

Women's Union Calls Meetings to Discuss the Situation.

The Ladies' Waist and Dressmakers' Union, which was to have called a general strike last year, has called mass meetings for Monday evening in several halls, at which the advisability of ordering a general walk-out will be discussed. There are about 30,000 waist and dressmakers in this branch of the trade in this city and 95 per cent. of them are women.

The strike two years ago was declared prematurely, a series of mass meetings, which were called for the purpose of organization, being stampeded into declaring for a strike. The strike, which went into effect next day, found the union unprepared and was not a success. The strike movement last year was abandoned for the time because so many of the workers were idle that, according to the union, there were too many risks to be taken.

REORGANIZATION OF
United States Motor Co.
ALDEN-SAMPSON MANUFACTURING COMPANY
BRUSH RUNABOUT COMPANY
COLUMBIA MOTOR CAR COMPANY
DAYTON MOTOR CAR COMPANY AND
MAXWELL-BRISCOE MOTOR COMPANY

The Committee acting under the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization, dated October 10, 1912, announces that over 90% of the indebtedness of the companies above mentioned has been deposited subject to the Plan. In order to enable the creditors whose claims have not yet been deposited to participate in the benefits of the Plan, the Committee has determined to accept the deposit of additional debentures, notes and claims without penalty until the close of business on DECEMBER 9, 1912.

Notice is hereby given to the holders of certificates of deposit representing preferred and common stock of the United States Motor Company and of Columbia Motor Car Company that there has been called and is payable in New York funds on or before the close of business DECEMBER 9, 1912, $2.40 in respect of each share of stock of the par value of $100 represented by their certificates of deposit (a second installment of 10% of the amounts payable in respect to said shares.) Certificates of deposit must be presented at the time of such payment for notation thereon of the payment of said second installment. Failure to make such payment within the period limited as above will result as provided in the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization in the exclusion of the holder of such certificates of deposit so defaulting from the benefits of the Plan and the forfeiture of the stock represented thereby and all previous payments made in respect thereof.

A considerable amount of stock having been already deposited under the Plan, the Committee desires to give to the holders of undeposited stock a further opportunity to participate in the benefits thereof. Accordingly holders of preferred and common stock of United States Motor Company and of Columbia Motor Car Company may become parties to the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization by depositing their stock certificates, endorsed in blank for transfer and bearing all stamps required by the laws of the State of New York, on or before the close of business on DECEMBER 9, 1912, and at the same time making payment in New York funds on account of the amounts payable in respect of said stock, as provided in the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization, (a) $2.40 for each share of stock of the par value of $100 deposited, representing the first installment of 10% payable in respect to said shares on or before November 9, 1912, with interest thereon, and (b) the further sum of $2.40 for each share of stock of the par value of $100 deposited, representing the second installment of 10% payable in respect to said shares on or before DECEMBER 9, 1912.

All deposits of debentures, notes, claims and shares of stock must be made with, and all payments in respect of certificates of deposit and shares of stock must be made to, CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, the Depositary under the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization, at its office, 54 Wall Street, New York City. Proofs of claims, assignments and powers of attorney must accompany the deposit of all debentures, notes and claims. The secretary of the Committee upon application therefor will furnish copies of the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization and forms for proof of claims, assignments and powers of attorney.

JEWISH YOUNG MEN SEEK FARM LIFE

Figures Quoted to Refute the Statement to Contrary in Children's Aid Report.

THEIR WORK PRAISED, TOO

Leonard G. Robinson Says Society of Which He Is the Head Placed 817 Men This Season.

A statement in the annual report of the Children's Aid Society that "many young men of Jewish faith from Russia and Italians from Sicily and Calabria do not readily adopt our customs and ways and decline to accept work on farms, and these, through their desire to remain in the large cities, soon develop idle habits and will graduate into the criminal classes," was challenged by Leonard G. Robinson, general manager of the Jewish Agricultural and Industrial Aid Society. In a letter to THE TIMES Mr. Robinson says:

"While I am not in a position to speak of the Italian immigrant, I can state with authority that the reference to the Jewish immigrant has no basis in fact. The Jewish Agricultural and Industrial Aid Society for the past five years has been conducting a Farm Labor Bureau for the sole purpose of procuring employment for Jewish young men desiring to work as farm hands. The noteworthy thing about this bureau is that its creation was forced upon the society by the steady stream of Russian Jewish immigrants coming to its office in quest of employment upon farms. This season the bureau succeeded in placing 817 young men on farms.

"That they are ready to adapt themselves to American conditions is evidenced by the fact that all but 288 were placed with non-Jewish farmers. All this, in spite of the fact that the society carries on no propaganda and no inducement is held out to the farm laborers who, except in a few special instances, are even obliged to furnish their own transportation to the place of employment. As a matter of fact, the activity of this bureau is limited, not by the scarcity of farm hands, but by the lack of desirable positions.

"Not only are the Russian Jewish immigrants, about whom the Children's Aid Society seems to lose considerable sleep, desirous of working on farms, but they are beginning to be recognized as a superior type of farm laborer. What they lack in experience they more than make up by their intelligence, sobriety, and close application to their work, and, what is more, instead of spending their earnings in the nearest tavern, they save their money with the object of eventually becoming farmers on their own account.

"In this connection it may not be out of place to quote from a letter written to the Farm Labor Bureau by a non-Jewish farmer of Potsdam, N. Y., under date of July 29:

> Last November you filled my application of September 18th for a farm hand by sending Mr. B. E. to me. He has been with me most of the time since up to yesterday, when he left me to return to Russia—called home by sickness and death in his family—unforeseen events which have changed all his plans and apparently the whole course of his life.
>
> During his stay with me he has proved not only a most satisfactory hired man—sober, steady, faithful and, to the limit of his ability, efficient—but also a cultured gentleman of the finest qualities of mind and heart; a man I am proud to call my friend. He expressed regret at leaving my place, and I certainly felt very sorry to have him go.
>
> My experience with this man—the finest foreigner I have ever employed, and the first of his race and country with whom I have become intimately acquainted—has been a wonderful eye opener to me. If he is a type of the people Russia is making life intolerable to and driving from her borders, I pity Russia.

"This is but one of the many letters on file in the office of the Jewish Agricultural and Industrial Aid Society.

"The Children's Aid Society complains that the recent immigration presents difficult problems with which it cannot cope. The immigration problem is essentially a human problem, and no human problem is easy. Nor will it ever be easy unless, perhaps, our professional philanthropists succeed in realizing their dreams of reducing the human problem to a system of mechanics.

"It would be interesting to know how many of the 605 orphans for whom the Children's Aid Society found homes last year were placed on farms, and what basis the officers of the society have for making the sweeping assertion above quoted."

REORGANIZATION OF SOUTHERN IRON AND STEEL COMPANY.

Referring to the Modified Plan for the Reorganization of Southern Iron and Steel Company, dated July 12, 1912, notice is hereby given that John W. Platten has been elected as Chairman of the Committee in succession to Cecil A. Grenfell, who has resigned as a member of the Committee, and Alfred A. Cook has been added to the Committee.

There have been deposited and are now subject to the Modified Plan of Reorganization over 89% of the bonds, 88% of the secured notes, and over 91% of the debentures of Southern Iron and Steel Company.

In view of the large amount of deposits already received and the probability of an early sale of the properties of the Southern Iron and Steel Company, the Committee has extended the time for the deposit of bonds, secured notes, and debentures until the close of business on NOVEMBER 30, 1912.

Pursuant to the powers in that respect conferred upon the Committee by the Modified Plan, the Committee has determined to permit the holders of claims against the Southern Iron and Steel Company (in addition to the bonds, secured notes, and debentures) to participate in the benefits of the reorganization upon the deposit of said claims or a statement thereof, and, in either case, with an assignment thereof in form approved by the Committee, with the Depositary under the Modified Plan, to the extent and in the manner provided in an agreement dated November 4th, 1912, which the Committee has executed and filed with the Depositary, copies of which may be obtained upon application to the Depositary or to the Secretary of the Committee. Certificates of deposit will be issued upon the deposit of all such claims which may be made until the close of business on NOVEMBER 30, 1912. All deposits must be made with BANKERS TRUST COMPANY, the Depositary under the Modified Plan, at its office, No. 16 Wall Street, New York City.

No deposits will be received after November 30, 1912, except with the consent of the Committee and upon such terms as it may approve.

PROPOSALS.

New Mexico State Bonds.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Loan Commissioners of the State of New Mexico will, at the office of the Treasurer of said State, in the capitol building at the city of Santa Fe, New Mexico, on the 30th day of December, 1912, at the hour of 2 o'clock in the afternoon, receive sealed proposals for the purchase of $450,000 of bonds of said state, of Series "B," which are to be issued in accordance with the provisions of section three of article IX. of the Constitution of said State of New Mexico and of an Act of the Legislature of said state, which became a law on the first day of June, 1912, for the payment of the bonds and accrued interest thereof of Santa Fe county, assumed by said state in section one of article IX. of said constitution. Four hundred and twenty-five of said bonds are to be issued in the denomination of one thousand dollars each, and fifty thereof are to be issued in the denomination of five hundred dollars each, dated January 1, 1913, and will be in the form prescribed in section 13 of said act of the legislature of the state of New Mexico, and the principal thereof will be payable to bearer in gold coin or its equivalent in lawful money of the United States forty years after their date, and they may be redeemed at the option of the state at any time after twenty years from their date. The interest on said bonds will be payable semi-annually, March 1, and September 1, and principal and interest will be payable at the office of the State Treasurer at Santa Fe, New Mexico, or at the Seaboard National Bank, New York City, at the option of the holder. The said bonds are offered for sale to the person who will agree to take the same at par and accrued interest to date of delivery and at a rate of interest to be named in his bid; and said bonds or any part thereof will be awarded to the person offering to accept the same at par at the lowest rate of interest.

Each bid must be sealed, marked "Proposal for Purchase of Bonds," and accompanied by a certified check for not less than two per cent. of the amount of the bid, as security for the faithful performance of such bid in case said bonds or a part thereof shall be awarded to the person making such bid, and as liquidated damages in case of the failure of the successful bidder to fulfill his contract; but no such check drawn upon a banking house making the bid will be accepted as such security.

The Loan Commissioners reserve the right to reject any and all bids, and particularly specify that no bid will be considered unless it is an unconditional bid for the purchase of said bonds or a part thereof, not made dependent upon any contingency whatever. It is further distinctly stated that only so much of said bonds will be sold as may be necessary, at the price bid, to realize the amount of the indebtedness to be paid, which indebtedness does not exceed the said sum of $450,000.

Intending bidders who may desire further information can obtain it by application to said Board of Loan Commissioners at Santa Fe, N. M.

W. G. SARGENT,
Secretary of the Board of Loan Commissioners.

THANKSGIVING CHEER PROVIDED FOR ALL

Vaudeville Entertainments with Turkey Feasts Lighten the Day for the City's Charges.

THE BOY SCOUTS PARADE

Light Fall of Snow In the Morning Gives New York the First "White" Thanksgiving in Years.

If any one in New Yorw did not share in the spirit of Thanksgiving yesterday it was probably his own fault, for nothing that foresight could direct was neglected to make the holiday one of happiness for all. A light fall of snow in the morning and a brisk wind that put roses in the cheeks of those who faced it gave an added flavor to the day. It was the first "White Thanksgiving" New York had enjoyed in several years. Dawn arrived accompanied by a southwest wind. This brought snow, and before it stopped it had whitened the roofs and the face of the Palisades across the Hudson. It did not last long in the streets, though.

In the morning, services were held in all the churches and in the hospitals, the prisons, the missions, and all institutions where the afflicted were housed the day was fittingly celebrated. A turkey dinner was provided in all the institutions and in most of them moving picture and vaudeville shows or musical entertainments were arranged for the pleasure of the inmates.

In the morning there was a parade of Boy Scouts. This was followed by a feast for the members of this organization in the Twenty-second Regiment Armory. The host was Gen. Edwin A. McAlpin, the Chief Scout. The line of march was down Riverside Drive and West End avenue. Many persons lined the streets to cheer the marchers for all the sharpness of the wind.

The largest charity dinners served were those of the Salvation Army, the Bowery Mission, and the Rescue Mission in Chinatown. At the penal institutions and the hospitals on the islands in the East River the prisoners enjoyed two vaudeville entertainments. The largest of these was provided by B. F. Keith. At the Workhouse the Actors' Protection Association provided the entertainment. Flowers were everywhere in evidence, particularly in the hospitals, where those who were unable to eat the Thanksgivinb dinners were made to feel in this way that they had not been forgotten.

Protectory Boys Have a Feast.

In the Bronx all the hospitals and charitable institutions celebrated the day with special dinners and entertainments. The Catholic Protectory, in Westchester, where there were 1,500 boys and 1,000 girls, used 2,600 pounds of turkey, 800 pounds of cranberries, and more than 2,000 pies to provide the feast for the inmates there. After the dinner there was a moving picture show and a concert by the boys' band. It has been the custom of the band to visit other institutions on Thanksgiving Day, but yesterday it was decided to keep the musicians at home.

At the Lebanon Hospital as many of the 185 patients as could do so enjoyed their turkey dinner. Among those in that hospital whose condition made a Thanksgiving meal out of the question was Detective Martin Fay, the policeman who was shot along with two other detectives before they killed the Fagin Vogel and his wife, whom they were trying to arrest. Fay was not expected to live when he first arrived at the hospital, and he said that yesterday probably had a greater significance to him than to almost any one else in the city.

"If any one in this world should be thankful to God," he said, "I am that person, for I realize how near I have been to the grave."

The Department of Charities and Corrections provided dinners for more than 12,000 persons. According to the department officials, more than 30,000 pounds of turkey were used to feed this great throng. Pie, cake, and ice cream were also provided.

Religious services were provided for the 2,300 patients in the Metropolitan Hospital on Blackwell's Island. This was followed by a generous dinner. Some 2,000 persons were fed at the Municipal Lodging House during the day. A line of unfortunates, mostly men, stretched from First Avenue to the doors of the lodging house, near the East River, in Twenty-fifth Street, but there was plenty of food and none went away disappointed.

Feast at Five Points Mission.

At the Five Points Mission 900 children and 100 mothers were treated to a dinner. Here various churches and societies interested in the work of the mission furnished the tables, and there was good-natured rivalry among them to outdo each other. Grace Church tried to make its table look more attractive than that of St. Andrew's, and the German "Willing Workers" tried to beat all the others, so that the youngsters from the vicinity of Mulberry Bend Park found themselves confronted with an abundance of home-made chocolate cake, lemon pie, fruit cake, peach shortcake, and other delicacies, besides turkey, vegetables, and fruits. Before the dinner there was an entertainment furnished by the children who are being taught in the schools of the mission under the direction of the Rev. Dr. F. J. Belcher, Superintendent of the mission, and the teachers of the schools.

At the Newsboys' Lodging House, 14 New Chambers Street, a dinner consisting of turkey, vegetables, fruit, cakes, pie, and candy, was served to 337 boys. Only boys below the age of 18 were admitted, and all had a good time. Heretofore a few men, former inmates of the lodging house, were invited to the dinners on Thanksgiving Day, but it was decided best to have only boys this time, as the presence of the men seemed to detract from the pleasure of the youngsters. The holiday dinners of this institution are always given by some patron interested in the welfare of the boys. The host yesterday was William Waldorf Astor, who sent a greeting to his guests from London.

As usual the Alimony Club, which now has thirteen members in the Ludlow Street Jail, made merry yesterday. The members heard a speech from Julius Harburger, the Sheriff. The dinner bell rang for the alimoners at noon, and with the Sheriff leading the way the thirteen marched to the table, but only twelve ate of the feast provided, for David Hoskowitz is superstitious, and refused to be the thirteenth man at the table.

"That's an unlucky number for a member of this club," said Hoskowitz, and not one bite would he eat.

Sheriff Harburger in his speech told the alimoners how deeply interested he was in their welfare, and assured them that he would rejoice when they were all restored to liberty. A prisoner, who said he was Krys Kringle, responded to the Sheriff and assured him that if he ever ran for Governor he would get a unanimous alimony vote.

Bowery Mission Gives Baskets.

Thousands of poor were fed at the different missions. The Bowery Mission's bread line opened for the Winter at 1 o'clock yesterday morning and during the day baskets of food were given to the poor. The annual Thanksgiving dinner was held last night at 8 o'clock.

At the Florence Crittenden Mission the dinner was the first given in the new home at 245 West Thirteenth Street, into which the mission moved last month after twenty-nine years at 21 Bleecker Street. The mission opened its doors at 11 A. M. and arrangements were made to feed 300 women besides the young girl inmates before 10 o'clock last night. Two hundred baskets of Thanksgiving dinners were also distributed among poor families recommended to the mission.

At God's Providence House, 330 Bowery, 500 dinners were served between 1 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. James M. Ashley, a broker of 47 Exchange Place, who for the last ten years has been giving the house a large sum to help provide the dinners, was on hand early to greet his guests. Young women students of the Teachers College were waitresses at this dinner.

It had been planned to hold a great civic celebration in the Great Hall of the College of the City of New York, in which singers of various nations were to participate, but the details of the plan were so elaborate that it was found necessary to postpone the affair until next year.

Following their usual custom of giving Thanksgiving turkeys to the employes of their estates, Miss Helen M. Gould and John D. and William Rockefeller distributed more than 125 Thanksgiving turkeys to those who work for them, yesterday.

Immigrants Enjoy Turkey Fare.

The 2,000 immigrants who spent their first Thanksgiving Day in America on Ellis Island yesterday had a good turkey dinner with plenty of plum pudding and mince pie, oranges, apples, and coffee. In languages ranging from Gaelic to Arabic the immigrants told how much they had enjoyed the meal, and to the Arabs of the Sahara Desert, who are accustomed to kous-kous or sun-dried grasshoppers, the plum pudding seemed strange, but tasted good. "The boneless fire-caters" from Tierra del Fuego wanted their turkey served raw, but were persuaded to try the roasted dish and enjoyed it.

On the American liner St. Louis, which arrived yesterday from Southampton, a big dinner containing all the good things of the season with wine for the officers and beer for the crew, was served by order of the Commodore of the fleet, Capt. John C. Jamieson. An informal concert was given afterward in the dining saloon at which Purser Hinsley sang "Hail Smiling Morn," "The Last Rose of Summer," and other ballads.

The holiday was universally observed along the North and East River fronts. Except where it was absolutely necessary no cargo was handled on any of the ships.

The custom officials had to inspect the baggage on the President Grant from Hamburg, the St. Louis, and the Niagara from Havre in the morning, and on the Oruba from Bermuda late in the afternoon.

The supporters of the St. Andrew coffee stands sent out to those who were ill in the city 200 baskets of good things to eat. The organization also fed some 2,000 men and women of Manhattan and Brooklyn who were in need.

WOMEN NURSES GRADUATED.

Class of Twenty-two Get Diplomas at German Hospital School.

The graduating exercises of the German Hospital Training School for Nurses were held yesterday afternoon in Krackowizer Hall, in the Anna Ottendorfer Dispensary Building, Seventy-sixth Street and Park Avenue. A. Kuttroff, President of the Training School, awarded diplomas to twenty-two young women who had completed the three-year course.

Bernard H. Ridder, son of Herman Ridder, who is one of the youngest members of the Board of Trustees, congratulated the graduating class on having successfully completed their work, and assured them that theirs was a calling characterized by self-sacrifice and courage. He related that Mayor Gaynor had told him of his high admiration for the nurses who attended him after his injury at the hands of a would-be assassin.

Dr. G. L. Laporte of the Medical Board talked to the graduating nurses of their relations to physicians, their patients, and to themselves.

The members of the graduating class were Margarete Kraemer, Germany; Dorothea Alberta Paul, New York; Hildegarde Rexoth, Pennsylvania; Beulah Elizabeth Riechers, New Jersey; Louise Loretta Muser, New York; Frieda Imm, Germany; Philomena Mary Stretz, New York; Bertha Florence Tumm, Pennsylvania; Sarah Swartz, Germany; Olga M. Wolfe, Germany; Marie Allenspach, Switzerland; Selma Maria Gustafson, Sweden; Blanche Passon, Massachusetts; Rose Annette Lung, New York; Aimée Evelyn de Long, New York; Louise Elizabeth Kuhn, Austria; Anna Foley, New York; Josephine Virginia Nadler, New York; Marie E. Hoffmann, Germany; Maria Antonia Minna Reuter, Germany; Isabel Smales, Canada; Florence Garvey, New Jersey.

ATTACKS MAYOR IN SERMON.

Dr. Pattison Says People Will Show Their Resentment Next Fall.

At a union service in which the congregations of five Washington Heights churches participated, the Rev. Dr. Harold Pattison, pastor of the Washington Heights Baptist Church, expressed the hope last night that the coming year might pass very quickly so that "next Fall the Mayor of this city may have an opportunity to learn just what the people think of his administration."

"This matter of personal liberty the Mayor talks so much about," declared Dr. Pattison, "all works one way. It works for the crook. It is a personal liberty to commit crime that takes away from honest people the personal liberty to see crime punished and suppressed.

"It is a personal liberty that ties the hands of decent people and the decent members of the police force, while they must stand, thus tied, and be 'frisked' of their rights. The fact is that the Mayor is sadly wrong about this matter, as he will find out when the decent people of the city go to the polls next year.

"There is no personal liberty except the personal liberty to do those things that make for the commonweal and for the ultimate progress of the people. It takes more manhood to forsake opportunities to exert one's personal liberty when the general good demands this, than it does to blatantly enforce one's personal liberty against the commonalty of interests. Just give the people a chance and they will show their Mayor."

The union service which was held in the Hamilton Grange Church at 148th Street and Convent Avenue was attended by about 300 parishioners of the five churches represented.

MRS. POLLOCK SELF-SHOT.

Her Twins' Death Unbalanced Her Mind—Not Expected to Recover.

MASSAPEQUA, L. I., Nov. 28.—Mrs. Frederick H. Pollock, one of the Summer colonists of this place, in a fit of despondency to-day, shot herself in the right temple. She was in the dining room of her home in Ocean Avenue, sitting with her husband, when she suddenly pulled out a revolver and sent a bullet crashing into her head. The bullet came out on the left side of her head just above the eye.

She fell unconscious to the floor, and her husband immediately called in Dr. Charles C. Murphy of Amityville. Dr. Murphy found her condition critical and summoned Justice of the Peace Norton. When the Justice, who is the Coroner, arrived at the house, Dr. Murphy had succeeded in reviving Mrs. Pollock. The Coroner took her ante-mortem statement, in which she said that she had shot herself in a fit of despondency. She exonerated her husband from all blame. The death of her twins some months ago is believed to have unbalanced her mind.

The Pollocks have a beautiful Summer home in Ocean Avenue, and it has been customary for them to remain here every year until Dec. 1. They have been packing up some of the furniture and silverware preparatory to taking their departure in a couple of days. Mrs. Pollock, who is about 35 years old, is not expected to recover. Mr. Pollock is connected with a New York department store.

Accuse Factory Foreman of Theft.

The police were notified several months ago by the Brooklyn Shirt Company, Driggs Avenue and North Ninth Street, Williamsburg, that a series of robberies was being carried out in their factory and that several thousand dollars' worth of shirts had been stolen. Suspicion fell on Michael Markson, 44 Siegel Street, the foreman of the factory. The police trailed him and yesterday morning caught him leaving the factory with a bundle of shirts. They traced him to a haberdashery store of Samuel and Reuben Gold at 198 East Houston Street, Manhattan, and there, the police say, he sold the shirts. Markson was held in $1,000 bail. The Gold Brothers were arrested, charged with receiving stolen goods.

THANKS OF 'BOOZERS' TO SALVATION ARMY

Armory in Fourteenth Street Is Thrown Open Especially to Drink Derelicts.

WELCOME DRUNK OR SOBER

Free Rolls and Coffee Encourage Testimony as to Uplift Found Behind the Big Drum.

Yesterday was Boozers' Day. The flaming red and yellow posters in the lobby of the Salvation Army's Armory at 122 West Fourteenth Street said so, and further read:

Special Reserved Seats for Boozers.
Come early, drunk or sober.

Clutching the precious bit of pasteboard that gave the bearer a lien on a "free lunch" of rolls and coffee, a reporter drifted into a reserved seat at the afternoon Salvation Army meeting just in time to hear Brother Green, who, paradoxically, was black, give earnest testimony to his conversion.

"Ah come out o' Chester County Jail in Pennsylvania only this mornin'," said the colored brother. "Ah had breakfast on coffee and rolls. Ah had served five year an' ten months of a nine-year sentence when they let me go. Ah came to New York and this morning these gem'men done lifted me out o' the gutter an' saved me."

He resumed his seat amid a chorus of "Praise the Lord."

There was plenty of enthusiasm on tap. Some two thousand men, women, and babies of all social strata more than crowded Memorial Hall. A corps of Army lassies in trim blue uniforms and poke bonnets held the right wing; the phalanx of "boozers" was massed in the reserve section in the centre, while the left wing and the rear guard in the gallery were made up of officers and privates, sprinkled with visitors, forming a mighty army arrayed against Demon Rum.

Well-dressed women touched elbows with seedy, sodden men; well-fed citizens found themselves sandwiched between gaunt denizens of the shadowy underworld, and as the meeting progressed more rum-logged derelicts came drifting in, lured by the promised salvage, or the free lunch.

The auditorium was bright with the flags of all nations, including the imperial dragon of China and the golden harp that once was played in Tara's Hall. From the gilded frame of a large oil painting, hung high on the rear wall over the stage and draped with red bunting, the face of Christ looked down on the heterogeneous audience, and beneath it was a still larger portrait of the late Gen. Ballington Booth.

On the stage sat the brass band, resplendent in uniforms of bright vermillion, heavily gold laced, and in the row in front of them were the field and staff officers of the Army and the converts who were to give testimony.

Brother Weaver Some Drinker.

Brother Weaver of Washington, N. J., told how he had been saved after twenty-six years of cumulative drunkenness, and when he had almost committed murder. When he related how once in a nine days' debauch he had consumed five gallons of whisky, five gallons of wine, two of hard cider, and four full cases of beer; a voice from the reserved "boozers'" section called out:

"You're making us nervous down here."

Then the audience joined in singing, "Tell Me the Story," while the brasses blared, and the snare drums rolled, and the big bass drum groaned under the pummeling it received from a zealous Salvationist.

Brother White, scion of a well-known New York family, well bred, well educated, and well dressed, gave the most interesting testimonial of the meeting and roused the crowd to a frenzy of hallelujas as he told, in a polished address, how he had been saved when on the brink of suicide.

"I was graduated from a Government school," he said, "but a physical ailment compelled me to leave the Government service. I went into business and was making several thousand dollars a year, when I took to drink. I sank lower and lower until my wealthy relatives disowned me and my friends closed their doors in my face. My only friend was the corner saloon keeper—while I had any money left.

"Then I touched rock bottom. I had the most beautiful, loving wife a man could have. One night I came home late and in a drunken frenzy struck her across the face. My degradation was complete. When I awoke she had vanished.

"Then one night I found myself in Hudson County Jail. When I got back to New York, I walked the streets until I was tired, and then turned west on Fourteenth Street, intending to seek oblivion in the river.

"I passed the Salvation Army Headquarters and dropped in just to rest. Good Col. Damon was praying. When I got up from my knees the shackles of drink were gone. I was a new man."

Amid a running fire of "Amens," "Praise Gods," and "Hallelujas," he told how the officers of the Army had helped him to rehabilitate himself until he held a responsible position in a large corporation, and his home was once more complete with wife and child.

After the offering, four men, including one negro, declared they had been converted. At the morning service sixty-five men and four women had knelt at the altar and declared their desire to turn over a new temperance leaf. After the meeting the hungry went down to the basement for the luncheon of coffee and rolls. About a thousand were fed. The meeting in the evening was addressed by Commander Eva Booth.

A staff officer was authority for the statement that those reclaimed in most cases were men who had been dragged down from the higher walks of life by drink. Derelict lawyers, doctors, bankers, merchants, mechanics, even clergymen had been lifted out of the gutter and helped to their feet again, he said.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon and again at 7 in the evening a parade was held with brass bands and floats in line. The parade epitomized the growth of the Salvation Army in New York since it was started here. Two homeless tramps looking for work, then a pushcart, then a horse and wagon, then a large truck, then an automobile marked the stages in its evolution, while many placards borne by the marchers told the rest.

THANKSGIVING IN CHURCHES.

Dr. Jowett Speaks of War—Dr. Van de Water Thankful for Restored Sight

There were special Thanksgiving services in nearly all of the churches and synagogues in New York yesterday. At the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church Dr. Jowett preached his first Thanksgiving sermon in America, and in the course of it touched on the war in the Balkans.

"The oppressed of Bulgaria and Montenegro are obtaining their deliverance. It is the work of Moses, and we must sing the song of Moses," said he. "I have seen many men wearing the white robe and carrying the palm. These men have a clean mind and conscience and carry the sign of victory. No emancipator can do this kind of work. The great event of the day is not when men are emancipated, but when they put on the white robe and carry the palm.

"I can see that the leaven of Heaven is working. I do not know of a place on the earth where Moses is not working—in China, Japan, Korea, the Balkan States. I do not know of any places where Moses is not working to-day leading people out of bondage. But you and I have got to take care if the Chinese leaven be the song of Moses. We must teach them the song of the Lamb, and China, Japan, and Korea must be taught the song of the Lamb."

One of the most largely attended of all the church services was the annual memorial mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral, under the auspices of the Catholic Benevolent League. Several thousand attended the beautiful service and these included hundreds of relatives of those in memory of whom the mass was said.

The Rev. Father Joseph F. Flannelly was the celebrant and had as his assistants the Rev. Matthew J. Duggan, who was the Deacon, and the Rev. James J. Talbot, who was the sub-Deacon. The Rev. Father George A. Barthel preached the sermon. He urged his hearers to so live that they would have no fear of death.

At the Portuguese and Spanish Synagogue, the Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes made a reference to the Balkan war and argued for a compulsory system of arbitration among the Nations.

At Old Trinity, to a large congregation, the Rev. Charles Sumner Burch asked the question in his sermon, "Are we turning this day into a Pagan holiday?"

Even in the messages of the President and the Governors setting aside the day, Dr. Burch said that the manner of observing the day was not specified. Dr. Burch said we are in danger of becoming a Nation of skeptics and forgetting the ideals of the fathers.

In the Cathedral of St. John the Divine corporate communion for the fifty chapters of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew was celebrated yesterday morning by Bishop Greer. The service was largely attended. Bishop Greer was assisted by Dean Grosvenor and Canon Jones, who made brief addresses.

At St. Andrew's Episcopal Church the Rev. Dr. George R. Van de Water spoke of the police situation in New York and had a good word to say of the force.

"There are bad men on the police force," he said, "but the majority are striving to keep the law. The failure in the Police Department, he said, was in the failure of the powers that be to listen to personal complaints "or lie in their beds and refuse to make investigations." He then scored the manner in which policemen often are rebuked in court so that the very prisoners they bring before the court are made to laugh at them. He said he had seen this himself.

Dr. Van de Water expressed thanks for the restoration of his eyesight during the year. Two years ago he was threatened with blindness, and sympathy came to him from all over the country.

BANQUET FOR "UNCLE JOE."

Friends of Ex-Speaker Plan Dinner as Tribute to His Long Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—"Uncle Joe" Cannon is to be the guest of honor at a banquet, which is expected to eclipse all other banquets that have ever been given in the National capital. "Jim" Tawney, former Representative from Minnesota, and one of "Uncle Joe's" first lieutenants when the Illinois man was Speaker, together with former Representative "Jim" Kennedy of Ohio, are the movers in the affair. It is proposed to have the dinner near the close of the present Administration, in order that both President Taft and President-elect Wilson may be present.

Besides having served longer than any other Speaker in the lower branch of Congress, Representative Cannon has occupied his seat for nineteen terms, or a period of thirty-eight years. His friends in the capital, both in and out of Congress, are legion, and Mr. Tawney today declared that the serious problem which confronted him was to discover how all of those friends and admirers could be accommodated.

HUNGRY PAIR LOOT STORE.

Delicatessen Shopkeeper Relents When Culprits Face the Police.

The sight of many fat turkeys and plump plum puddings in the delicatessen store at 41 West 124th Street was too much for Mrs. Margaret Norton of 216 East 113th Street early last evening. Both she and little Mary Abbe, who was with her, were very hungry, and they went right into that store and began to reach out for the good things. The proprietress, Miss Sallie Schwartz, bounced out just in time to catch them, and a little later the two were in the West 125h Sreet Station.

Miss Schwartz began by being adament, but the sight of the hungry woman was too much for her. She weakened, and then when Mrs. Norton got down on her knees and begged for mercy Miss Schwartz wiped away her tears and declared that if she had only known she would have offered a turkey, with all the trimmings, to the hungry pair. Then she denied that she had even considered making a complaint, and the police bowed the three out.

PLAYED FAGIN TO HIS SON.

Brooklyn Man and Nine-Year-Old Boy Arrested in Yonkers.

The story of a father playing Fagin to his own son was told in Yonkers yesterday morning, when, just before daylight, the police arrested George Cantrell and his nine-year-old boy, Ashley, at the Bryn Mawr station of the Putnam division. It was the discovery of a big pack of school supplies in Cantrell's possession that led to the arrests, and the explanation came when the boy was questioned apart.

Ashley told Capt. Brady that for two months his father had been using him as a "fanlight boy," pushing him through transoms or windows to open the doors of schools and churches from within. He said he and his father had done most of the work in Brooklyn.

"I asked my father not to make me go into churches," the boy said, "but he made me. I knew they were churches, because we took a lot of candlesticks, statues, and altar cloths. My mother died two years ago, but my father took me along only in the last two months."

The supplies found in the father's possession came from the school on the Saw Mill River Road and were valued at $200. Cantrell gave 56 Meeker Avenue, Brooklyn, as his address, but the police of the Herbert Street station said he lived across the way, at 57, in some especially bare rooms of an unpromising tenement. A search of these rooms made yesterday yielded nothing.

To Mark Washington's Headquarters

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Nov. 28.—Montclair Chapters of the Sons of the American Revolution and the Daughters of the American Revolution are arranging to mark the site of still another Washington's headquarters in New Jersey. The spot to be marked with a commemorative tablet is the place where the old Crane homestead stood until 1900, when it was torn down. It was in 1780 that Washington established headquarters in the old Crane mansion, then owned by William Crane. Montclair was then known as Cranetown.

DEMAND FOR NEW MOTOR FUEL GROWS

Distillates, Instead of Gasoline, Favored in Far West—Auto Sales Outlook Good.

Demand for gasoline, due to the increased use of motor vehicles and internal combustion engines, has made imperative cheaper distillates for motor trucks. If the consumption increases the price at the rate of about one cent a month, as it has in the past year, fuel cost in truck operation will begin to loom large. Progress has been made on the Pacific Coast with distillates, a fuel costing about one-half as much as gasoline, and apparently as good. This fuel is of 39 to 40 degrees gravity, flashpoint of 130 to 140 degrees, and cold test near zero. About one hundred and fifty trucks of two well-known makes use it in the West. A small dashboard tank supplies gasoline for starting. Once the motor is warmed the distillate is turned on. One of the truck types using it has won the highest awards in the French War Department's annual tests for ten years, because of flexibility of operation on denatured alcohol, benzine, distillate, or gasoline

C. T. Silver, a local automobile distributor, is optimistic about the business outlook for the low-priced car. He said yesterday:

"The last year is principally notable for the general awakening to automobile values. This has made a readjustment necessary in manufacturing methods. The impression made by the popular and medium-priced car is convincing. It has made inroads into the strongholds of fancy priced creations. The car a man drives to-day is no longer an indication of his wealth or social standing."

That the motor industry is finding the advance season of 1913 one of unusual prosperity is evidenced by sales reports from all parts of the country. These indicate unusual prosperity among farmers. Nearly all the big agricultural districts show increases varying from 35 to 50 per cent. Most cities are also well ahead of the same period in 1912. Manufacturers are increasing their plants, while the so-called "assemblers" are cutting down. There has been a great advancement on the Pacific Coast and in the Southwest as an automobile market. Sales in California, Oregon, Texas, Missouri, and Kansas reflect the exceptional success of the crop season.

TYPHOON HITS PHILIPPINES.

Two Steamers Wrecked, Many Lives Lost, and Much Property Destroyed.

MANILA, Nov. 28.—Many lives were lost during a severe typhoon which today caused immense damage to property.

The storm crossed the islands of Samar, Leyte, and North Panay, leaving ruin in its path. The town of Tacloban, the capital of Leyte, was practically destroyed. Two steamers were wrecked in Tacloban Harbor.

How many persons were killed by falling houses, flying debris, and by drowning is not known, but the loss of life is reported to have been great, and the damage is estimated at several million pesos.

Another typhoon of unusual severity is predicted by the Weather Bureau along the west coast of Mindanao.

Make Sure of It

THE Christmas Number of THE NEW YORK TIMES on Dec. 8th will make a sensation. It will contain four beautiful Christmas pictures painted especially for THE TIMES by four famous American artists. They will be reproduced in full color in the size of a full page of THE TIMES, on super-calendered paper, printed on one side of the paper only. They are works of art, well worth framing and preserving.

Nothing to compare with this Supplement has ever been issued by a newspaper unless it be the "Holy Grail" Easter Edition of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

There will be an extraordinary demand for these Christmas paintings. The edition, however, will be limited to regular readers of THE TIMES. If you are not a regular reader become one immediately by ordering your newsdealer to send you THE NEW YORK TIMES regularly.

Thousands neglected a similar warning that was given them to make sure of securing "Holy Grail" pictures and failed to get a copy. Don't fail this time. After the edition is exhausted, no more copies can be had.

The subjects and the artists who painted them for readers of THE NEW YORK TIMES are:

"Illumination," by Sargeant Kendall, N. A.

"His First Christmas," by Albert Sterner, A. N. A.

"My Ain Fireside," by Henry McCarter.

"Christmas Shopping," by W. W. Gilchrist, Jr.

A remarkable list truly, and the paintings are worthy of their fame.

Don't miss getting them with the

JAMES, AMEDEE DE GASQUET.—The People of the State of New York, by the grace of God free and independent, to Elizabeth Pratt de Gasquet James, executrix, &c., of AMEDEE DE GASQUET JAMES, deceased, now known as Elizabeth Tibbita de Mecklenburg, wife of Henry Borwin, otherwise known as Duc Borwin de Mecklenburg; Victoire Louise de Libran, Elizabeth Bleeker Von der Decken, and Hereward Von der Decken, infants, residing with their father, Leo Baron Von der Decken, at 7 Stallbaun Strasse, Leipzig, Saxony, and the Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., of the City of New York, send greeting.
You and each of you are hereby cited and required personally to be and appear before our Surrogate of the County of Ulster, at the Surrogate's Court of said County, held at the Surrogates' Office, in the County of Ulster, on the 17th day of December, 1912, at half-past ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, then and there to make answer to the petition of George Watson Pratt de Gasquet James and Pauline Andree de la Mettrie, filed in the office of the Surrogate of Ulster County, Kingston, N. Y., on the 24th day of August, 1912, and show cause why the Letters Testamentary heretofore and on March 22, 1904, granted to the said Elizabeth Pratt de Gasquet James, executrix, &c., should not be revoked and annulled; and why a judicial settlement of her accounts as ancillary executrix and executrix should not be had and why your petitioners and other persons interested in the said estate of Amedee de Gasquet James, deceased, should not have such other or further relief as may be just in the premises, and such of you as are hereby cited, as are under the age of twenty-one years, are required to appear by your guardian, if you have one, or if you have none, to appear and apply for one to be appointed, or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so, a guardian will be appointed by the Surrogate to represent and act for you in the proceeding.
In testimony whereof, we have caused the seal of the Surrogates' Court of said County of Ulster to be hereunto [L. S.] affixed. Witness, Hon. Walter N. Gill, a Surrogate of our said County, at the County of Ulster, the 19th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twelve.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The disturbance that developed off the northeast Florida coast during Wednesday has moved to the southeast New England coast with increasing energy, and the rains and snows extended throughout the Atlantic States. Local snows fell in the upper Lake region. Over the remainder of the country the weather was fair.

It is decidedly colder in the Atlantic States, and freezing temperatures occurred generally Thursday morning throughout the South, except Florida. In the interior of the country temperatures were higher, except in Montana and Washington.

There will be snow Friday in northeast New England and probably some scattered snows in the Lake region, continuing Saturday in the lower Lake region.

Over the remainder of the country the weather will be generally fair Friday and Saturday, although a disturbance now over Eastern Colorado may be attended by some local rains or snows.

It will be somewhat warmer Friday in the Ohio Valley and the South, and by Saturday in the Middle Atlantic States and New England.

Winds along the New England coast will be brisk to high northwest, becoming variable by Saturday; Atlantic Coast, moderate, northwest, becoming variable; South Atlantic Coast, moderate north.

Steamships departing Friday for European ports will have moderate northwest winds, with generally fair weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECASTS FOR TO-DAY AND SATURDAY.

Eastern New York and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Friday; Saturday fair and warmer; moderate northwesterly and westerly winds, becoming variable.

Southern New England—Fair Friday, with diminishing northwesterly winds; Saturday fair and slightly warmer.

New Jersey—Fair Friday and warmer in southeastern portion; Saturday fair; moderate northwesterly and northerly winds, becoming variable.

Western New York—Local snow Friday and probably Saturday; moderate to brisk westerly winds.

Northern New England—Fair in western and snow in eastern portion Friday, with brisk to high northerly and northwesterly winds on the coast; Saturday fair and slightly warmer in western portion.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

1911.	1912.		1911.	1912.
3 A. M.	48	36	4 P. M.	58	32

Business Opportunities

RICH AS THE VALLEY OF THE NILE.
We sell irrigated land in the beautiful Sacramento Valley in California. It is wonderfully rich, deep, fertile, and the water supply abundant.
This field garden will grow oranges, lemons, peaches, prunes, pecans, Bermuda onions, olives, figs, grapes, and sweet alfalfa; also any other crop grown in the United States.
Think of the enormous returns, where you can use land in this delightful climate 12 months in the year, while here you use it only 6 months.
Reasonable prices and terms.

SILK SALESMAN, many years'

EQUITABLE SITE LONG A PLACE OF GARDENS

To Turn It Into a Park Would Be a Remarkable Restoration to First Uses.

VAUXHALL GARDEN THERE

And Peter Stoutenberg Raised His Famous Tulips in the 17th Century—Sold for $1,200.

More than a century has elapsed since a portion of the old Equitable building site was distinguished by the name of a garden. Joseph Delacroix, a Frenchman, who came to this country soon after the Revolution, and was for many years the most popular caterer and confectioner in the city, established his Vauxhall Garden there in 1797, and until he removed further uptown, several years later, it was one of the best patronized resorts for light refreshments and simple entertainments in New York. The genial Frenchman had his little shop at 112 Broadway, right in the middle of the block between Pine and Cedar Streets, and in the rear he had a typical Summer garden where ices—a great delicacy at the time—were dispensed to the residents of the neighborhood during the warm Summer nights.

Delacroix's little garden covered a very limited area of what a century before his time had been Peter Stoutenberg's tulip garden. For more than a hundred years the present Equitable block had been one of the charming gardens of the city, but the growth of business soon after 1800 usurped so much of Delacroix's garden privileges that he was forced to move to the more open fields uptown, but he did not relinquish his confectionery shop at 112 Broadway as his downtown quarters until 1836.

The project recently advocated by many of the leading downtown bankers and tenants in the big buildings surrounding the Equitable block, to make that large square which contains exactly one acre a city park, lends interest to these old time garden features of the place. Should it be restored to its old-time conditions it would be one of the most remarkable transformations of any well known site in the history of the city.

The Equitable plot was a portion of the large farm owned by Jan Jansen Damen, being one of the earliest Dutch grants. The Damen farmhouse stood on the Nassau Street side of the block, near the Cedar Street corner. Later, the house was occupied by Peter Stoutenberg when he got the block for his tulip garden and it is said that the building was standing when the plot on the Cedar Street corner was sold by the heirs of Peter Stoutenberg to Dr. John Bard for about $1,200 just prior to the Revolution.

Bought From Dutch Church.

The block was first surveyed by Leonard Beckwith in 1688 and Peter Stoutenberg, who raised tulip bulbs for his Dutch and English neighbors, established his garden there about that time. It covered the entire Nassau Street front and the middle of the Broadway block. The main entrance to the tulip garden was from Broadway and in 1700 Stoutenberg sold this section to the Reformed Dutch Church for a parsonage, which was the residence of the minister of the old Middle Dutch Church, on the east side of Nassau Street, between Cedar and Liberty Streets, and which, before it was demolished about forty years ago, served as the city Post Office.

It was this Broadway plot at 112 Broadway which Joseph Delacroix bought from the Dutch Church in 1796 to establish his Vauxhall Garden. The fame of the Vauxhall Garden in London had given the name to a poor imitation in this city as far back as 1750, when the first Vauxhall was opened at Warren and Greenwich Streets. A few years later it appeared near the Battery, but when Delacroix came prominently upon the scene as the fashionable caterer he claimed the exclusive use of the name, and for forty years kept it well in the front of New York amusements. When it opened on July 4, 1797, he stated that it would be decorated and illuminated in a beautiful manner, the entrance to the garden being through a miniature forest. He might also be called one of the originators of the present day cabaret show, for to attract custom he had a band of musicians, and for some of his more elaborate entertainments he employed some of the performers at the old John Street theatre to sing the popular songs of the day.

The admittance to his garden on the night of July 4, 1797, was 6 shillings, which, as his advertisement at the time stated, "entitles to a glass of ice cream, punch, or lemonade," and he naively adds, "to obviate difficulties, no other liquors will be furnished this evening."

In January, 1800, he inserted this interesting notice in the papers:

> Confectionery Manufactury. Joseph Delacroix, 112 Broadway, informs the public in general that he has now in his store a large assortment of sugar works, best quality, likewise cordials, syrups, sweetmeats in boxes at a fixed price. He undertakes to provide entertainments at persons' houses so as the persons have no trouble at all. At the fixed hour the table will be extremely well furnished at a more reasonable rate than can be provided by the family.

Another Restaurant Follows.

When Delacroix opened his more ambitious Vauxhall uptown, near the corner of Broome Street and Broadway, he ran a line of stages from his downtown house at 112 Broadway. A little later he moved to his more famous garden in Lafayette Place, just below Ninth Street, and there he remained under a twenty-one-year lease from John Jacob Astor until Lafayette Place was cut through the garden about 1832. Delacroix sold his shop at 112 Broadway in 1830 for $100,000, a big advance over its former transfers, for the Dutch Church paid Peter Stoutenberg $200 for the plot, and when Delacroix bought it in 1796 he paid a little less than $10,000. In 1837 the building on the site was enlarged and became the National Hotel, and a few years later the corner just below on Pine Street was occupied for many years by the Tremont Temperance House.

Still another tenant who made the Broadway block famous for its good things was Francis Guerin, a celebrated restaurateur, who was a contemporary of the original Delmonico. His shop was at 120 Broadway, near the Cedar Street corner, which was opened in 1815, and for more than twenty years his place was famous for its French cordials, Parisian bonbons, brandy preserves, tarts, and confections.

Finance in the guise of lottery offices, which were extremely popular over a century ago, crept into the Equitable block as early as 1820, and an excellent idea of these operators who were eager to assist others to riches may be seen from an advertisement inserted by H. L. Runyon in a New York daily paper in 1821.

> A few days more and Dame Fortune will commence the distribution of her favors, and having the honor of being appointed her sole agent this is to let the good people of New York know that there yet remains on hand prizes of very first magnitude. Adventurers are invited to call at 118 Broadway, where they may view gratis a variety of pleasing numbers, but doubly pleasing when these numbers in all probability may draw the following splendid prizes: One of $30,000, two of $10,000, three of $5,000, four of $2,500, forty of $1,000, fifty of $500, 100 of $100, 152 of $50, and 7,700 of $12.

More money than this has since been made out of the block, and it would take more to-day than all of Mr. Runyon's valuable prizes to buy a little slice of the block. Notwithstanding its value, which was appraised during the insurance investigation several years ago at $15,500,000, and is now valued at about $15,000,000, the very fact that a project has been advanced to obtain the block for a permanent park calls marked attention to the value placed upon light and air by tenants of tall buildings in a section congested by skyscrapers. Since the burned Equitable Building has been entirely razed to the ground, within the past few days, the benefit of a large open block for a breathing space in one of the busiest parts of the city has been realized as perhaps never before, and this has been the prime reason which has lent force to the suggestion that it be made a permanent park.

MORGAN BUYS AUTOGRAPHS.

They Have a Personal Interest as Those of Financier's Ancestors.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 28.—J. Pierpont Morgan has just come into the possession of a volume of autographs of rare value. It was the pride of the Wethersfield Seminary in the years 1825 and 1826. The autographs, all of people more or less distinguished then—many of them progenitors of the great financier—are really more than mere signatures; for the book contains much poetic sentiment, copied and original. Of the many signatures those of John Pierpont, the poet, Mr. Morgan's maternal grandfather, and Mary E. Pierpont are perhaps among the most significant.

The book was for years in the possession of a Watertown family. The death of the owner disclosed the book, which had been forgotten, in an old bookcase, and a son, anxious to get money, sold it for $5. It came into the possession of Thomas Flynn nearly ten years ago, and he sent his brother William to New York to see Mr. Morgan. The young man finally sold the book for a sum that surprised him. Mr. Morgan named his own price and was more than generous.

GOOD STEAK AND BAD CHECK.

Combination Brings About Arrest of New York Man in New Jersey.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 28.—The latest arrival in the county jail is Payson S. Lano, President, so he says, of the Universal Railroad and Auto Supply Company of New York, which is not listed in the Copartnership and Corporation Directory, and giving as his address 798 East 107th Street. He is accused of a petty check swindle in using a pretended intention to purchase the Hotel Hobart, in Perth Amboy, as a means for passing a worthless $10 check.

The proprietor, Hyman Kantor, discovered the nature of the check after his guest had returned to New York, but he beguiled him back within jurisdiction. Lano was feasting on one of Kantor's best steaks when the police arrived. A Staten Island saloonkeeper has come forward with the charge that Lano succeeded in palming off three small checks at his place in Tottenville.

KEARNY.—A gift of property to be used as a West Hudson Hospital was made by Jacob Stumpf of Harrison to the Stumpf Memorial Hospital Association. The property is at Bergen Avenue and Elm Street, and consists of a house and lot. The house will be rebuilt into a modern hospital and the institution will be supported by private subscriptions from West Hudson residents.

NEWARK.—An automobile owned by Henry Roebrecht, manager of the Court Theatre, Newark, which was stolen Wednesday night, was found abandoned at Montclair Avenue and Parker Street, not far from Roebrecht's home. The police believe that boys took the machine for a joy ride.

HACKENSACK.—Mrs. Bridget McKenna, 78 years old, and her son Michael were found dead in their rooms at 138 Lawrence Street. The gas in McKenna's room was turned on. County Physician Armstrong thinks that Mrs. McKenna turned it on accidentally.

ATLANTIC CITY.—Mrs. Wesley Somers's son Boice, whom she accidentally shot in the abdomen, died in the hospital. The police have not arrested the mother, as they are satisfied the shooting was accidental.

FLEEING BRIDAL AUTO UPSET FIFTH AVENUE

Friendly Bluecoats Helped Mr. and Mrs. Bendheim to Escape from Pursuing Host.

A SHEAF OF SUMMONSES

Word from Bride in Policemen's Ears Freed First Car, but Hazers Face Speeding Charges.

An automobile with long white ribbons streaming and placards on the sides and rear roughly stating that the couple inside had just been made one speeded south in Fifth Avenue late yesterday afternoon. At Fifty-ninth Street a traffic policeman halted it. Before he had pinned a summons on the chauffeur, however, a young woman dressed in a brown traveling suit beckoned to him from the inside of the car. The policeman harkened to her for a minute. Then with a grin and a gracious wave of his blue right arm he said:

"I'm on. I'm on. Go ahead."

Almost before this machine had started up three pursuing cars were tearing along the same block. The patrolman, his lore soon learned, halted all three. The young men in the three machines explained that they were following a bridal machine and did not care about a fine, but were sorely touched by the loss of time.

While they were praying for a quick service of the summons the patrolman insisted on arguing and expounding the wisdom of the law and the way nations have been overthrown by letting their ordinances be trifled with. When the first machine had a good lead he finally gave them the papers calling for an appearance in court.

But in the meantime the chauffeur of the car with the newly wedded couple had sought to make too much out of the advantage the friendly policeman had given them, and he was stopped again for speeding at Fifty-fifth Street. This time again, however, the bride got the ear of the policeman and hurriedly explained. The bluecoat chuckled hoarsely and let them make the finishing spurt to the Grand Central Station. By this time the friends of the couple in the first three machines had broken away from their persecutor and were speeding to catch the couple.

As they arrived at the corner of Fifty-fifth, the traffic policeman once more raised his detaining hand. All three machines had to stop, and this time the pursuers stormed and pleaded for celerity on the part of their captor. They were forced, however, to listen to another long lecture and considerable warm argument. The first machine had rounded Forty-second Street for the Grand Central before the policeman began to write their names on the summonses.

Nine blocks further down the street the party in the three machines were held up a third time by a traffic policeman who had bent an equally sympathetic ear to the plea of the bride. The third set of summonses to appear in court to-morrow to answer the charge of breaking the speed limit was served on the three chauffeurs. By the time they arrived at the Grand Central the train was under way for the South with the bride and groom.

Later it was learned that the chase had started at the Temple Beth-El, 130 East Seventy-ninth Street, where the couple had been married by Rabbi Samuel Schulman. The bridegroom was Edward Bendheim, President of the Bendheim Construction Company, and the bride Miss Bella Wallach of 130 East Seventy-ninth Street.

BURGLARS RAID LOFTS.

Get $5,000 In Goods from One Twenty-eighth Street Building.

A highly efficient team of burglars visited the loft building at 131 West Twenty-eighth Street last Saturday evening, and went through the stock of the upper floors. They found easy access to the seventh, fifth, and fourth floors from the rear fire escape, but the sixth floor, where Charles J. Fishel has his shirtwaist business, was not entered so easily. The windows were fitted with burglar alarms, and the night visitors found it necessary to saw their way in from the floor above.

The rewards were in proportion to the trouble, for when the metal ceiling was opened finally to admit them, they found $5,000 worth of stock worth taking. They took it, and left very little for Mr. Fishel. The top floor yielded only a safe, and they could not get that open. The fifth floor, the quarters of the Hirsch Brothers' business in braids and trimmings, offered little to tempt them. But in the office of the Goldberg Printing Company, on the floor below, was a roomy safe, with the door open. The money, however, was in an inner compartment. They assailed that and failed, for their jimmy broke off half way in. They could not get it out, and they could not open the safe.

Their irritation could have been little greater than that of the office force when it arrived in the morning. The clerks could not get the jimmy out, and they could not get the safe open. It finally took a safe expert to do that.

PLAN DELICATESSEN BILL.

Dealers Purpose to Take Their Troubles to the Legislature.

As an outcome of Mayor Gaynor's stand against the indiscriminate Sunday closing of the delicatessen stores of the city, only five summonses were served to delicatessen shop keepers by the police last Sunday, as compared with 150 the Sunday previous. Four of the men, when they appeared in court, were dismissed. One was fined $5. The delicatessen men, however, are not satisfied with this situation, and at a meeting of the Delicatessen Dealers' Association last night in Mozart Hall, 328 East Eighty-sixth Street, it was announced that a bill to set forth the right to open Sundays would be introduced in Albany at the next session of the Legislature.

It was argued that such a bill was needed because of the situation that arose in two different Magistrates' Courts as a result of last Sunday's proceedings. In the court where four of the defendants were arraigned, the Magistrate dismissed the cases on the ground that there had been no violation of law. A. Martin Pietzsch, President of the Delicatessen Dealers' Association, who has a store at 2,344 Second Avenue, was fined in another court, even though he was not charged with selling uncooked or unprepared food. The association paid Mr. Pietzsch's fine, but the case was appealed.

You Need a Tuxedo

Every man needs a Tuxedo suit—the happy medium between ultra-formal evening clothes and the work-a-day sack.

It fills in gaps on social occasions that otherwise would be missed—because of a lack of clothes more suitable than a sack suit and yet without the strictness of silk-hatted full dress.

We will make your Tuxedo suit at a price that perhaps you did not dream possible—and it will have all the finesse and style that distinguish perfect dress garments.

Special Price Tuxedo Suits To Order $30

Fine undressed English Worsted or German Drape silk lined throughout with superfine satin de chine.

Your Tuxedo should be made by us—if you want the true refinement that bespeaks the well-dressed man.

A Pat On the Back

YESTERDAY the Advertising Man was "at home."
He had one caller that was particularly welcome.
This gentleman came in and said: "I want to congratulate you on your advertising. It sounds like your merchandise—square and honest.
"I know what I am talking about for I have read your advertising for a long while, and I have also worn your Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothes. I know that every word you have said about them is the absolute truth. You must be doing a fine business with such advertising backed up by such splendid merchandise."
"Yes," said the advertising man, "we are. More and more men are wearing Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothes each year. But we are not content to stop. We want a greater patronage than we have, and we wish that everyone who reads our advertising would give us a trial the way you did and find out just how square the merchandise is."
"They ought to do so," said our caller. "I know they would be convinced."
Now then, sir, why don't you do what our caller did?
Give us a chance. Let us show you.

A Chance to Buy at Wholesale Cost
$30 Suits and Overcoats at $15
One wholesale customer is disappointed—but I don't care, because it means that 375 retail customers will be benefited. My wholesale department was late in delivering an order for 375 Overcoats and Suits to a Western dealer, and he canceled the order.
These garments are now in my retail stock and I am offering them at actually less than the wholesale price. They will go to you minus the dealer's added profit.
$30 Overcoats and Suits, $15
It's a wonderful opportunity for you. The styles are identical with those of the choicest grades to be found at the best clothiers. There is a variety of Overcoats embracing the double breasted with belted backs; single breasted convertible collars, with or without belts. Chinchillas that are in the favor of most up-to-date dressers, and as close seconds in popularity we offer those nobby Scotch woolens with plaid backs. There are conservative coats with velvet collars and self collars that look stylish on any type of man at any time. Suits are plentiful in all popular colors and in styles that lean towards the English and conservative effects.
Every garment was made for my Western customer, and was to be sold by him at $30. My advice is to come in at once and get one at $15, because they won't last long.
